* 776 Bella Coola knows of his existence.

Another supernatural craft is that of Winwina.[17] It, too, [575] brings salmon and berries from their home in the extreme west. Knowledge of this canoe is limited to certain families who own stories connected with it, and it likewise serves as patron for kusiut dancers. Although both Noākxnum and Winwina can [761] easily destroy human beings, they usually pay no attention to them, and have even been known to bestow supernatural power. Winwina will be described in greater detail in connection with kusiut dances.

The third canoe is termed Winās di Sā·lldjo·ts, "The War-Party of the Tide," or Winās di Qala, "The War-Party of the Ocean." Its home is among small islands in the ocean. It is a large canoe, manned by invisible submarine beings, who are able to drive it at tremendous speed wherever they wish. The members of the crew are not in themselves dangerous, but the craft is greatly feared because it always transports Sxlo·xl'. This supernatural creature is about the size of a seal, brown in colour, and of jelly-like substance; it lies in the boat immediately aft of the place from which water is bailed and constantly rolls to and fro, like an animated mass of repulsive jelly. Poison is constantly spreading from Sxlo·xl', and anyone placed in the canoe soon becomes weak, begins to shake like Sxlo·xl', and presently dies. This canoe is a source of danger to those with whom it may come in contact, and an even greater peril indirectly. The poison emanating from 773 Sxlo·xl' kills clams and mussels in the vicinity and renders
* 776 them unfit for food. In some cases they die at once, with ●825 open shells, and anyone finding them knows what has hap-761 pened and does not eat them, but in other cases they live for a considerable period though saturated with the venom. If [756] anyone eats these shellfish, he becomes flabby and jelly-like, and soon dies, unless a powerful shaman can conquer the
* 776 poison. Sometimes when a party is encamped on the shore 789

[17] Cf. Boas, p. 38.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 talons resembling, but larger than, those of an eagle. It has no tail. The great strength of these animals rests in the fact that their eyes revolve in their sockets, so that, when reversed, piercing beams shoot forth which strike senseless anyone on whom they fall. Having thus stunned its victim, the snuniq picks him up and stuffs him into a broad-mouthed basket, carried on the back. It is provided with spikes inclined inwards and downwards so that a person thrust within cannot climb out. Human beings are carried in this way to the beast's lair, a cave in the mountains, where they are devoured at leisure. Wolves always accompany snuniq; in fact, they [825] may almost be termed attendants upon them (see vol. II, chap. v). Like other supernatural creatures, snuniq are impervious [789] to most mortal weapons, but there is one method of overcoming them. If a hunter cut himself on the under side of his right leg so that the blood flows freely, and smears a bullet with this, it can kill a snuniq. Similar success is gained by biting the tongue and coating the bullet with blood so obtained.

Another animal which is rendered powerless by the same charm is the boqs. This beast somewhat resembles a man, its hands especially, and the region around the eyes being distinctly human. It walks on its hind legs, in a stooping posture, its long arms swinging below the knees; in height it is rather less than the average man. The entire body, except the face, is covered with long hair, the growth being most profuse on the chest which is large, corresponding to the great strength of the animal. The most peculiar feature of the animal is its penis, which is so long that it must be rolled up and carried in the arms when the creature is walking; it terrifies its enemies by striking tree-trunks and breaking branches with its un-539 coiled organ. It is said that a woman was once drawing water
* 776 at the edge of a stream when a boqs, concealed on the other shore, extended its penis under the water to the further bank and held intercourse with her. The contact rendered her powerless, as if turned to stone; she could neither flee nor remove the organ. Her companions tried unsuccessfully to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
776 *

cut the organ until one of them brought a salalberry leaf, whereupon the monster, dreading its razor-like edge, withdrew.

The following stories illustrate, better than any description, the attitude of the Bella Coola towards these animals.

Not many years ago a certain Qak'lis was encamped with his wife and child in the Bay of the Thousand Islands, Ałtukwłáksv·s, about two miles above Namu, one of the haunts of boqs. He heard a number of the creatures in the forest behind him and seized his gun, at the same time calling out to them to go away. Instead, the breaking of branches and beating upon tree-trunks came nearer. Becoming alarmed, he called out once more: "Go away, or you shall feel my power." They still approached and Qak'lis fired in the direction of the sounds. There followed a wild commotion in the forest, roars, grunts, pounding, and the breaking of branches. The hunter, now thoroughly alarmed, told his wife and child to embark in the canoe while he covered their retreat with his gun. He followed them without molestation, and anchored his craft not far from shore. The boqs could be heard plainly as they rushed to and fro on the beach, but only the vague outlines of their forms were visible in the darkness. Presently, though there was no wind, the canoe began to roll as if in a heavy sea. Qak'lis decided to flee to Restoration Bay, but before he had gone far his paddle struck the bottom, although he was in mid-channel. Looking up, he saw that the mountains were higher than usual; the boqs had, by their supernatural power, raised the whole area so that the water had been almost entirely drained away. They are the only supernatural beings with this power. Qak'lis jumped overboard into water which reached only to his knees, and towed his canoe to Restoration Bay, the boqs following him along the shore.[19] [823]

This is not the only occasion on which boqs have appeared near Restoration Bay. Within the life-time of the father of an informant, a chief set out with some friends from Kwatna, bound for Namu. They travelled overland to Restoration Bay, thence by canoe, making the journey without incident. When returning, they decided to gather clams on the rocky point of the bay. As the craft shot around the tip of the promontory, they saw a boqs gathering shell-fish. The paddlers backed their canoe behind some rocks whence they could

[19]One of the features which the Bella Coola consider most surprising about this incident is that he did not tread upon the fish which must have been driven into the shallows. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

been frightened at any time but nightfall increased their fears. 776*
Their dogs heard the sound and howled in dread. The woman 789 threw on their fire several soiled blankets, her only pair of shoes, and some dry salmon, which all supernatural beings [825] abhor. Then she and her husband fled home, waving lanterns to and fro and firing musket shots in all directions. The birds did not follow them, but they considered themselves fortunate to reach Bella Coola unmolested.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural 776* animals just described are fairly exact; they know their appearance, what to expect, and what to do if one is encountered. In addition to these, they assume the existence of monsters of indefinite form which they term snusɣ. Any supernatural creature, a bāhnk' for example, is spoken of as a snusɣ in [184] general, not specific, classification. Consequently, what one Bella Coola may describe as a snusɣ is given a distinctive name by someone else with wider knowledge. As far as could be learnt, there is no designation other than snusɣ for creatures [825] which move from the ocean in April to clear the way for salmon, and spend the summer in the lakes of the interior, or beneath the ice of glaciers. They can assume various forms, sometimes even human, though they usually appear as giant, hairless, bear-like creatures with short legs and brown skin. Their eyes are large, round, and glass-like. In whatever form these crea- 761
tures may appear, they are almost certain to bring disaster to 776*
the beholder. One of the haunts of snusɣ is beneath the glacier on Mount Oqwan·i, behind the small mountain which rises [778] behind Qomqo·ts, on the south side of the Bella Coola River about half a mile from the sea. It is said that only a few years ago a white man, having heard of these creatures, went to that place with a number of Bella Coola. All the latter were able to hear the roaring of the beasts, louder than the whistle of a steamer, but the white man seemed deaf to it, though the power of the snusɣ had affected him, for he died on the way back to the village.

Other snusɣ are said to live near Kimsquit. The father of [778]

l:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

kill him. The youth, learning of this decision, concluded that he might as well face the unknown peril of the lake as the certain death to be meted out by his fellows, so he asked them to allow him to go swimming in the lake to prove that something dangerous was there. They granted that request, as well as a further one, that he be sewn up in a tight-fitting suit of caribou-skin, and armed with a knife. 539 776*

"Now come with me," he said to his fellow-villagers when he was ready.

They waited on the shore while he swam out into the lake singing. Presently the crackling and sucking sound was heard, and soon the spectators were forced to clutch tree-trunks to keep themselves from being drawn into the lake, while their legs were blown out horizontally as the youth's had been on the previous occasion. When the wind subsided the swimmer had vanished.

He had been sucked into the stomach of a sḱāmtsk without being killed. Groping around, he found the corpse of the chief's son from which he cut the belt and put it on himself. Then he made his way to the neck of the monster, cut a hole through it, and dived out. The surface was so far up that he was at his last gasp when his head rose above it. He swam ashore and the evidence of the belt confirmed his story. The carcass of the sḱāmtsk floated to the surface not long afterwards.

In addition to the anthropomorphic beings already described as resident beneath the surface of the ocean, supernatural animal monsters also dwell there. One of the most dreaded is the kdxta, which suck wooden objects down to the bottom of the sea. It resembles pitch, and when once it comes in contact with a canoe, it cannot be removed. The Bella Coola attribute supernatural power to the octopus also, thus increasing the dread with which the animal would be regarded in any case. They believe that it is fond of gum and frequently comes to land to obtain it. It is said that the gum is never voided, but remains in a suck within the creature's stomach. One informant stated that within his mother's lifetime, a man walking near Tāl·ie heard a smacking sound, like someone chewing noisily. He knew what must be the cause, but idly decided to investigate. It was an octopus. The beast was clambering down from the tree, using two of its arms to help it. Not realizing his danger, the man allowed himself to be 776* [825] 539 776*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 seized and carried to the shore. He had thought that it would
* 776 be easy to free himself, but he found it impossible and was carried under the sea. He bit frantically at the enfolding arms, until he succeeded in freeing his own, with which he pushed up the beak of the octopus, thus killing it. He rose to the surface and returned home none the worse.

● [825] The Bella Coola do not profess to know all the animals of the world; and if they see a strange one, they assume it to be one known to their ancestors though unfamiliar to them.
539 Since any unknown animal is considered to have supernatural 761 power, due care must be exercised when one is seen. The fol-
* 776 lowing incident illustrates this point.

825 The mother's brother of an informant worked for some thirty years for a white man in Victoria. His employer once sent him to see a turtle which was confined in a pool in a basement preparatory to being killed for a banquet. As soon as he saw it, he said:

"My parents in Bella Coola told me of such a creature."

A few days before Christmas the turtle was cut up and displayed on four platters in the window of the store; the Bella Coola saw it, and thus learned that it had been killed. The same night a sore appeared on his wrist, and by the next day it was large and running. He said to his employer:

"In a few days I will be dead. Do not grieve for me. The sight of such supernatural creatures is too powerful for Indians; I survived one experience, but twice has been too much for me and I will die."

His employer wisely sent him to a white doctor who cured him, although the scar remained. Years later the man returned to Bella Coola where he displayed the mark as proof of his story. A few weeks later he died, and the Bella Coola are firmly convinced that his death was due to his having seen the turtle many years before.

* 776 Although the forests of British Columbia abound with 789 supernatural animals of enormous power, the attitude of the [781] Bella Coola hunter who penetrates into lonely places is not one of constant fear. It is true that he may meet danger at any turn, but danger is part and parcel of human life, and he is by no means defenceless. He dreads the powers possessed by creatures of another plane, but they for their part dread certain human objects. Clothing which has been worn for so long that it has become steeped with the emanations of its human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a smnuq, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings.[29]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind.

776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Ałquntäm created men and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural

776* 825 773

[29]This matter will be described more fully in connection with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xi.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 forefathers of the Bella Coola had the ability to talk with
● 825 animals and birds. The men of today, who realize that such [773] intercourse is not now possible, assume that they have degenerated from the golden age of their first ancestors. On the other hand, they see no reason to believe that beasts have undergone a similar change, and take it for granted that they have continued in the supernatural, or semi-supernatural state in which they were created by Ałquntām. It is true that man is stronger than most animals, but that does not affect the attitude with which the latter are regarded, for supernatural and powerful are not synonymous terms. Ałquntām decreed that they should serve as food for mankind, and they have since obeyed his command, but the Bella Coola do not consider themselves undisputed lords of creation. They fear snusx̣, snuniq, and other creatures of great power, but they know how to avoid them; similarly, deer and mountain goats fear men, but they are not entirely defenceless, because their speed and agility give them advantages corresponding to those of men in combat with beasts stronger than themselves. All living creatures use the weapons with which they are equipped. For example, when a mountain goat eludes a hunter by scaling a precipice too steep for its pursuer, the latter considers it has escaped through supernatural climbing ability; whereas the goat has merely used the power granted by Ałquntām. Like-[789] wise, when a snusx̣ or a snuniq is outwitted by the use of soiled clothing or smoked salmon roe, the means, unnatural to it, are natural to the human being employing them. Men and animals alike regard each other's weapons as supernatural.

In consequence of these beliefs, the attitude of the Bella Coola towards animals is fundamentally different from that of white men. They regard them as possessing human mentality, and even the ability to assume human form if they so desire. In fact, they believe that animals merely appear to them in the shape of beasts, but can change to human, or other form and behave accordingly whenever they wish to do [756] so. The degeneration of mankind has made it impossible for

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

men to see these transformed beings habitually, but even now, 776* or at any rate until a few years ago, shamans were able to lift 825● the intervening veil. From accounts given by those who have had such experience, the Bella Coola believe that Ałquntäm [756] gave to birds and animals, as well as to humans, the boon of [773] fire, and it is only the unworthiness of men that makes them unable to see the smoke rising from the houses of different creatures. In former times, fortunate hunters were able to do so, and consequently had phenomenal success. The smoke that ascends from the fires of different animals corresponds in colour to that of its owner; a mountain goat's is white, a beaver's, black, a squirrel's, red, a wolf's, gray, and so on.
When a goat stamps the earth on a mountain, it rings hollow, [823] as indeed it is to those animals, for their home is within; and when a hunter loses his quarry entirely, it is because the latter has entered its house. Shamans are sometimes able to hear [756] the gatherings of animals under the peaks. Like human beings, they dance to the accompaniment of music, and in all respects behave like them. They have their times of joy and sorrow, of success and failure. When ill they are cured by their own shamans, grizzly bear, sminq, and wolverine; these three also dance to welcome the dead. All animals and birds are like brothers, able to converse with each other and living harmoniously together in that other part of their life which only shamans have seen. Porcupine is the oldest, and a hunter [224] always tries to kill one before passing to more important prey.
The animals know about the actions of human beings and [784] show their aversion to certain habits by refusing to allow themselves to be seen by anyone practising them. For example, they do not like people to drink water in which dog salmon [224] have been soaked, and no hunter would dream of partaking of that food. Bella Coola mythology is full of accounts of human [773] beings who, with supernatural aid, were able to penetrate to [538] the homes of animals. Tales of this type would be unintelligible without understanding the attitude of the people to the animal and bird kingdoms.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 776 ●825 845 Fish, too, are regarded in the same light. Indeed, there is a particularly close affinity between men and salmon, for twins are born through the instrumentality of the latter. Just how this occurs no Bella Coola knows, but a twin and salmon are regarded almost as brothers. In days when men were more powerful than now, a twin was especially liked by animals. Through his connection with salmon, a ko'la (the term applied to a twin associated with a salmon) could understand the speech of birds, animals, and fish. In many instances he could also assume salmon form at will.

* 776 787 825 In view of beliefs of this kind it is not surprising that the Bella Coola attribute great powers even to beasts well known to them. In the story recorded in vol. I, p. 55, the War-Party of the Tides was summoned by the speaking of a dog. A belief persists that danger is always present when a dog acts in an unusual way, though this can be avoided by killing it at once. In July, 1922, a visit was made to an elderly Bella Coola early one morning. The man was in a state of absolute terror. The preceding night he had locked his pet dog outside his house to give warning if anyone approached, but when he awoke in the morning, it was curled up asleep as usual at the foot of his bed. There was no possible hole through which it could have entered, so it seemed to the owner that his dog must have transformed itself into some minute animal and made its way beneath the door. The only other explanation was that its master, hearing in his sleep the whimpering of his pet, had got out of bed to let it in, without remembering that he had done so. To the writer this seemed the probable explanation, especially when the old man admitted that he had been in the habit of walking in his sleep in his younger days, but the Bella Coola was not satisfied. He could not decide whether or not to kill the dog, a great favourite, but finally decided not to do so. The incident was mentioned to another informant, who was greatly worried and assumed it to be an omen of death to the dog's master. His only comfort lay in the fact that the animal had not spoken, a sure intimation of insanity and death unless it is killed immediately. 776* 787

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A few years ago a dog gave warning to its master by placing its paws on his shoulders as he sat on the ground, and howling over his head. Such unusual behaviour should have convinced him of the necessity of killing his pet to avert some calamity, but he paid no attention to it. A few days later, it seemed to him that he saw the face of a friend appear at an uncurtained upper window where no human being could be. The next morning he found an axe, which he had long lost and supposed stolen, imbedded far up in a tree near his house. These three incidents all presaged disaster, and a few days later he shot and killed himself when crazed by drink. 825 [762]

The actions of wild animals are considered even more important. Not many years ago a famous Kimsquit hunter saw a bear and attempted to shoot it. He raised his musket and took careful aim, but was prevented from pulling the trigger. This should have warned him of the potency of the animal, and of the wisdom of avoiding the spot in future. The bear moved away without molesting him, but exactly one year later he was killed by a mountain goat at precisely the same place. No one knows which supernatural being had chosen to assume two forms in that locality.

The Bella Coola believe that animals, being supernatural, have powers and abilities which they conceal from the white man. Wolves do not kill their prey with their fangs, but with bird arrows which shamans alone can see; beaver do not cut with their teeth, but with crook-handled adzes. Even more striking is the virility of yearling mountain goats. An old Bella Coola described how he and another man were once hunting goats. His partner killed a fat yearling, which they laid on its back and skinned. The killer was about to dismember it, when the animal began to kick. First it shook one hind leg, then the other, then in succession each fore-leg, and lastly its head. Then the goat stood up and gave itself a shake, which caused the skin to return to its proper position, 776* 825 and leapt away apparently uninjured. The Bella Coola say that yearling goats have very strong spirits (I, p. 94) which make possible such actions.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Though generally callous with regard to the sufferings of animals, the Bella Coola are usually careful not to kill more than they need; and knowledge of the supernatural power possessed by animals sometimes leads men to treat them with great consideration. For example, if a bull-head is caught in an olachen net in the river, the fisherman throws it back into the water, saying:

"I have saved you; please do the same for me."

The following incident, believed without question by the Bella Coola, shows the manner in which bull-heads help those who have often befriended them. About 1880 a Kimsquit fisherman, Ăltakän·i, fell into a rapids where he was in great danger of drowning. A bull-head, seeing his plight and mindful of former help, increased his size and shoved Ăltakän·i ashore with its nose.

"I have saved you, mortal," said the bull-head, as he did so.

The ability to increase in size is not restricted to fish, but is shared by small mammals and reptiles. Lizards, for instance, four feet in length, are said to live permanently in a pond about seven miles below Kimsquit; they are termed qwalăs.

Toads, too, can aid mortals. If a man see a snake devouring one of them he will, if he is wise, kill the snake and say to the toad:

"Please help me when I am in difficulties."

A toad never forgets its obligations and if that man should fall into a river when the toad is near, the latter will grow large enough to drag him forth.

Snakes are regarded with aversion and disgust. This may be in part due to the belief that they cook for Ăltăt·iaistl (I, p. 49), but more because these reptiles enter the stomachs of human beings. The Bella Coola believe that snakes are the offspring of a supernatural Mother of Snakes, a mythical being of dread powers. The following story illustrates their beliefs

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

concerning the danger of near approach to this creature: 539

Ḱwilais was a man of mixed lineage, Kimsquit and Ṗa·s, near Newitte. With several companions he was gathering berries when he stepped into a hole and felt numerous tiny creatures crawling over his legs. Looking down, he saw that they were small snakes, that had just been hatched from a Mother of Snakes. He fled, terrified, pursued by the reptiles, which he managed to keep off to some extent by brushing behind him a branch of spiny swamp gooseberry, a known deterrent. When he had out-distanced the snakes he called his companions, told them of his adventure, and returned home. There he repeated the tale. Though Ḱwilais did not know it, many of the snakes had succeeded in entering his stomach. Presently he began to swell; his body became larger and larger until he was in danger of bursting. The reptiles within were breeding rapidly. Luckily, one of his fellow villagers knew the proper remedy. A raised bed was made for the sufferer about five feet from the ground where Ḱwilais stretched himself on a number of thorny branches, while his friends built a fire of devil's club and swamp gooseberry twigs so that he was fumigated in the smoke. Then, to give greater potency, they cast on the flames soiled clothing and pounded cedar-bark pads stained with menstrual blood; even this was of no avail, so finally a woman squeezed out into a vessel some of her menstrual blood which Ḱwilais drank. This killed the snakes. The patient began to vomit, emitting a mass of wriggling serpents, and at once began to grow thinner, soon regaining his normal condition. Had he not been able to eject the reptiles, he would have died.

776 * 825 ● 755 [789] [753] [841]

Ḱwilais was not the only one to have this unpleasant experience. Many others have suffered in the same way, but in no case has anyone been able to feel the snakes at the actual place or time of entry.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the power possessed by animals are clearly shown by their attitude with regard to killing them. Man is immortal, so are animals. Ālquntām decreed that beasts and birds should serve as food for mankind, but it is only their clothing, their worthless "blanket of flesh," as the Bella Coola express it, which they give to hunters. In the autumn leaves appear to die, but every spring they are reborn. Similarly, when an animal is slain, it merely discards its visible self while its spirit[21] ascends

825 775 224 [774]

[21] Xumsnots, see vol. I, p. 94.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825

[775] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to [774] earth again to reanimate a new body."* Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an [785] animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ashes across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves [183] *There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and eagles whom he invites to devour it. In so doing, he does not address them by their usual names, but calls Wolf, Alkin-i-gexnim, "The Devourer of Meat Which He Does Not Kill," that is, "The Biting Scavenger"; and Eagle, Asaikaiyuts-maxnim, "The Constant Eater," that is, "The One Who Eats before He Is Hungry." Next morning the flesh has been devoured and the hunter believes his guests have eaten it. Animals and birds, being supernatural, can hear the words of mortals and read their thoughts. The significance of these actions is that animals have the power to conceal themselves, so a hunter must gain their favour before he can hope to succeed. Belief in the efficacy of such customs as these is rapidly falling into decay and bear meat is now often eaten, but the skull is carefully placed in an evergreen tree near where the animal is slain, so that it may come back to life.

Fish, likewise, are immortal. In autumn the streams are choked with dead and dying salmon, but the Bella Coola know that they are not really dead, they have merely shed their worthless blankets in accordance with Alquntäm's decrees. At that season of the year he causes the rivers to rise so that they will sweep away these useless and outworn cloaks.

Although the salmon, from the kindness of their hearts, allow human beings to feast on their blankets, yet they have certain likes and dislikes which are carefully observed. From the time the first spring salmon appear (I, pp. 759-762) until the rising of the July moon, women are not allowed to eat them or to go near the river. Men may eat the flesh, but instead of throwing the bones to dogs, they carefully return them to the river saying:

"Please come back tomorrow."

If this is inconvenient, bones can be thrown into the woods with impunity.

Salmon, like men and animals, live a human-like existence in their homes far beneath the surface of the ocean. They lack and desire earthly objects, especially pounded cedar-bark (see Appendix A) to use as sponges for their children, so the Bella Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter connected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not affect his daily life. 211 424 773

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, skämtsk, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, susiutl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nuhnikta, the posts which stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form. The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. According to some accounts it was these posts which supported the first sky until it fell. 825 [776] * [772] [829] [772]

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly humorous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said: 424 779 825

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He recounted how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the [648]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

424 773 825 [556] Before leaving the subject of supernatural animals, a word must be said concerning the attitude of the Bella Coola to those in whose forms their first ancestors came to earth. If, for example, a man's first ancestor descended as a raven, this knowledge is a valuable possession of himself and his family. Indeed, the most treasured possessions of a Bella Coola are not the material objects collected by him through life, but the intangible rights wrapped up in his ancestral history. These are referred to under four names:

(1) Smaiusta, "Preserved Story"; the myth describing the coming to earth of a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(2) Kolelta, "What Was Sent Down"; the names and other possessions given by Ālquntām to a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(3) Tsāmātl, "Whence We Came"; the place to which a man's first ancestors came in the beginning of time, and the one from which they have since spread.

(4) Qwathunta.

Various smaiusta are recorded in vol. I, chap. VI, and the second and third terms are really part of the first, although to the Bella Coola they are psychologically distinct. Qwathunta is the word used for both the birds or animals chosen as cloaks by the first settlers, and also for creatures with which the early people came in contact. The nearest interpretation appears to be, "Crest." When a Bella Coola whose first ancestor came to earth as a raven portrays that bird, it serves as a visible mark of his intangible possession. In former days, if a man carved on stone so that his work and his name would never be forgotten, it was a qwatlnskam, a constant reminder of his greatness to generations then unborn. A qwathunta, therefore, combines the concept of memorial with that of crest, so that Bella Coola speak of the white man's memorials as qwathunta. In brief, a man regards the form assumed by his ancestor when coming to this earth as an emblem of the 424 773 825 211

1; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 nearest answer to the question replied that his crest was the 779 Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the 825 narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet 424 they have some importance in the realm of social life. The 773 portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy 825 chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a [532] design is impressed with the glories of the family history of [556] the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of [304] the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delineation is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed* with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his
000 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[171] [184] *It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal tribes but also the Carriers. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated themselves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches; in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back-room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material; the second and less common, by passing a string coated with the substance beneath [386] the skin. The dye was obtained from river stones which were baked for a long time and then ground into a powder. This keeps indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learnt, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said, half jocularly, that a man grows to resemble his ancestral cloak; 424 if, for example, one man's is the eagle, his hair turns white 773 early, whereas that of another with raven crest long preserves its blackness. More definite, is the use as a signal for attack, of 825 a whistle imitating the cry of the leader's bird or animal. [726] Finally, when a man whose crest is the raven hears one of these birds calling, he cries out:

"Hello, q̓watlʟntao [the vocative form], it is as you say."

This custom is probably due to a belief in the ability of ravens to bear news.

On the whole the attitude of the Bella Coola towards living examples of their crests does not differ from that of mingled respect and superiority with which they regard other birds and animals.

THE RAVEN

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning Raven differ so 773 fundamentally from those respecting other birds and animals, 776* that the subject must be treated separately. In the beginning 825 of time, when Älquntäm sent down the ancestors of the Bella Coola to this earth, he despatched Raven to be their guide and teacher. For this purpose Raven was given greater power than that granted to any other animal. He came to earth in avian form, then changed to a man, but his cloak did not float back to the land above as did those of the other first-comers. Instead, it remained in the world below where he could resume it at will. Älquntäm had instructed him to travel to all parts of the world, meaning the coast of British Columbia, in order to study the arts and crafts of the inhabitants and bring back to Bella Coola those which seemed desirable. On these explorations he used to assume raven form and set off in his canoe, Tokuki, which travelled without visible motive power at phenomenal speed Owing to the power that Älquntäm had given him, he could talk to the trees and the mountains, the birds, the animals, and the insects, as well as to the human beings he encountered on the coast.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 Raven, perhaps made conceited by this power, did not
* 776 always use it for good purposes. He learnt many new inven-
● 825 tions which he taught to the Bella Coola, but sometimes he [538] indulged in adventures of an obscene nature. In fact, he was often too "smart." The Bella Coola relate many tales concerning his exploits. These are all mere stories, such as can be told by anyone, and they fall into two classes. One comprises humorous anecdotes, describing how Raven tried to show off, to outwit other birds and animals, and his consequent discomfiture. These belong to the realm of mythology and are recorded in vol. II, chap. v. In addition, there are stories describing the inventions and boons obtained by Raven; these are given in detail here as the only satisfactory means of illustrating the attitude of the Bella Coola towards Raven.

The first Raven, to whom Ālquntām granted such power, is not regarded as a bird, but essentially as a superman, with the kindly characteristics of a human being, and the weakness of a conceited individual who is always trying to display his prowess. The ordinary word used for a raven is qwax, but [552] this first Raven is properly referred to by his titles as chief, Nowakila; Sānuximāxots, "The Light-Bringer"; Kilalxamxwis, "The Wise One"; Nu'oxwatlamnaix, "The Widener";[25] Qunqwnm uldidā sxem, "The Unlooser of Light";[26] Qax·āxwsila, Qwai·lils, and Qpwi. The Bella Coola do not explain what happened to this first Nowakila; he appears to have dropped out of existence, and his power has not been transmitted to his descendants, the ravens of today. They are regarded as birds, with but the slightest trace of their ancestor's greatness. The [829] Bella Coola know of the beliefs of the Kitkatla concerning Raven, and say that in the north he is esteemed only a little less than the supreme deity himself. But in Bella Coola the exploits of Raven are always considered to be due to the power given him by Ālquntām, whose assistant he was, although he delighted to show his own prowess by outwitting his maker.

[25] Because he is supposed to have widened rivers for several of the first settlers.
[26] Owing to the manner in which Raven is supposed to have unveiled the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Raven, blinded by his grief, did not believe him, and responded angrily: 539 776*

"No, youare not my son. Why do you lie to me? Get out of this house." 761

Disgusted at this reception, O'mistlmai obeyed. Just as he was passing through the doorway, Raven noticed the tattoo marks on his legs, and realized that, in spite of the change in his appearance, the visitor was really his son. He called on him to return, but O'mistlmai paid no attention to his father's entreaties and sped far away. Raven's grief was beyond expression, but he could do nothing to repair the damage he had done. If it had not been for Raven's mistake, all mortals would return to life four days after death. [304]

The above myth is widely known among the Bella Coola, and is supposed to be historically accurate. At the same time, few people allow it to influence their thoughts with regard to death or its causes. It is a fact, but one that belongs to the realm of ancient history rather than to everyday experience. When a Bella Coola dies, his relatives, though they know that his death is due to the folly of Raven, tacitly overlook this, and do not feel bitterly towards Raven. Bella Coola beliefs and theology are not systematized, hence it is quite possible for a person to realize a certain fact, such as the cause of death, and yet disregard it entirely. Considering that absolute contradictions can be believed simultaneously, it is not difficult to picture the mental attitude of people who believe, and at the same time disregard their belief. 771 761 776*

One of Raven's spectacular, and at the same time, beneficial exploits was the bringing of sockeye salmon to the Bella Coola River.[37] 539 825

In the beginning of time, no sockeye salmon inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to supply them. First he tried making wooden fish and throwing them into the water, but though he could animate them, they always died after jumping a few times. The reason for his failure, though he did not know it, was because he had omitted the small bone [774]

[37]This is an example of conflicting beliefs. In addition to assuming that salmon were sent down by Alqunstm to furnish food for mankind, and that Raven supplied them in the beginning of time, the Bella Coola also believe that they are brought each year both by Nedkynum and Winwina. [771]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539
825
774
772

at the back of the neck; this is called nulkälxita by the Bella Coola and it is thought to be especially important since the spirit (I, p. 94) is located there. Somewhat discouraged by his lack of success, Raven sat holding his head in his hands, pondering. Finally, he decided that he would have to visit Mitältawa, the land of the salmon far beyond the western ocean.

His self-propelling canoe, Tobunkl, was soon made ready and Raven invited Mouse, a young woman, to accompany him. The two travelled without incident till they came to the flat land where the salmon had their homes. On the beach were myriads of canoes, each in reality the skin of a sockeye salmon. Raven had instructed Mouse to remain in his canoe, so when the sockeye salmon chief invited the two to his house only Raven accepted, though Mouse was urged most courteously to accompany him. Raven was conducted to the house, where his host threw his own daughter into the river. She changed into a sockeye salmon and swam to the beach; some of her father's servants cut her up and brought her to the house where she was cooked. The meal was set before the guest whom the chief instructed not to eat any of the bones. As he ate, Raven examined the salmon very carefully to see what had been lacking in his model, and soon discovered it to be the thin bone, shaped like a maple leaf, at the back of the neck. Seizing an opportunity when no one was looking, Raven secreted this bone against the palate of his mouth. When the meal was over and the guest had tied what was left of the food into a mat, someone collected all the bones and threw them into the river. Forthwith they became a sockeye salmon, which swam towards the shore. But after an instant, the fish began to behave peculiarly, swimming around madly in circles, and jumping in an aimless manner. Everyone agreed that a bone must have been lost, and they searched the house for it without success. They also examined Raven. Finally, one man thought of investigating the guest's mouth where they found the missing bone.

"Oh," said Raven, lying: "I did not know it was there."

As soon as the bone was thrown into the river the sockeye salmon became normal and swam quietly to the beach where it changed into the chief's daughter once more.

When the time came to leave, Raven asked the chief to tell his daughter to take his bundle of food to his canoe for him. Meanwhile Mouse had carried out Raven's instructions, which were to gnaw a hole in each of the sockeye salmon canoes. Raven entered Tobunkl before taking the parcel from the girl, and as he stepped in, the canoe was forced a little distance from the land so that she waded into the water to hand it to him. As she did so, he backed his canoe further out until she had to follow him into water up to her waist. Then Raven suddenly grasped her under the arms, hauled her into his craft, and fled. The sockeye salmon men cried out in anger and leapt into their canoes for pursuit, but one by one they sank; Mouse had done her work well. For a time the chase was close; in fact, the sockeye salmon nearly caught Tobunkl in North Bentinck Arm, but as danger threatened, Raven seized a pole and delivered several vigorous thrusts which sent the canoe beyond the reach of the already sinking pursuers. The gashes made in the rocks by his shoves are still visible near the site of the Bella Coola Cannery, as well as the pole which he threw ashore when he had finished with it; it became petrified and can still be seen immediately behind the manager's house. At the south of the Bella Coola River, Raven threw the chief's daughter into the water. Her descendants are the sockeye salmon which visit that stream; and it is due to his failure to capture more than one, that so few sockeyes come to this river.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 825 [778]

Another version of this myth was collected from a Kimsquit man.

It describes how Raven went alone in Tobunkl to the land of the salmon, in the guise of an old man. He was courteously received at the home of Skatpts, chief of the salmon, who gave him a meal of that fish. Raven carefully watched to ascertain what he had omitted from his wooden model, and when he found out that it was the bone at the back of the neck, he secreted one in the palate of his mouth. Presently one of the salmon women became ill, and Skatpts said:

"Old man, you have hidden a bone."

The salmon searched Raven, but failed to find what he had hidden, and he was able to return to Kimsquit with it. He added this bone to one of his models, and it was at once able to swim strongly; in fact, it became a real salmon.

This fish was the ancestor of all steel-head salmon, which are still called Samsamikdimut di Qwax, "The Salmon-like Fish of Raven." They are not considered as valuable for food as other salmon. [262]

Another exploit accredited to Raven in the beginning of time was the bringing of herring to Kimsquit.

None of these fish then inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to bring them to increase the food supplies of his people. A gull happened to catch a single herring far from shore and brought it to Raven, who smeared Tobunkl with its scales. Then he set out for the land of the herring beyond the western ocean. On arriving, Raven went to the home [772]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 825 of a woman, Sekakmăn·a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a meal, Raven lied to his hostess by telling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Sekakmăn·a doubted the story and told one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful at his home, some of the scales would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth looked inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Sekakmăn·a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and threw his spoil into the water as he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish increased so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

262 824 539 One of the foods regarded by the Bella Coola as a luxury is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Sluxlekwailx, a mountain in the Carrier country above Burnt Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he wanted to keep these for food for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let him out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it in his flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Sluxlekwailx was very angry, but could do nothing.

773 Though Ăłquntăm created the world, he did not make it perfect nor equip it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and tremendous power, was always seeking ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate [778 823] himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of a friend. Raven determined to supply this want for the benefit of the Kimsquit people. Accordingly he used a natural stone depression near the village as his chamber-pot, and the liquid reflected faces clearly. Ever since, any liquid, even rain-water, placed in that depression acts as a reflector. The place is called Ânilxsaix, "Where People Go," and it has been used as a mirror by the Kimsquit people and their guests for many generations. In this way, the renown of Raven spread to foreigners visiting Kimsquit. Another survival of this construction is the name Nusqalät·a, "Chamber-Pot," commonly applied as a nickname to the small daughters of Kimsquit chiefs. 773 778 823 [551]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One of Raven's inventions was the making of nettle-fibre olachen nets, an art which he taught spiders as well as men. In the beginning of time, Raven told two men to make a net according to a pattern which he showed them, and gave them some fibre. It was not sufficient, and when the workers asked for more, Raven told them to draw it from their own intestines. This they did, and ever since spiders have had the same ability. Another story describes how Raven saw an olachen net being made in one of the distant villages which he visited during his travels, learnt the details of its manufacture, and taught the Bella Coola on his return home. 773 [227] [825]

Many of Raven's exploits are well known, although not embodied in elaborate myths. For example, it is believed that in the beginning of time the ocean was to the east of Bella Coola and the land to the west. Drownings were frequent, so Raven altered the relative positions of land and sea. Most ocean dwellers followed the sea to its new home, but a number of mussels remained near their human friends. They are still to be found in the upper valley of Bella Coola River. These shell-fish, which are probably freshwater mussels, are said to be identical with those of the ocean, and are called by the same name. This is always mentioned as proof of the former presence of salt water in the upper Bella Coola valley. The occurrence of the shell-fish may be the origin of this theory. It might also be mentioned that the Bella Coola believe that a few years 773 823 [825] instructed people about the significance of death omens; it was Raven who showed them the use of slings; and it was Raven who constructed secluded caves and ledges to serve as meeting-places for chiefs. 773 [622] [823]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In brief, the Bella Coola regard Raven as an explorer, teacher, and inventor, whose power, obtained from Ałquntäm, enabled him to construct and outwit his maker, but not to create. Much of his work was for the good of mankind, but much was evil and malicious, an aspect which belongs to mythology. Essentially human, Raven could have been included among anthropomorphic, as well as among zoomorphic beings. He differs from most of the supernatural ones in belonging entirely to the past, as his descendants have none of the first Raven's power. It is doubtful whether he still exists, but in any case he has long since ceased to take any interest in the affairs of the Bella Coola, who consider him only as a figure of mythology and ancient history. 773 776 [825]

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS OF THE VEGETABLE AND MINERAL KINGDOMS

Bella Coola beliefs concerning anthropomorphic and zoomorphic beings are relatively clear and exact; their appearance is known, their powers and functions recognized. The supernatural attributes of trees and plants are less definite. Ałquntäm created the former in the beginning of time, and they were consequently able to talk and act like human beings at that distant period. Owing to the degeneration of man, mortals are no longer able to converse with trees, although the latter can still understand our remarks. In a vague way, the Bella Coola continue to think of trees as having human personalities, but so little is known of their powers, and they enter so seldom into contact or conflict with mortals, that they are practically ignored. 776 824

In an equally vague manner, Nature is regarded as a Mother, giving birth to the trees and plants. One of the kusiut dances portrays this birth of the flowers every spring (II, p. 196). [535] [575]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

nection of these with one another and with the spirit, the mental director of the life, is a matter of advanced Bella Coola theology on which opinions differ. Only men of philosophical temperament even hazard an opinion on such matters, which are beyond the realm of daily routine. 761

When a man dies, his life leaves his body and the useless flesh begins to decay. At the same time the life is freed to travel as an intangible wraith, having the form and appearance of its dead owner. It visits all the places where he had been in the habit of going during life, irrespective of their distance from the scene of death. Sometimes it journeys to the locality where, in a dream, the mother of the deceased received her first intimation of pregnancy (I, p. 615). It wants to see former friends and sometimes makes its presence known to them by whistling. A person who hears this sound is saddened by the realization that one of his associates has passed away in some distant place. At other times, a man merely senses its presence and feels frightened without hearing or seeing anything to account for it. Very rarely, a dead person's life speaks to a dearly loved friend to inform him of his loss. During the existence of the body, spirit and life are closely associated, and the former sometimes accompanies the latter on its round of farewell visits before ascending to Nusmät·a. 761 775 [774]

After four days the life descends to the land below where it lives forever as a ghost. Some believe that it is the shadow which assumes this form, but the seeming contradiction is relatively unimportant since the life is essentially shadow-like. Ghosts have already been described in connection with supernatural bodies, and further information will be found in vol. I, chap. VIII.

At death, when the life as a whole becomes a ghost, its constituent parts likewise undergo transformation. The one situated in the feet remains with the corpse and disintegrates; that located in the legs enters a wolf and nothing more is known of its fate; no one knows what happens to the one situated in the body. The part in the throat, including the voice, enters [827] [825] [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

761 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree
775 behind Nusmät·a. This element of a dead person occasionally 825 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the fol-[539] lowing story.
[827]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am so-and-so," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

761 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

773 In the beginning of time, when Ăkquntăm sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nusmät·a posts emblazoned with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously[21] either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.[22] As he scours himself, he asks Mınakais to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Älquntäm actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Mınakais has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Mınakais," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Mınakais," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [224] [726] [785]

[21] Urine was formerly used for washing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance; indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently. [515]

[22] The Bella Coola state that stones are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-smoothed river pebble. [296] [823] [825]

I: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Mınakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Ałquntäm, under the name of Mınakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Mınakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
●825 as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qwax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on [291] many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any 424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole 821 community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [261] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire titbits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"Wai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Mesatche Nose, [133]
[756]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the point between Labouchere Channel and Bentinck Arm, there is danger from treacherous currents, so, when a shaman passes either of these places, he lays some food on the water and puffs eagle down into the air as he asks for help. If no shaman is in the canoe, this is done by the captain. 782 [133] [502] [756]

The being to whom offerings are most commonly made is Ṫlitcäplilän·a, the supernatural woman who cures the sick and gives power to shamans. Whenever a hunter kills an edible animal in the forest, he cuts off four pieces of flesh and throws them into his fire to gain her goodwill. Long, long ago, Ṫlitcäplilän·a appeared to a hunter, seized some of his quarry, and told him of her wishes with regard to presents; these have since been obeyed by wise people. Similarly, the relatives of a man absent in the mountains or at sea throw scraps of food on the fire and ask the protection of Ṫlitcäplilän·a for the one in danger. In this case, it is clear that objects thrown into flames are received and appreciated by Ṫlitcäplilän·a. [776] [224] [773]

Minakais, although usually propitiated by prayer, is also given presents. Frequently, when a man is praying, he accompanies his words by blowing up into the air small particles of eagle down. Prayers in connection with the departure of war or hunting expeditions have already been mentioned, but before starting on any journey by canoe, the captain is careful to pray and to throw upon the water four pieces of red, and four of yellow cedar-bark. The blowing upwards of eagle down is a common accompaniment to all kinds of prayers, but, if none is available, cedar-bark can be used equally satisfactorily. If possible, this is cast on the surface of water, otherwise into a fire, as a request is being made. The Bella Coola do not believe that such presents are actually used and considered valuable by Ałquntäm, but they emphasize and accompany the vocal prayer, and demonstrate the petitioner's sincerity. [776] [484] [824] [825]

Ghosts, on the other hand, depend almost entirely on presents given them by mortals, since food is not abundant in the land below. The relatives of a dead person always throw 775 782

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 who, in turn, would pass on the request so that it might reach each 831 member of the party. Not only is it contrary to custom for a commoner 785 to hold intercourse with a chief's wife, but it is unknown for a man to ask another to sleep with his wife, so the youth was surprised and rather [837] frightened. However, he acceded to the request, passed on the instructions, and washed. As he was bathing, a seal appeared in the surf beside [622] him, and he was able to kill it easily. Each in turn behaved in the same manner, washed, and then killed a seal. Next morning, when the chief returned he was delighted that all had turned out in accordance with his hopes. At the same time the wind dropped so that the party was able to return home.

831 The power which had brought the seals within reach of the 785 men had been engendered in their own bodies by these ritual acts after a rather lengthy period of continence. The Bella Coola believe that such a procedure always increases their strength and ability, therefore giving them a better chance to gain favour from supernatural beings, and to take advantage of opportunities offered. Hunters in particular are careful with [224] regard to their marital life since animals know their acts and 825 thoughts, and hide from one who has not made himself "clean" [783] by continence, its termination, and bathing. Sxetsta consists of these three elements, but since continence is the most prominent feature, the term may be translated as "ceremonial chastity."

In its simplest form this comprises merely the three elements already mentioned. The longer the continence, the greater the power engendered by its termination. A man who has practised abstinence for a year has such strength within himself that almost any good fortune may occur, and cases are known in which it has been carried out for even longer periods. More often, an individual practises ceremonial chas-[184] tity in accordance with a family tradition. One old man gave the following recipe and was most emphatic that it always 224 brought success in hunting and fishing; he added that on the 785 two occasions he had tried it, he had brought back a phenomenal number of skins.

A person planning to set out on an expedition for any purpose should remain continent for several nights to increase his generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[34] is to observe continence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[35] as pos-

[34]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.

[35]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 785 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals [278] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the [783] river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, s·m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533
556 *
575
[535]

capped by the mask. If the tutwinam represents Wasp[14] or Grizzly Bear, he does not make a circuit and a fluent sisaok explains that to do so would be unsafe owing to the ferocity of these animals. When the song is ended, the figure passes into the back-room. After a short interval it reappears, recrosses the house, and leaves by the front door, to the accompaniment of increased whistling.

A few myths embody two tutwinam. In this case, a second figure presently enters and the same ritual is repeated for a second song. This usually differs, musically, from the first, being in three parts and with even more rapid time. More often, the second song is merely beaten out by the singers without the appearance of a tutwinam to supply an obvious source.

556 *
575

This is the normal, but not the only practice with regard to a tutwinam. In some cases the figure does not appear until after the singing of the first song, and the uninitiated are told that it has been attracted by the music. In this case it passes into the back-room, later to reappear and leave by the front door. An announcement is made that it has brought a strange power, that Y has become peculiar, and that his name is now, for example, Qwaqwasila. A herald bears this news through the village. A second song is then sung in due course.

[776]

The tutwinam is difficult to classify among Bella Coola supernatural beings. It appears in the form of an ancestral crest, but the sisaok do not seem to have taught the uninitiated to regard it as Y's actual forefather. It remains as a supernatural embodiment of his crest, a materialization of an element of family history, and a motive for the use by Y of a mask representing the apparition. The uninitiated do not seek further; they have seen a wonderful sight and are content.

[177
776
773
825]

Several of the older sisaok stated that the tutwinam concept was not indigenous to Bella Coola; it had been recently [14]None of the first people came to earth as Wasps, but several received so much help from these insects that they are regarded as crests by the descendants of those whom they assisted.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

use his own discretion as to the design. At the top he always 211 places the bird or animal cloak in which his first ancestor, 556 traced patrilineally, came to this earth. Beneath this is the cloak of his mother's first ancestor if it differs from his father's. 778
There are no fixed rules for other representations. Sometimes 532 a man wishes to display the cloaks of the first ancestors of his wife, or wives; more often, the designs are of creatures with [773] which his own ancestors came in contact after reaching this earth.[4] One of the first settlers, Smaoan (I, p. 332), married a Bella Bella woman from whom he obtained a ceremony connected with a whale, an animal which has often been used on the totem-poles of his descendants. The lower figures on totem-poles often represent creatures from which a recent ancestor of the chief obtained supernatural assistance. Consequently, the number of designs which may be used is legion, and the order of portrayal is immaterial. Moreover, Bella Coola art is not sufficiently realistic for designs to be easily recognized, nor is there standard conventionalization of little used animals; so it follows that the designs on totem-poles are often unidentifiable.[5] This is of little consequence, since their value rests neither upon the artistic skill exhibited, nor even upon their significance in connection with the owner's ancestral myth, but upon the goods expended to validate the display.

All Bella Coola totem-poles are carved from the trunks of [824] huge cedars, with the wood cut away so that the designs stand out in high relief. The carvers are allowed great latitude both [184] in choice of form and colouring, hence there is wide variation

[4] Mintsamlair is the term applied to animals with which ancestors came in contact, other than their cloaks. [825]

[5] This statement represents the layman's point of view, that is, of the Bella Coola who was not himself a carpenter-sculptor. It is probable that an expert would have greater facility in recognizing the conventionalized forms used by his associates, although the whole pattern of Bella Coola culture was opposed to extreme standardization. Unfortunately, wood-carving, in fact art work of every kind, had degenerated to such an extent that only one man with any recognized skill in that respect was still living when this study was made. He was both unreliable and uncooperative, so that it was impossible even to collect examples of his work, still less to record his interpretations of the designs of masks or other objects carved by his predecessors. [184] [182] [115]

1; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a man, ux-unaisa, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience 424 to river taboos. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it 463 has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this function. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the validation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary 551 693 ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but [773] non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name ux-unaisa has always been able to perform his duties.

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been en- 784 forced concerning the river: No refuse may be thrown in, 825 otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the 226 same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them [515] from seeing the route. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes 841 is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the [562] fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the bank, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Then no freshly hewn planks can be set afloat, and even a canoe which has just been completed [502] must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose [765] husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the 688
salmon and it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the 693 offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight infringements, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river. The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 to climb up to visit his grandfather. Bo'estem did not discourage him, so his son began the ascent and soon disappeared from sight. In course of time he reached the land above and made his way to his grandfather, Ālqunstm, who was delighted to see him. He told his visitor that he was weary of constantly carrying the sun's light, and asked him to relieve [821] him of the duty for a time. He mentioned that on previous occasions when his wife had acted as his substitute, she, being a woman, had been shy and had hidden herself behind clouds. The boy was willing to undertake the task and listened to his grandfather's instructions; in the morning he was to use only one fire stick, a little later, two, then three, and, finally, four at midday. In the afternoon he was to decrease the number in a manner corresponding to the morning's increase.[11]

Next day Ālqunstm went away for a holiday after entrusting his grandson with the precious fire sticks. As soon as he was alone, the malicious youth began to pile one after another on the fire, until people in the world far below were wakened at dawn by the suffocating warmth. Bo'estem's son threw on log after log, each increasing the heat below. The earth began to sizzle, and finally burst into flames, and the water boiled in the rivers and ocean. Sinxawa had realized what must be the matter as soon as she felt the great heat, so she went outside and rubbed her hand over the planks on her house. Thus protected, those within survived, although all other human beings perished. Most of the animals [825] escaped by hiding, though the weasel failed to conceal the tip of its tail which was burnt black, a characteristic inherited by all weasels ever since. Ālqunstm felt the heat and hurried home.

"You have done great harm to mortals," he burst out angrily. "Henceforth you shall live on earth as a mink." [825]

Ālqunstm seized his grandson and cast him to earth in this guise.

539 The survivors of the catastrophe multiplied until the whole world 551 was repopulated from the single household. Each of them took an a'alk 575 name from the burning, and these have been transmitted from one to another of the descendants of each until this day. One of these, a nuxwal name, is Stalqalaxam, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks"; another, a Hatqtkam, umukwulsaix, "The Track of the Sun"; a third, Shmi, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log."

539 The following Kimsquit story[11] describes the obtaining of 575 an a'alk prerogative in the distant past.

[11]For another version of this tale, see Boas, p. 95.
[11]Related by Jim Pollard.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Long ago, there lived in Kimsquit a young chief who was a great hunter. On one occasion, he was camping in a cave, Anokokwāls, on the mountains when not only its roof, but the dome of the sky as well, opened so that he was able to gaze into the upper regions of space. From this manifestation of the supernatural, he took for himself the name Ālkwi, "The Opening of the Upper Regions," and validated it by giving valuable presents. This name has been transmitted from generation to generation and was recently brought to the present owner by his wife. With it is the prerogative of distributing potlatch gifts outside the house since the first Ālkwi claimed that the sky itself was his only ceiling.

A few years after Ālkwi had had this experience, he and his three brothers left Kimsquit by canoe to hunt mountain goats at Suxwālk. To their surprise, a gull perched on the bow of their canoe; they did not scare it away, thinking it indicated a manifestation of the supernatural. At intervals it left its perch and circled around the canoe, but soon returned. As they neared the landing-place, the gull flew ashore and changed into a yearling mountain goat. Ālkwi told his brothers, of whom the second was named Ālkexa and the third O'miāsl, that he believed this to be a further visitation of the supernatural to himself and that he would investigate it, and later meet them at Anokokwāls.

Ālkwi leapt ashore and followed the yearling goat. Wherever the road was rough, his strange guide travelled slowly so that his human companion could follow him. At length they came to a deep chasm with sheer walls about six feet apart, and a ledge running along one side. Ālkwi followed the goat along this, until the animal leapt across the gorge, struck the face of the precipitous rock, and vanished. It was clear that he had passed into the interior of the mountain and the chief could hear the distant sound of a drum.

"I can die but once," he said to himself.

Then the brave hunter leapt across the chasm, struck the rock, and passed through it as if it had been tissue paper, to find himself in a vast cavern amid a large number of people. These were really animals who had gathered to await the coming of his guide, the yearling goat. The latter told him not to be afraid, that henceforth he would be under the protection of all animals and would not come to harm, no matter how often he hunted. With breathless interest, Ālkwi watched the performance of a naqual dance, for every yearling goat is a supernatural dancer of this type. The ceremony lasted throughout the night, and next morning he set out for Anokokwāls, not realizing that it was really a year since he had left his brothers.

Meanwhile, though the three brothers had almost despaired of their elder's safe return, they patiently remained at their post, and after a year were overjoyed to see smoke rising from Anokokwāls. They hurried variegated plumage. When everything was ready, Ālquntām sent a house, built like his own, and all that it contained down to Snuhli under the guidance of a man, to whom he had given his own name and his own power. This human Ālquntām tried to paint Raven, without being able to please the petulant fellow, until, becoming disgusted, he coated him a uniform black which Raven could not remove. Now all was finished, and when Ālquntām opened the door, out rushed the animals and the birds. In the press Qao·ltaks, the Duck, whose seat was on the left of the fire facing inwards, was stepped upon; that is why to this day the duck can only waddle awkwardly. Her neighbour, Sqwal·ātin, another species of duck, whose place was opposite Qao·ltaks, was not injured; consequently she can walk comfortably. 539* [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Among the animals released was Deer, who rushed down to the river, seized some sticks, thrust them up on his head where they grew into antlers which had hitherto been lacking. There was no fire in the world then, so Deer determined to obtain some from the house of Ālquntām above. He returned aloft and began to dance. Ālquntām, not recognizing the disguised Deer, watched the performer with interest. Suddenly the crafty one thrust his head down into the flames, transfixing some of the burning sticks on his antlers and rushed away, with Ālquntām in vain pursuit. This is the way fire was brought to the world. [825]

In course of time, the man, Ālquntām, amassed enough goods to give a potlatch, taking for himself the name Ālquntāmaāks, as the supreme god had decreed. When the guests had assembled Deer danced, but in his wild gyrations he kicked some of the visitors, wounding them. The irate Ālquntāmaāks chased him out of the house and told him never to return. The guests then gave presents to Ālquntāmaāks, to his heralds, and to those who had been injured by Deer.

Since that time whenever the owner of the name Ālquntāmaāks gives a potlatch he erects a house similar to that brought down by his first ancestor with a totem-pole showing a design of Raven. Included in the ritual is a presentation of presents similar to that carried out by the guests to the first Ālquntāmaāks; it is not clear whether this was originally done as a mark of goodwill or whether it was to shame the host on account of maltreatment of the guests. Belonging to this origin myth is the nuiqual name, Taliokān·a.

The inclusion of such explanatory details as this is a common feature of origin myths and illustrate the way in which traditions blend into narratives; in the old days they would not have been related at potlatches, but it seems wise to include them where necessary at the end of individual myths.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

cedars that flourish on that part of the coast. Thanks to their supernatural power they were able to carry these easily. 539*

Returned to Smaian·a they built a dug-out canoe of birch(?), the outside of which, and also the paddles, they decorated with abalone-shells. The effect was very beautiful, and they named the canoe, Ki'laielotl. In this craft the six set out down the Bella Coola River. When still above Stuix they stopped to investigate a beating sound and found that it came from the house of Oǫsmai. The latter invited them to come in, using Dudusongʷ's name, which he knew in some mysterious manner. When they entered they found that the beating sound was caused by their host's daughter, Kānustāliām, who was sitting in the back-room, thumping a copper which she was holding as if it had been an infant. Oǫsmai was much impressed with his guests' canoe, and they with his. A trade was mutually agreeable, as a result of which the travellers obtained a copper canoe named Łāliaelotl, fitted with copper paddles. Dudusongʷ married Kānustāliām, who embarked with him and his brothers and sisters. They had not gone far when they were hailed by the chief of a village, who also knew Dudusongʷ's name.

"Dudusongʷ," he called out, "your canoe is not much good; it has to be paddled or poled. Let us trade. You take my canoe, Kwakwaoslotl,[24] it travels with its own power."

Dudusongʷ was unwilling to part with Łāliaelotl, but at last agreed. The seven now travelled rapidly in their merganser canoe to the coast, not stopping at the villages which they saw on the way. At the mouth of the Bella Coola River, Dudusongʷ cast into the water one of the fish which Ālquntām had given him; it became the progenitor of all the Bella Coola olachen. The travellers went thence to the head of South Bentinck Arm where Dudusongʷ threw out another olachen, the forefather of all that now frequent this place. He repeated this at Rivers Inlet, at Smith Inlet, and at every fiord on the coast, wherefore olachen are plentiful in British Columbia at the present day. At Łāliaml, a town of which the location is uncertain, Dudusongʷ was received as a benefactor and given the name Ťłākwakila. After visiting all the rivers on the coast Ālkwi and his party returned to Bella Coola, where they finally settled at Stuix. [825]

Throughout their travels they had carried the cedar trees with them, and they now planted them at Stuix. That is why fine cedars have flourished there since that date. The four brothers built a comfortable house and also constructed a salmon-weir in the river, which made them so prosperous that people came from far and near to pledge their daughters to the fishermen. They were able to give numerous potlatches and so display a totem-pole, the design of which Ālquntām had shown to Ālkwi [824] [532]

[24] Kwakwaos is a merganser.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

their craft and set out on foot along the overland path to the head of South Bentinck Arm. 539*

Midway along this trail the travellers saw a house, called Tcäkwalott because it could lengthen itself at will. From this supernatural sight each of the five became a shaman. This house was a replica of the one above in which mankind was made and, like it, contained many rooms, in each of which lived an individual speaking a different language. Äl·imlsaix failed to understand them and in his annoyance scattered the speakers, who fled to different parts of the coast where each increased and perpetuated his own language. This is why the various coastal tribes have [829] their own tongues; if Äl·imlsaix had been able to understand them in Tcäkwalott there would be no diversity of speech now.

Various dances were taking place in the rooms within the house. There was a constant din from the large whistles used in sisaok ceremonial which sounded of their own accord and were continually answered by Echo. [424] Only at this place ~~and at~~ Nusqalst did Echo appear to the first people; [535] hence only the descendants of Äl·imlsaix and of the Nusqalst people have the right to portray him in their dances. Äno°likwolsaix (II, p. 8) stood near the door; when at last she called out, the sisaok whistles became silent as if in fear.

Continuing their journey the travellers reached Täl·io, at the head of South Bentinck Arm, where a solitary man, Nusxemda, was living. At this place Ťlakwakilayekwa gave birth to Raven, who was born as a boy with the legs of a raven. Äl·imlsaix named him ixlqotlamsqwaxdjinas. After a short sojourn at Täl·io they ascended the river, and presently Äl·imlsaix saw a female grizzly bear, whom he also invited to join the party as his sister. The bear accepted and he endeavoured to change the creature to a woman. He had fair success with the paws and face; that is why these parts of a bear are similar to those of men at the present day, but the beast's hairy hide defied his efforts and in disgust he told it to run away. Before banishing it, he bade the animal always show a friendly disposition to human beings, wherefore grizzly bears at Täl·io [825] have never been known to attack a person. The party proceeded up the river to Mount Stap', where Äl·imlsaix found a repository (II, p. 8) through the discovery of which he became a Cannibal with the name Smunkka°ks and an eagle as incubus. From this point they returned to Täl·io, where they settled permanently.

Many of the names which occur in the myth are still in use. Mrs. 551 Schooner's designation as chief is Ťlakwakilayekwa, a name that can be used by either man or woman; in the former case the suffix yekwa is

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 829 special type of whistle. Kaospokłānum remained in this house until he had given four potlatches. Then he removed to Āxst·i, near Tāl·io River on South Bentinck Arm. His house still stands there, but it has become an island around which the clouds mass whenever a hostile raiding-party is approaching, so as to conceal from them their objective.

[197] From their long residence in this house Tāl·io people understand the language of their Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and other coastal neighbours better than do the Bella Coola.

FOURTH ORIGIN MYTH OF Tāl·io[28]

*539 Among the first people sent down to earth were four who landed at the river Tcold, on the mainland opposite Fort Rupert. Their names were: Ninitsamlaix, a man who became the leader of the group; Nuyal·a-laix, a woman; Ānuskimethm, a man; and another woman, Snuxmethmān·a. They met a wasp, which helped them by pointing out the proper road to follow and by killing evil things which barred their path. With this assistance they were able to reach Tāl·io, where they settled and where Ninitsamlaix plucked a number of twigs from the branches of a spruce tree near the ocean. These twigs became the people over whom he was chief.

ORIGIN MYTH OF Nulał[29]

In the beginning of time there came down to Mount Swakx, near the mouth of the Dean River, two brothers, Xemcua and Sinuxstl, their sister Qākms, and their herald Qāqāᵃli. Xemcua came as an eagle, but at once assumed human form; apparently the others had always been human. They moved down, and formed a settlement at Nulał, near the mouth of the Dean River. Xemcua had brought with him as a present from Ālquntām, some olachen, called by their supernatural name, ālqexaiyen·a, which he [825] threw into the water. They increased rapidly and became the ancestors of all the olachen at Kimsquit. Thus provided with food, the brothers prospered so that they were able to give many potlatches. In course of time Qākms was married to Noākila, a chief who had come to earth on the upper Dean River.

At one of their potlatches Sinuxstl performed a llaiyākam dance, as Ālquntām had instructed him to do before leaving Nuxmāt·a. Valuable [28] Fragmentary version, related by Billy Pollard.

[29] For another version see Boas, p. 65. It was impossible to obtain this myth from any of the descendants of Xemcua; it is unlikely that the above is more than an outline.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 the people of Kimsquit and the Dean River, and ever since then inter-[582] marriages have been common.

ORIGIN MYTH OF Siwal·os[45]

Soon after the first people had reached this earth Älquntäm feared that as they increased, they might quarrel about land tenure. Accordingly he sent down to Siwal·os, on the Dean River thirty-five miles from the sea, three brothers, Älquntäm, ıyuyuyut, and Łäliäxsa, a name in many [551] cases used by women, with their sister Sxape·tl. He gave the oldest brother instructions to divide the land among the different villages. Älquntäm came in the guise of a mountain goat, but promptly sent his animal cloak back to the land above, before starting downstream. To the inhabitants of each town he allotted certain valleys in the vicinity to serve as hunting-grounds, and told the people that these, and only these, were to be theirs forever. After reaching the coast, he travelled down Dean Inlet as far as the Bella Bella country, likewise allotting land to the different settlements, and marking each boundary with a stick. After finishing his task, Älquntäm returned up the Dean River to his brothers. The three built a weir that spanned the river, and in it they caught so many steel-head salmon that the Carriers used to come from great distances to buy from them. Sxape·tl was married to a chief living on the lower part of the river, and her brothers, too, came below for their wives. Älquntäm ultimately moved to Nusqäpts, on the east side of the Dean River, twenty-five miles from the sea.

ıyuyuyut had come from above in the form of a deer. After taking [825] off this cloak, he released it as an animal, which became the ancestor of all the deer near Kimsquit. They did not like Siwal·os, where it was very cold, so they moved to Nihtcıks, on Dean Inlet, about three miles below Kimsquit, and there built their town. Unfortunately, the snowfall was so heavy that they had much trouble in lighting their fires; sometimes as much as ten feet of snow fell in a single night.

"Please, Łäliäxas," said the deer, "don't keep falling on us."

In the language of men, snow is kai, and Łäliäxas means, "Copper One," but the language of deer is quite different. The snow, unmoved by their appeals, continued to fall, until at last the deer held a meeting and resolved to move away to the outer coast near Bella Bella, and never [825] return again. They carried out this plan, and it is only within the last few years that some have come back, although for centuries none lived near Kimsquit.

[45]Related by Jim Pollard.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ORIGIN MYTH OF Äsklia[46]

539*

In the beginning of time Älquntäm sent down to Äsklia, Salmon House on the Dean River, Noäkila, his younger brother Tcaqos, and their sister Snulkänäls, "Box," so named from a supernatural box in the land above. Tcaqos brought a caribou with him, and released it on earth.[47] With these people came as herald, The Wasp of Heaven, who later assumed human form and guided them. Tcaqos at once moved inland to the country of the Carrier Indians, where he remained,[48] taking the adapted name Qäqos.

Noäkila, unprovided with a house or clothing, was so lonely and unhappy that for four days he lay hungry, inert and despondent, alone with his sister. Älquntäm had promised to provide for his welfare, and, four days after Noäkila's landing, sent down the four supernatural carpenters to help him. Yulätimut at once cheered his drooping spirits by building him a house, which was a replica of Nusmät·a itself. Noäkila asked the third carpenter, Mätläbälitcak, to provide him with food, and the latter, obedient to Älquntäm's instructions, whittled a steel-head salmon from maple wood and put it into the river. The fish came to life, swam, and jumped for a short time, but soon died. The carpenter tried several times with the same result. Then Raven appeared and gave him the bone which every steel-head salmon has in the back of its neck. Mätläbälitcak put this bone in one of his wooden models, and when he had thrown it in the river it swam strongly and survived. This fish multiplied so rapidly that Noäkila and his sister were able to support themselves on this kind of salmon, which have been plentiful in the Dean River ever since. [825]

After a time Noäkila decided to visit the people dwelling on the ocean. He asked Mätläbälitcak for a canoe, and the carpenter made him one in the form of an enormous merganser, that travelled without visible motive power. At that time the Dean River disappeared beneath a huge boulder a short distance above the sea, but the craft shattered the rock and opened a channel.[49]

At the mouth of the Dean River Noäkila met Xemcua and married his sister Qäkms, using at this ceremony a wordless marriage song given him by Älquntäm. They had many children and ever since that time there have been intermarriages and friendly relations between the people of Salmon House and Kimsquit. [582]

[46]Related by Jim Pollard; for another version of this myth see Boas, p. 66.

[47]Its footprints can still be seen in the rocks near Salmon House.

[48]The obvious fact that the Carriers must already have been in the land does not strike the Bella Coola. They do not theorize on the subject, but if asked, reply that they too were sent down from above at the same time. [829]

[49]The canyon on this river marks the site of the obstruction.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 [551] The names embodied in this myth are stilll in use. That of Noākila was validated at a potlatch during the winter of 1921, after being dormant since the death of the eighth Noākila, an old man, which had taken place some thirty years previously.[40] To illustrate this myth a representation is made of the merganser canoe, a specimen of which, obtained by Mr. Harlan I. Smith, is now in the National Museum, Ottawa.

According to another version of this myth, Noākila and his party came to earth at Anaham Lake, in the country of the Carriers, bringing with them the steel-head salmon. They first went to Stuix, but Noākila did not like the place, so released only a few of the fish. They returned to Anaham Lake, and from there went to Salmon House. They found this spot so desirable that they settled and set free their store of steel-head salmon. That is the reason why this fish is so plentiful in the Dean River, and so relatively rare in the Bella Coola. [825]

ORIGIN MYTH OF Sä·ıtsk'[41]

In the beginning of time Älquntäm constructed an abalone-shell covered post which reached from Nusmät·a to Älwolsqämus, a mountain near the Kimsquit River, not far from its mouth. To this place came from above two men, Smaoan, "The First One," and his younger brother, Omqomkilıka. The former flew down as an eagle, but the latter, in raven form, swarmed down the post, which vanished after he had reached the earth. Smaoan spread his wings, like a mother bird, to shelter his younger brother. Älquntäm had given Omqomkilıka a box containing sockeye salmon, with instructions to throw them into the ocean, where they would increase rapidly to serve as food for him and his elder brother. He also taught the two how to build a salmon-weir to catch the fish. The brothers climbed down the mountain-side to the mouth of the Kimsquit River, where Omqomkilıka became a man and sent back his raven cloak above. He then released the salmon as he had been instructed, and also another present from Älquntäm, a mätsqus (I, p. 525), which was to serve as bait not only for fish but also for wealth and goods.

Smaoan declined to assume human form immediately, so began to travel, and his younger brother, sad at being thus left alone, started to [40]This was the only instance given of an approximation of the interval since the first peopling of the earth. The Bella Coola usually reply, "long, long ago," and have not questioned further. This myth was received from a reliable informant, but it is doubtful whether his statement concerning the "eighth" Noākila would find credence among most Bella Coola. Even if it should be the eighth, that would be of little value in estimating the period at which the Bella Coola believe the earth to have been populated, since names may remain dormant for generations. [173]

[41]Related by Jim Pollard.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

BB 539 BC * 539 BC BB [226] [825]

a person has been in contact with supernatural beings to enable him to enter.

Ailsamka told them everything, that her mother had failed to teach her how to cut up black cod, "so Ḷomoqwa sent blackfish to catch me so that I could be taught," she said. "You must be very careful to cut them up properly or trouble will come upon you."

The correct method, as taught by Raven, is to split the fish cleanly without severing the bones. Ḷā·pxaok's daughter had erred by cutting the one which is equivalent in a fish to the human collar-bone. She told them of the fish that abounded in Ḷomoqwa's house; of the red-fish, which disobeyed their mother by playing outside the house so that their stomachs were often forced out from their mouths[n] and they floated up to the surface; of Ḷomoqwa himself and his large hat; and of the other denizens of the underworld. The people listened attentively and ever after cut up black cod in the prescribed fashion, though if Ailsamka had not been carried off to Ḷomoqwa's house Raven's teaching would undoubtedly have been forgotten.

Not long after his daughter's safe return Ḷā·pxaok gave a potlatch. He took for himself the name Ḷomoqwa, and at the same time reproduced in his own house as much as possible of what his daughter had described. Thus there were imitation fishes, especially the halibut, around the house, while the red-fish were shown as wooden models that could be drawn up to the roof by hidden strings representing the manner in which the fish float up to the surface of the ocean. Ḷomoqwa, himself, was shown wearing his large ball topped hat, of the type known as biḷotl.[n]

While Ailsamka was under the water Ḷomoqwa had shown her sisaok whistles, and at this potlatch they were used while the girl was concealed within the back-room as a sisaok initiate.

BC [177] [556]

This was the[n] origin of the sisaok ceremonial, which spread in time from the isläms people to the Bella Coola. The name Ḷomoqwa passed to one of Ḷā·pxaok's descendants who, when he gave a potlatch, arranged [n]The red-fish is an unidentified deep-sea fish which dies in shallow water through lack of pressure.

---

BC BB

[424] [292] [532]

[n]This style was always worn by Ḷomoqwa and Ālqunläm and, as many of the first people obtained their power from one or other of these beings, the prerogative of using such hats at potlatches is quite common. They are made of cedar roots, are waterproof, and are usually painted with one of the wearer's ancestral crests. When either Ḷomoqwa or Ālqunläm is shown on a totem-pole he is displayed with one of these hats.

[n]It will be noted that the narrator tacitly assumes any origin recorded in his myth to be the sole, or authentic one.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

It was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white man seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the four Mesmesälänux acting on the behest of Älquntäm. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. Most individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Älquntäm has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the feet of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled assistants can usually rotate a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

843 be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head 825 into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by
[774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be countered by means of magical rites (I, p. 720). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he eats beaver meat his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few
[846] days after birth the child is steeped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-
[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relations to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a [171] house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made

[1]This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 720).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches 842 immediately after the delivery of a child.

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as im- 826
portant as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is sxaiäx, a 844 word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing 783 which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it.

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions 845 to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon [825] into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers [787] her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one [756] foetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, [847]
no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth.

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

845 alone, and when she leaves it, it dries up immediately. When a year has elapsed, the parents return home with their children and the father resumes the ordinary routine of life. For three years more the mother must remain in the house, leaving it only at night through a hole in the floor. Above all else, she must keep away from the river; she cannot draw water from it, nor can she cut salmon on its bank. One instance is remem-[753] bered in which the parents of twins failed to observe these restrictions; their legs became swollen and they soon died. In addition to punishment of the offenders in cases such as [825] this, there is danger that if they fail to obey the customary taboos the salmon will be insulted and avoid the Bella Coola River.

[778] After four years a mother of twins resumes her normal life, [787] but she is henceforth endowed with special powers. If she wishes to see anyone who is absent, she has only to think of the person, and in her dreams she will be able to see him. She must never try to start up a dying fire by blowing upon it, since to do so would cause a gale. When a person sets out on any kind of an expedition from the house in which a mother of twins is living, the latter must chew a little food and spit it out towards the departing guest, otherwise he will fail in his venture.

845 Twins themselves, being akin to salmon, have miraculous 825 ability to see their fish-kinsmen and read their thoughts. Bella Coola mythology contains many stories of the way in which twins could talk with, and change into, salmon. Such knowledge is not limited to tales of the distant past. An elderly Bella Coola described the manner in which her grandmother, a twin related to Sockeye Salmon, was consulted by a man who had been unlucky with his weir. Gazing down into the water, this woman saw that the fish were avoiding his dam because of the charred uprights used in its construction; when these were changed he was successful in his fishing.

845 Twins are believed to possess remarkable ability from earliest childhood, and even to remember incidents occurring

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a near relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of 867 stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed [732] man, he is told of Ăläläls, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

867 imitation potlatches, but he cannot himself carry out a cere-
556 mony until he has reached manhood.

Puberty Rites

881 The change from childhood to adult age is, of course, more obvious with girls than with boys, and the former alone must observe strict taboos. Menstrual blood, like that which follows delivery, is unclean, especially that emitted at the first dis-
[784] charge. A woman who has just given birth is a sxaiäx; an adolescent girl, a sxyexwi, that is, "A Person Not Fully Tabooed"; the attitude with which the former is regarded is held, in a lesser extent, for the latter.

At the first indication, the girl asks a woman to inform her mother of her condition, and goes home immediately if she happens to be away at the time. Her parents at once make a small enclosure or bedroom of planks or matting in either of the front corners of the house, providing it with a trap-door and ladder by which she can leave without passing through the front door. There the girl must lie for four days, with legs close together and bent at the knees, never stretched out straight. She is not allowed to drink anything, and must eat sparingly; if she should consume much food, she would be greedy when an adult. When necessary for her to leave the enclosure, a woman must always accompany her. Her mother, or some other female relative, provides her with the usual soft cedar-bark pads. On the fifth day, she leaves her shelter early in the morning with one feminine friend and goes to a secluded pool back in the forest, where she washes for the first time. Then she runs rapidly through the woods, which has the effect of making her a strong woman. Should a girl fail to do this,
[753] she would be afflicted with an illness caused by the salmon, become blind, and die young.

784 For one year an adolescent girl is subject to many restric-881 tions. Her near approach to the river would offend the salmon and cause them to avoid Bella Coola, so she is not allowed to [825] draw water, or even to appear on the bank. She may not use

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789 shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841 unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [773] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction [825] and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881 in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581
regard the married state as the normal condition of man. 589 Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those [732] crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581 and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous [462] small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most [858] important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

763 to earth close by. In the winter of 1921-2 three Bella Coola [824] were almost crushed in this manner; within a year the deaths took place of the wife of one, the mother of the second, and the daughter of the third. This was considered definite confirmation of their belief.

763 When a chief dies, a supernatural woman, Skwanāt·ān·ā, 776 "The Weeper," comes to earth to lament the loss. Crying piteously, she walks to and fro in the woods near the village where the death has taken place, but can be heard or seen only by a person in whose family there will soon be a fatality. This [789] can be counteracted by going boldly to her and collecting some of the clotted mucus that drips from her nose as she weeps. If this is wrapped in the finder's clothing and stored for a year, it brings him good fortune and probably deflects the impending death, but to see "The Weeper" without knowledge of the proper procedure is to court disaster. A prominent Bella Coola woman died in June, 1922, and her son believed that he heard the lamentation of the supernatural visitor about six the next morning in the woods behind the missionary's house. He rushed forth to find her, but was unsuccessful. Within a few days, one of his nieces died, as was to be expected.

763 A comparatively common bird in Bella Coola is the 825 kwakwas, which is about the size of a robin and dark, greenish brown.[1] Its whistle is frequently heard and no significance is attached to it, but it is an omen of death if a kwakwas comes close to a house and chirps out, "lsi·t." On the night of February 20, 1924, one called beneath the window of a man who was about to start on a journey in his motor-boat. Next morning, although the bird lay dead beside his house, he insisted on starting. He camped at Restoration Bay where he was awakened by a voice calling his name, but could see no one. This was probably an owl, a bird which often foretells disaster by calling the name of the person to whom it will occur. Even this did not deter him and within twenty-four hours his

[1]The bird could not be identified, although it belongs to fact, not mythology.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

boat caught fire, his goods were destroyed, and he, himself, 763 barely escaped. The Bella Coola regard coincidences of this 825 kind as confirmation of their beliefs.

As in the last instance, death does not always follow the hearing or seeing of an omen; it may simply presage some calamity. It is dangerous for a person to be addressed by a dog, although it is well known that dogs understand human speech and can talk if they desire. At the time of the writer's visit, it was a matter of general knowledge that a dog had spoken to a middle-aged Bella Coola woman a few years earlier. The animal was shot immediately, and the woman [158] never revealed what it had said, but in spite of these precautions she became insane and has never fully recovered.

The stone man, Yuyulmxl, near Kimsquit, who figures so 763 prominently in Bella Coola mythology, is another death omen. [773]
In early times, all who passed his station used to call out to him, and it was thought that those whom he failed to answer would die within a year. In that case, the voice was welcome, [825] but the speech of an owl is still regarded with dread. If one of these birds utters the name of a dead person, the individual hearing it will soon die.

Besides these well-recognized omens, the Bella Coola be- 763
lieve that any peculiar visitation or hallucination is a probable 828 precursor of disaster. In many cases these fears are unjustified, but there are always sufficient accidents and misfortunes to corroborate their belief. An old Kimsquit man told of the manner in which his son had once come rushing into the house saying that he had seen a strange, black-faced creature. His father feared that it might have been Sxaiaxwax.

"Perhaps it was," continued the old man, "for my boy soon died."

Irrespective of the actual cause of death, about which the father is uncertain, he is convinced that he knew of its coming by his son's omen-apparition.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

764 while the relatives are preparing the body for disposal. For a child, these services are performed by the parents; for a married man whose parents are dead, by his brothers and other kindred; for a married woman, by her husband or the members of her own family. If she has borne no children, it is customary for her relatives to carry out the funeral rites, especially if she has been many times rebought from her husband. If such repayment has not been made, it is considered correct for a husband to bury his wife, although it is a point of honour for her relatives to reimburse him later for his expenditure. On the other hand, when children have been born and financial assistance mutually given and received several times, it is proper for the husband to perform the funeral rites, although he may receive assistance from his wife's kinsmen. There is no rigid ruling on the point, but bickerings seldom occur in connection with disposal of the dead. Members of the ancestral family are ready to assist in every case, both on account of the disgrace that would follow a niggardly funeral, and also as a means of displaying their wealth.

[614] [556]

The first essential is to wash the body, a rite performed by men for a man, by women for a woman. It is immaterial who does this though some of the relatives usually volunteer. Neither husband nor wife touches a dead consort, though it is said that long ago a man would hold intercourse with a deceased wife to indicate his excessive grief. The most influential member of the immediate family takes the lead in the various necessary acts, although there is always endless discussion and advice from members of the ancestral family and others interested. A nose-ring is placed in the septum of the corpse; if this is omitted, the body will not be able to dissolve into its elements but will range the earth as a walking phantom, causing injury to anyone who observes it. If the deceased has just eaten some of the first run of spring salmon or olachen, a shaman washes out his mouth with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark which he throws into the river. The essence of the salmon is thus extracted from the body; if this rite is neglected no more salmon will come to the river. No precautions are necessary after the food has been digested. 764 [825]

[839] [301] [975] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Many men prepare their coffins before death. If this has not been done, a large, wooden box is provided by a kinsman of the deceased. The body is dressed in good clothing and bound into a squatting position, head between knees, hands clasped around shins, and the haunches just above the level of the soles of the feet. In this posture it is thrust into the coffin. Particularly if the corpse has been brought from some distance and rigor mortis has set in, it may be necessary to break the back-bone and even to crush the skull before the box can be closed. A stone is placed on the back of the neck, within the coffin, to prevent the ghost from returning to haunt the survivors. A little choice food is placed beside the body of a dearly loved child for nourishment during the journey to the next world. [763] [602] [795]

From this point onwards, the funeral rites differ according to the rank of the deceased. On the death of an influential nuuk, the senior members of that society meet as soon as possible to arrange the dramatization of the coming of Malakila. A nuuk son, brother, or other near relative is always present even if he has little importance in the affairs of the society. If the death has taken place during the night, the conference is held the following morning and the rites begin at noon. There may be delay until all have gathered, but about the middle of the first possible day two nuuk are sent up one of the mountains behind the village. They carry large, cone-shaped whistles which they blow twice. The sound is plainly audible in the village and all, whether or not members of the nuuk society, recognize that a supernatural being is drawing near. After a short interval, another whistle is blown by a nuuk concealed on the roof of the house in which the corpse is lying, and after another pause the same sound comes from within, beside the body itself. Most of the uninitiated know that this is the voice of Malakila (also called Sisiutlwum), 575 766 [796]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and recompense to funeral assistants is usually deferred until 964 that time. Such was often true even in former years, although 431 poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped 556 to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any con- [575] venient ceremony, such as a non-sacred nusak dance. As [796] repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature.
It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret [766] after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crest, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery.
Those who carried them were the ones who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is 764 the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives 783 of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or olachen are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some infor- [825] mants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless slave being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The taint on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that Sá-lma [776]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Sqlan'li, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [626] [302] [834] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 to a ghost, he informs a shaman of the fact and the latter [756] notifies the relatives of the deceased. If no shaman is convenient, the shade does not hesitate to help himself. Invisible, 264 and armed with a barbed hook, he approaches a person who is
775 eating and pulls away a crumb which falls to the earth. Should the eater stoop to pick this up, the ghost, robbed of his booty, 753 beats the offender with his hook, causing toothache or sometimes a sharp pain in the head or stomach. Other ailments are caused by the ghosts hitting with invisible stones those who have offended them. Consequently, no one picks up a crumb which has fallen, since it is impossible to know whether it has
[827] been an accident or a seizure. Another indication of a ghost's
[782] hunger is loss of a tooth. The loser should throw it on a fire with an invitation to the dead to accept his offering.

775 The barrier between ghosts and human beings is considered to be little more than a wall of smoke, just too dense for ordinary eyes to penetrate. In early times intercommunication between the denizens of the two worlds was so easy that a doting mother was once allowed to tend her dead child on earth. Unfortunately, the woman's mother one day insisted on holding her grandchild, unaware that he was a ghost. Shocked at his appearance, the old woman dropped the child, much to the anger of the dead people.[44] Ever since that time it has been impossible for human beings to see and talk with [538] their deceased kinsmen. Like so many Bella Coola stories, it is doubtful whether this one is regarded as more than an item of ancient history; it is considered to be a fact, but it is not one that enters into the daily thoughts of the people.

[725] Ghosts frequently come to their old homes at night where dogs can see them. If one of these animals begins to bark and gazes fixedly at a spot where nothing is to be seen, it is because a wraith is standing there and the dog's owner hopes that it will remain invisible. It is true that some individuals have [754] received shamanistic power from a ghost, but more often a visitation is disastrous and to be avoided. A dead person often

[44] This story is recorded in detail later (I, p. 577).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B
C 539
775

came wailing voices and at intervals an agonized face appeared at one of the many small openings in the surface of the sphere. The supreme being, for the chief was none other, told him that those within the ball were evil persons, those who had committed theft or murder during life. Mǎmaiyu, though innocent of these crimes, decided that he would be safer on earth and asked for the glass with the white liquid, which he hastily drained. The supreme deity inquired what present he would like as token of the visit, and he requested a beaver-axe, that is, one with a crooked handle such as beaver use.[a]

At the moment when Mǎmaiyu drank the white liquid, his brother saw his body move very slightly. He hastily warmed some mountain goat grease and with this rubbed his face and mouth. At first he was unable to speak, owing to his muscles having become rigid from the cold, but they loosened gradually so that he was able to recount his experiences. Mǎmaiyu's axe, being of supernatural origin, was invisible to all human beings, but this did not affect its potency, and from that time onwards the owner could catch beaver as easily as other men could catch salmon.

B
177
539
775

The information contained in this story does not correspond at all with Bella Coola beliefs concerning the fate of the dead. They tell it, and assume that such experiences are normal for dead Xuxais, though unknown to their own people.

[825]

[a] The Bella Coola know that beaver must have axes of this kind to accomplish their work, although white people, deceived by the invisibility of these, believe the animals use their teeth. Mǎmaiyu received an axe of this type.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in his cape and cried himself to sleep. The next day 'Yeāxdji once more tried his luck fishing, but again only landed four bull-heads, and again cried himself to sleep. It was the same on the third day and the fourth, and in the evening the hungry and disconsolate youth wept for a long time, his head wrapped in his cape. 539 787 *

Presently he felt someone kick his foot and heard a voice saying, "Stop crying! Get up!"

When the startled 'Yeāxdji opened his eyes there was no one in sight. Concluding that he must have been mistaken, he again covered his eyes and went to sleep. But he was aroused in the same way, once more without being able to see his visitor. This time before he lay down he made a tiny slit in his cape so that while he pretended to be asleep he was really watching through the eye-hole. Soon he saw approaching a beautiful woman whose hair was worn in long braids as was the fashion of Fort Rupert women. Eagerly 'Yeāxdji threw back his cape, but at his first movement she vanished. There was nothing to do but hope that she would return, so he again lay down with the opening opposite his eye. Once more the woman drew near, but this time the youth did not move, even when she kicked him and repeated her command not to cry.

"I see you," he answered, "don't run away."

The strange woman sat down without demur.

"Why did you throw away my children?" she asked. "They showed kindly feeling towards you in allowing themselves to be caught, and yet you rejected them angrily. None the less I have seen your misery and have come to help you. First I shall cure you."

When she had done this the woman continued, "I am going to give you supernatural power; when you want anything, just think of me and it will appear. I give you the chief's name, Kaiusdiās; when you give a potlatch you must carve me on the posts of your house. My name is Beaver."

Then the woman vanished. She was a beaver in human form, which all animals are able to assume at will, though few mortals have the ability to see them except as animals. [825]

'Yeāxdji decided to test his newly received power by wishing for a house. He thought of Beaver, and forthwith there stood a fine house before him. By merely thinking of his benefactress he was soon able to fill it with goods, blankets, mats, boxes, benches, cooking utensils, and food of all kinds, and on the beach he soon had a flotilla of canoes. The size of the establishment proved the prosperity of its owner.

Meanwhile Ḳomo'sala and those with him were in dire straits for food. One day the old slave woman who had befriended 'Yeāxdji happened to be foraging not far from Ḳwiyai when she saw smoke rising from the place.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"It seems as if you attracted the salmon like a magnet," said the father to his son. 777

The latter did not answer immediately, but later he said: 787 *

"You were right," and he told him what had happened. [539]

"You have obtained supernatural good luck," the old man replied simply. [226]

Following his son's instructions the father prepared canoes and boxes to bring back the flesh of the Mother of Snakes. They collected every scrap of it, which they preserved very carefully, and used small portions as bait to attract salmon to their weir with such success that they became wealthy.

Another supernatural being from whom supernatural good fortune may be obtained is Skwanät·än·a, "The Female Mourner." When a chief dies she comes to wail, wandering through the woods near the village, where sometimes she can be seen in the form of a weeping woman. As she cries, she ejects mucus from her nose, which solidifies into a glass-like substance about a foot in length. Anyone who sees her should take the transformed mucus, and wrap it in some article of his own clothing; it will bring him good fortune. About midnight of June 21, 1922, the infant daughter of a Bella Coola died, and about seven o'clock on the following morning the wailing was heard[1] in the woods behind the missionary's house. The brother of the dead child's father rushed off to try to find the weeping one. Luckily he did not succeed, because he did not know about collecting the mucus, and trouble would have come to him had he seen the supernatural being without knowing how to deal with it; in fact, even to hear Skwanät·än·a is considered an omen of death. [776] [776] [763]

It will be seen from the foregoing specific instances that supernatural good luck is usually obtained by the slaying of some powerful creature. But, since every living creature is endowed with superhuman power, it follows that any object obtained from a bird or an animal that has acted in a peculiar way may be the cause of supernatural good fortune if it be kept for one year in the manner previously described. Some- [825] [224]

[1] Since the Bella Coola believe that it was heard, the incident is recorded as a fact.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 like power, and will tell their son to try the same method. In
* 787 this way a descendant of shamans has a better chance to become one than anybody else. Another indication that a person is likely to become a shaman is to be wakened from sleep by a mouse. As he sits up, hastily, thinking that someone has called [825] him, all that he sees is the disappearing rodent. Mice have a rather peculiar position in the eyes of the Bella Coola, since they believe that these animals regard themselves as superior to mankind.

"The food of mortals is our food," say the mice.

His parents now tell the boy that he is likely to become a shaman, and that he must accordingly take great care of himself. If he is an adult, he will begin to observe ceremonial [785] chastity, and in any case will spend much time alone, avoiding the trivialities of life in the village, and will think little about mundane matters. At intervals he goes alone to the forest, especially to some spot beside a waterfall, the kind of place that supernatural beings frequent. Here he lies down, sometimes for several days, with evergreen boughs spread beneath and above him. These are clean and nullify the mortal odour so objectionable to supernatural beings, so that his chance of obtaining a visitation is increased. He does not know what may appear to him, but he carefully remembers his dreams[1] which, as his thoughts are centred on lofty subjects, are likewise about matters of importance. If his dream is sufficiently clear to warrant the term vision, the recipient should remain, fasting, for four days on the spot where it occurred, and should say nothing about it when he returns home. His strength increases with every vision, until at last, sometimes after a period of thirty years or more, he will obtain a real one and the power to cure a disease. Sometimes dreams come to him in the village, but they are more likely to occur in a secluded spot in the forest. It is impossible to obtain examples of these dreams
[178] since, for a long time, no one has been brave enough to seek [828] [1]The Bella Coola do not differentiate between mental images that appear in sleep and visions seen during waking hours.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ninitsamlaix, "The Restorer." He is able to cure the sick even when at the point of death. 756*

Ănuskieknm, "The Saviour." He can rescue persons who have been injured by other supernatural beings. 776 787*

Nunutsnmikmem, "The One Who is Thought Of." Having powerful curing abilities, people think of him when ill.

Ănotäbäkmots, "The Open-Mouthed One." His mouth is always open to suck forth sickness.

Nuslkäkstämidjut, "He Whose Basin Is in His Own Body." A person who receives the ability to cure from this being does not use the customary basin.

Susiutl. It is said that many Rivers Inlet shamans have received their powers from this creature, which is accordingly well known to the Bella Coola in this connection, although few of their own people are said to have been benefited by it. 756* 787*

Since all animals are supernatural, it follows that any of them can cure the sick. Instances are remembered of this, in which the patient received a name differing slightly from that of his animal benefactor. Salmon, especially cohoes and early spring salmon, are extremely potent curers and many sick [825] people have received aid from them. It is recognized that the former are uncanny since they have the ability to hide themselves in insignificant streams. One man was cured by a tree [533] which gave him a yodel-like shaman's song, imitating the creaking and waving of its branches. More often, however, a supernatural animal merely speaks to a man without making him a shaman.

Two courses are open to the patient who has been cured by such a visitation. He may at once proclaim his powers, or he may say nothing about them in the hope of obtaining further revelations and further names. From a single experience he has received a certain amount of power, but the more he has, the greater this will be. If he decides not to wait, he at once calls the singers and repeats to them the words and tunes of the songs he has received. When later on he gives presents to [553] validate his shamanistic name, it becomes publicly recognized [556]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

them that might escape. It is the sickness! The din increases; the leader works himself into a frenzy with his rapid gyrations, then he stills the noise as the shaman goes to the door. In dead silence, the more striking in contrast to the previous tumult, he partly opens his hands and puffs against them, as if blowing something out of the door, at the same time calling out, hoip. Again the beating of sticks breaks out, again it is stilled, and again the shaman blows forth the sickness. This is done four times. The shaman uses his own discretion whether to send the sickness through the door or the smoke-vent. 755 756 * [535]

A variant of this method is for the functioning shaman to dance during the beating of sticks, before throwing himself on the patient. With chattering teeth and shaking rattle, he revolves sunwise, his free arm bent at the elbow so that his wrist, which he shakes freely, is close to his chin; at intervals he calls out, snuaixwa. It is a serious and important proceeding to the Bella Coola, and the effects are considered nullified if a dog barks during the stick-beating. [535]

(4) Some powerful shamans cure by the use of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. A roll made of these two substances is placed among glowing embers until it is itself afire, when the shaman puts it in his mouth. After dancing for some time to the accompaniment of frenzied stick-beating, he hauls forth the bark, still burning, and again puts it in the fire. This is done four times. Then he thrusts the burning bark into the patient's mouth, and leaves it there for some time before pulling it forth. This, too, is repeated four times. When finally drawn forth, it has attracted the sickness, which can then be thrown away by the throwing away of the bark. It seems clear that this must be done by conjuring, but the writer was unable to learn the method employed, and was repeatedly assured that no subterfuge was used. [824] [535]

(5) One illness is caused by a person carelessly stepping on a dead salmon, such as dot the banks of the rivers in the autumn. The fish, indignant, injects a sickness into the offender. [753] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

755 offender. A shaman is able to diagnose the malady, and when
* 756 he has pulled it forth in the manner previously described, he ties it up in a bundle of four pieces of dyed, and four of undyed, [825] cedar-bark, sprinkles eagle down over the whole, and throws it into the river. This not only causes the sickness to return whence it has come, but placates the salmon who are glad to receive the beautiful cedar-bark.

755 (6) Another method is by making a present to Ṫlitcäp-
* 756 lilän·a. The shaman prepares four collars of hemlock twigs, 782 wrapped around with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, and with numerous cross-pieces of dyed cedar-bark. When these are ready, all assemble to witness the curing, and to assist the practitioner by beating sticks.
He first sets four basins, one at each corner of the fire, and then proceeds to pull it apart, leaving a glowing expanse of embers in the centre. The shaman throws on this bed pieces of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as well as eagle down, and [789] walks through, between the two halves of the separated fire.
Several men stated that they had seen this done, but none could give any information as to the method. If actually carried out, the way in which the fire was prevented from burning the shaman and the highly inflammable bark and eagle down has been lost.

The shaman himself now guides the beating of sticks. When the tumult has reached its height he goes to the patient and places over his head one of the collars, passing it right down over his body, breaking the cross strings of dyed cedar-bark as he does so. The patient rises and the shaman picks up the collar from beneath his feet; his body has thus passed entirely through it. The sick man then revolves once, sunwise, while the shaman carries the collar once, sunwise, around the fire. He then stills the beating of sticks, which has been going on throughout, and casts the circlet on the fire. The same procedure is repeated with the three remaining collars. It is believed that these offerings reach Ṫlitcäplilän·a who, pleased to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 As he sang, smoke could be seen rising from behind the house; the youth could see that it came from Porcupine's fire, but the song explained * 756 that it was eagle down for their mortal guest. The singer repeated his 775 song; more smoke ascended from another place, which the lad saw was Mountain Goat's fire. The song was sung again and again, and at each repetition new smoke could be seen, from the fires of Deer, Black Bear, Whistler, Marten, Beaver, Wolverine, in fact from all animals except Grizzly Bear. The chief explained to his guest that whenever he wanted meat he could go hunting and would be able to see the smoke rising from the fires of various animals.[9]

"Tomorrow you will return home," he continued. "Your brothers (meaning the four wolves that had eaten him) will go with you to carry some presents."

Next morning [it was really a year later] the wolves tied up gifts of smoked meat in blankets woven of goat wool and sewn blankets of whistler, black bear, and marten. The meat, though a large quantity, was reduced to so small a compass that the four animals carried it without difficulty. The five travelled back to the spot where the two brothers had sat down to make their moccasins, and at that point the wolves returned to their home.

Now for the first time the lad remembered his brother, and began to weep bitterly, thinking that he must be dead. But presently he heard the sound of footsteps inside the cave through which the porcupine had guided him; they grew nearer, until the younger boy emerged. The elder was overjoyed, but his delight was turned to dismay when he saw that his brother's face was green and haggard, with a strange expression; that he had lost all the flesh from his body, and that his clothes, the same that he had worn when they parted company, were torn to tatters. His brother's appearance affected him so much that he fell down dead. The younger lad, however, had been made a shaman by the dead, so he quickly restored his brother. They exchanged experiences; the younger saying that the dead had given him the name K̓ipdxs. His appearance was vastly improved when he clad himself in a black bear blanket and two whistler cloaks brought by the other from the village of the wolves. The two returned home, entering the house secretly and lying down at once [825] [9]To understand this the reader must remember the firm Bella Coola belief that all animals can assume different forms. To the ordinary person they appear as beasts, but in reality they lead lives resembling those of humans, having houses, fires, blankets, and other comforts. An individual who is able to see the smoke of [224] their fires will have no difficulty in finding the homes of the animals and hence will have great success in hunting. The only one this lad was to avoid was Grizzly Bear, who was so fierce that pursuing him would be dangerous.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One day the supernatural one appeared, asking Djusdju·sa to prepare a large number of the sticks and rings and be ready to follow him on the morrow. Djusdju·sa complied and the next day set off with his benefactor. They followed a well-worn trail, but one which Djusdju·sa had never seen, although he had lived all his life in the vicinity. 539* 787*

"You must follow me carefully," said the supernatural one, "and watch especially when I disappear."

Before long Djusdju·sa saw a man with a big hat sitting at the side of the road beneath the shelter of a huge cedar.

"You are going to a very dangerous place," said the man, "but nothing will harm you if you are bold. Soon you will reach a stream with four boulders projecting above the water; jump across in four leaps from stone to stone and you will be all right, but if you slip, or if you set your foot on the river-bottom, you will die."

The trail led across a stream at the bottom of a canyon. The supernatural one crossed without delay and Djusdju·sa saw that there were four boulders rising from the surface of the water. Remembering the instructions, he jumped from stone to stone, nor, until he looked back from the farther shore, did he realize that what had seemed to be stones were really the heads of four sḳāmtsk which would have devoured him if he had slipped.

The supernatural one had waited on the farther shore to guide him to his own house, the Sun, where he accepted the sticks and rings which Djusdju·sa had been carrying. After spending a few days with his benefactor, Djusdju·sa returned home, where he built a new village and in time became wealthy owing to the salmon which he was able to catch by means of his supernatural shoes.

THE LAD WHO WAS HELPED BY MOUNTAIN GOAT

During a famine long ago, a certain family was on the verge of starvation. One of the sons set out with his bow and arrows, and near a waterfall on the south side of North Bentinck Arm, not far from its head, he saw a pure white bird, something like a gull, only much smaller. He shot at it but missed. It went only a short distance away, and the hunter shot again, unsuccessfully. The bird led him on for some distance; then it turned into a goat. More eagerly than before the boy discharged his arrow, but the animal was unharmed. Following his quarry, he presently found himself within the goat's house, where all the animals were seated according to rank, from the ground-hog at the bottom to the porcupine at the top. In accordance with the knowledge of the latter's rank gained on this occasion, men have since called Porcupine, Qwat'- [825] ma'ks, "The Eldest," and have spoken of him as the oldest of all animals. His goat-guide said:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 *787 [825]

"I am going to help you on account of your woes. Henceforth you will be able to see the smoke rising from the houses of the different animals."[3]

Thanks to the assistance thus vouchsafed to him, the lad was able to save his family from starvation.

THE FORTUNATE GLUTTON[4]

About four generations ago there was living in Bella Coola a young man who had a prodigious appetite. He used to eat everything, including vast quantities of rotten salmon eggs and other putrid foods until arms, face, and stomach all became fat, oily, and flabby, and he gave off an offensive smell. He was a chief and had married a chief's daughter, but she left him because of his grease and stench. Then he took another girl, who in turn deserted him. His parents arranged for him one marriage after another until he had become the husband of every available chief's daughter, but not one would stay with him because of his objectionable odour. Finally he wedded a poor girl who alone remained faithful and bore him a child. The glutton determined to improve his appearance. Accordingly, he obtained a large quantity of mountain goat grease and eagle feathers; then, taking these with him, he left the village and his family without saying where he was going, in fact, he did not know himself.

He went up the west bank of the Necleetsconnay River until it became a mere brook, then crossed over and returned down the east bank, strewing his path with eagle feathers. Then he went up the north bank of the Bella Coola River, penetrating every affluent coming from the north; in each case he went up the west bank, crossed the stream when it had become a rivulet and descended on the east side, all the time leaving behind him a trail of eagle feathers, and all the time eating nothing but the goat grease which he carried with him. When he had penetrated far into the upper reaches of the Bella Coola River, he crossed it and descended its south bank, investigating all tributaries as before. Near the Whitewater he heard a number of young girls singing happily, and a little below this place he came to his own village.

[3]As every Bella Coola knows, the animals appear in beast form to mortals only. They really have their own houses, dances, and other forms of activity in which they partake in human shape. Any one who is fortunate enough to obtain supernatural aid enabling him to see the smoke from their houses can easily locate them, and thus have phenomenal success in hunting.

[224]

[4]For another version of this story see Boas, p. 108.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to the bear-man's home she awoke, thinking she had slept but a single night, for she did not realize that a night to the supernatural ones is a year to mortals. Her bear-host asked which of her brothers she would prefer to see. 539* 756* 787*

"The eldest," she replied.

"No," responded the bear. "He is a shameless man who is wont to sleep with his wife at all periods."

"Then I should like to see my second brother," she said.

But again the bear refused, saying: "He spends all his time combing his wife's hair to make her appear beautiful. Choose your youngest brother; he is the best of the family."

To this she agreed, so the bear threw out his power and compelled the youngest brother to pass near the hiding-place. While they were still at a distance, the bear saw the man and his dog, whereat he pointed them out to the woman, who threw a snowball down the hillside for the dog to chase. After a fruitless pursuit it returned to its master. Another snowball was thrown, which again the dog failed to retrieve. When this was repeated four times the man concluded that a bear must be near.[28] He crawled up until he saw his sister, in the guise of a bear; he had even fixed an arrow on the string ready to shoot when she assumed human form and greeted him. He was delighted at finding his long-lost sister, and she was amazed at hearing that she had been absent for a year. She took her brother into the mountain to get her basket and pack her goods, but he was unable to see the town of the bears until she rubbed her hands over his eyes. Then it became visible to him also. They returned home together, where she recounted her marvellous adventures.

At that early period there was less distinction between men and animals than now exists; each understood the language of the other, but though bears have retained their original supernatural powers men have degenerated to such an extent that they can no longer communicate with animals.[29] It was true, men shot animals, but that was because Ālquntăm had allotted them to men as food. The bear had chosen the woman as his mate because she was still a virgin, and therefore not contaminated by too much of the essence of humanity. Through intercourse with this supernatural being she became a shaman, with a knowledge of the wishes of bears, even then not properly understood. Her continence, followed by intercourse with the bear, gave her insight into the mentality of the animal. Following her mate's instructions, she taught her youngest [825]

[28] The story fails to explain why.

[29] This interpolation in the myth was added by the narrator, without solicitation, as a natural explanation of the facts described.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Causative Medicines

MEDICINES OF INFANCY

789 To Cause Tallness

As soon as the umbilical cord is cut, blow upon it and pull 856 it out; the infant will grow up to be tall and big.

The following medicines are applied four days after birth:

The infant is washed, formerly in a circular cedar or cottonwood basin, and the remedy pressed against its body while drying. Some families prefer to wait until the child is able to crawl.

To Cause Strength (three means)

[824] [825] (1) Collect four pieces of bark, each from a different tree where a grizzly bear has scratched. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over his body. This ensures him the strength of a grizzly bear.

(2) Collect four water-smoothed, green stones from the river. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over the body. After four days, return the stones to the river.

[825] (3) Warm the body of an octopus, beaver, or wolverine in the smoke of a fire and gently press the carcass against an infant's body, saying:

"Please, may he be like you."

This provides the child with the strength of the animal used.

To Cause Long Life

[886] [824] Collect four pieces of wood which have been rolled hard and smooth in a landslide. Boil them in the infant's wash-bowl, cool, then re-warm them at a fire and rub them over the body. This makes him strong and healthy, able to endure all dangers and weaknesses even those caused by a sorcerer. The principle is that the child will be as hardy as the wood proved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

itself to be by withstanding the crushing weight of stone and earth. An old Kimsquit man expressed the firm conviction that his great age was the result of this treatment soon after birth. 789 856 886 [824]

To Cause Imperviousness to Cold

Kill a water ouzel, warm it at a fire, then press it against every part of the infant's body. This makes him as heedless of cold water as the bird. A merganser may be used in the same way, or the foot of one be placed in the child's hand and patted as his fingers clutch it. 789 825 856

To Cause a Quarrelsome Disposition

Burn the nest of wasps and rub the ashes on the infant's face. He will become as bellicose and quick to resent injury as the insects. One old man who habitually beats his wife explains that this is involuntary, since he was treated in this way when a child. Fighting is no longer allowed, so the only person on whom he can exercise his martial ardour is his wife. The woman regards this treatment as a matter of course and the reason is accepted as valid by her associates. [155]

To Cause Success in Thieving

Kill a pack-rat, warm it at a fire, and rub the carcass lightly over the infant's body. This will make him as successful a thief as the animal. Other methods are to cut off a foot and pat this as the infant clutches it in his fingers, or to rub its hands with the ashes of a burnt rat.

To Cause Success in Singing

Catch a live robin or smıxmıxaxls (probably one of the thrushes), warm it at a fire, and rub it lightly against the infant's throat, saying: 533 789 825

"May he be a singer like you." 856

Then release the bird, and the child will grow up a songster. The following story is told of the power of the smıxmıxaxls's song: [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 In the beginning of time it used to sing.

789 "I shall use a spoon and eat when the Bella Coola River has burst its bounds on account of the teeming salmon in it."

825 The people used to laugh as it repeated this song year after year, until the bird changed its note:

856 "I shall use a spoon and eat when all is cold and clear. Then there [539] will be Death instead of salmon in Bella Coola."

The next year the streams were so clear that no fish could be caught and the starving people asked the bird to return to its first song. When it did so, the water became murky so that it was possible to catch salmon once more.

The Bella Bella, not the Bella Coola, use the body of a blue jay to cause an infant to grow up with the ability to master difficult tunes in the same way that the bird has a variety of notes. The method of applying this medicine could not be learnt.

789 Most of the above medicines are well known and can be applied by any parent. If, however, a man has employed one 856 of them successfully on a number of occasions, he is often requested to use his ability for others. In such a case, the father of the benefited child is expected to reimburse his friend. [184] The application or non-application of such medicines is purely the concern of the child's family; they can use as many as they like, or none at all, according to their discretion.

The following medicines are used during the first year of life:

304 To Cause Beauty

789 Bandages of the softest undyed cedar-bark are prepared for infants of both sexes soon after birth. A woman who is a good 856 artist is requested to draw with charcoal two pictures on one 532 of the pieces of bark—of handsome men if the child is a boy, or of lovely women if a girl. An unmarked wrapping is fastened round the infant's head, then the painted one so arranged that one picture is over the forehead, the other over the occiput, and finally other plain bandages to cover the whole. These [826] are left in place for about one year. They flatten the forehead and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856

To Cause Left-handedness [825]

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Hakwik (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [858]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

856 789 868 To Cause Ability in Carpentry (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good carpenter to impart to him ability similar to his own. He spits on his tools and rubs these over the child's heart, saying:

"Please be a carpenter."

This is done only for male children.

(2) Cut splinters from the tools of an expert carpenter, burn them, and rub the ashes over the child's hands. This is most efficacious when performed by the carpenter himself who says as he rubs:

"Please be a carpenter."

000 To Cause Ability in Thieving

Indians from the vicinity of Sitka are said to fasten a live mouse in an infant's clothing or tie one in the cradle. This causes the child to amass riches easily, but when practised by a Sitka man and woman who were slaves of the Bella Coola it was so potent that their son grew up to be an inveterate thief.

825 856 789 To Cause Ability to See Beneath the Water

When the infant is in the cradle, kill a gull, cut out its tongue, and rub this around inside the child's mouth. Strip the feathers and lay them so that the infant sleeps upon them. This gives him the same ability as the bird to see beneath the ocean and tell where fish are to be found. This was done not many years ago to a Bella Bella child whose ability was consequently so great that it frightened his friends.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

The Kitlobe achieve this by making a child sleep upon dog hair. No instance is remembered of this having actually been practised by the Bella Coola, although, being well known, there is no reason why it should not be used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following: 856 789

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, Alquntăm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young. 856 886

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is preserved with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin- 846 856 789 [858] [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Strength

Place pieces of octopus flesh in the infant's bowl and wash him with these. This causes him to grow up with the strength of the animal.

825
856
789

To Cause Understanding of the Speech of Ravens

When a child is able to toddle, but has not learnt to talk, shut him in a box and turn this upside down. Leave him alone for four days and four nights, passing in what food is necessary during darkness.

Knowledge of this medicine was learnt from ilhaz, a female slave born near New Westminster who was owned by the maternal grandfather of the wife of the elderly Kimsquit man from whom this information was obtained. The slave's father had treated her in this way when an infant; while so confined she had not only learnt the language of ravens, but Cowichan, her own speech, as well. ilhaz used to tell the Kimsquit people of her ability, but few believed her, though she asserted that this was a well-known Cowichan method, and her captors had their own means of imparting the same ability to their children, as well as an ancient tradition of the practice she described. One day she informed her master that the ravens had told her of the near approach of a raiding-party. He summoned the chiefs, but they laughed at the warning and disregarded it. ilhaz received the same intimation for four days, and on the fourth the raiders appeared and she was vindicated.

The inversion of the box is due to the belief that ravens, when bringing news, turn over upon themselves like tumbler pigeons. The Bella Coola do not know whether the box must be so right as to hold the child upside down.

To Cause Ceremonial Intelligence

When a child is one or two years of age, paint on its back the picture of a black bear's gall-bladder. Leave this in position for four days, then wash it off secretly in a mountain stream. A child so treated will grow up with ability to perform

856
789
532

1:b4c:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.

[592] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-
[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence [815] that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes. A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [222] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious,
791 and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Alqunkim, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere washing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Apiky

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Kill a squirrel, clean it, wash the entrails carefully and leave them hanging in the sun to dry for four days, then tie them around the child's stomach for four days more. It is important that the infant should not break the string. On the fourth day, remove them and hang them in the doorway of the house. On this same day, another squirrel must be killed, treated as before, and its viscera allowed to dry for four days. The child wears these in the same way for four days, when they too are hung in the doorway. A third squirrel, and finally a fourth, is killed and made use of in precisely the same manner. When the final set of entrails has been hung up, the four are left suspended for four days, till the twenty-eighth after the killing of the first animal, when the father takes them to the forest and deposits them beneath some projecting rock where no water can penetrate and where they will dry and keep indefinitely. 825 789 856

This causes the child to grow up endowed, like the squirrel, with agility so that he can scale even precipitous mountains. This medicine is frequently used in conjunction with one for hunting ability.

To Cause Easy Delivery [845]

Place the foetus of a porcupine against the back of a girl's neck and allow it to drop to the ground. Pick it up, replace it, and let it fall again. This is repeated four times while the person says:

"Please, may she be like you and have no trouble in giving birth."

This medicine can be used at any time before puberty.

To Cause Bravery (four means)

(1) When a grizzly bear has been shot, a lad who wishes to make himself brave approaches it and thrusts his arm down the dying animal's throat. This kills it by choking. Then he rubs his hand over his heart and the back of his neck, the seat [874]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825 789
856
[774]

of the spirit, which imparts to himself the courage and strength of the animal he has just slain.

(2) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, the bloody pelt is wrapped around a lad whose parents wish him to be brave. He is lashed in securely and the bundle, attached to a long rope, is thrown into the rapids. After a few minutes, it is drawn ashore, but immediately thrown in again. This is repeated four times. This medicine causes the child to have the courage of a grizzly bear. It is said that the first youth to whom this was applied rescued his mother from slavery among the Tsimshian.

This treatment is usually applied to boys of from three to five years of age.

(3) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, two lads, whose parents wish them to be brave, are called. They are told to crouch on their hands and knees and while in this position the pelt is thrown over their backs. They crawl to and fro for a few minutes while dogs are encouraged to bark and growl at the "animal." The skin is then removed and the two sent to wash in the river. They are called back and the whole rite repeated a second time, followed by a third and a fourth application, with washing in every case. This gives them the bravery of grizzly bears.

This medicine can be used at any time before the holding of sexual intercourse.

(4) When an octopus has been killed, a lad is placed within the freshly removed skin. Those present say:

"Please, may he be like you, afraid of nothing."

The skin is removed and the lad sent to wash in the river. The rite is repeated four times which gives him the bravery of an octopus. Like the last, this medicine is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse.

To Cause Ability in River Work

Fasten a boy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw the bundle into the river. Lift it out when it has gone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beneath the surface, and throw it in a second time. Repeat 825 this four times. If the wrapping has been carefully fastened, 789 little water leaks in and the child suffers no discomfort. This causes him to grow up confident and brave with regard 856 to canoeing and every kind of activity on the river. Like the last medicine, this is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse. It cannot be applied to a girl since beaver are unfavourable to women who must observe many taboos concerning them.

To Cause Modesty and Respect for One's Elders

When a boy is about six or eight years of age, his father 789 beats him lightly, four times, with a rope-end. This is done 856 in the early morning, then he takes his son to wash immediately. Four days later the beating and washing are repeated. From this time on, a parent should whip his son four times every fourth morning until he is old enough to marry. The force of the chastisements increases as the lad grows older, so that when he is about fourteen years of age, he is beaten with the full force of his parent's arm. It is a point of honour [152] for a lad to endure his whippings without whimpering; one who shows the pain he is suffering is laughed at by his fellows and not allowed to wash with them. This medicine makes a child strong, manly, respectful to his elders, and, generally, the type of individual to whom supernatural beings are likely to show favour.

This practice has long been discontinued and it was impos- [178] sible to learn whether or not it had ever been carried out with full vigour. Several of the older men stated that in their childhood they had been beaten periodically by their fathers, but none had had this last over a period of years. It was claimed that such had been the case in earlier times, but it seems almost certain that this type of chastisement could never have been carried out regularly. During the winter, for example, when dance dances were taking place, the whole community used to sleep late and it is improbable that a father rose every fourth

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

box during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kälotl had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Kwa·tsua placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kälotl tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Kwa·tsua washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kälotl to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 832

This medicine can be made only by a skilful carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 833

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 886 825

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 842 789

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex

789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

843 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)

789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk

757 Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy

789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:

825 "Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life

Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:

825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.

886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so ensnared are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that one man accidentally sucked when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its master could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dyed and undyed cedar-bark. 789 825 886

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

To Cause Obesity 789

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten. 826 622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an aqaxon·i (varied thrush?) alive and pat it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying: 533 789

"May she be a singer like you." 825

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

To Cause Ability in Hunting 224

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained. 789 824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Heat the penis of a mountain goat or beaver at a fire. 789 821

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the ocean or a river, saying: 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 "Please, may it be as it was when you held intercourse."
821 The basis of these medicines is that mountain goats and 825 beaver mate in November when it is cold, and deer in October when it is rainy.

An old Kimsquit man mentioned that one winter he had been driven ashore by continuous cold winds and was on the verge of starving. He slew a buck and by using the medicine just described was able to bring rain with consequent lessening of wind so that he could continue his journey.

MALEVOLENT MEDICINES

754 To Destroy the Benefits of Another's Ceremonial Chastity
825 Place pieces of flesh from any recently skinned animal within a coffin from which the skeleton of an enemy has been removed, uttering at the same time the name of the person to be injured. This destroys the "cleanness" acquired by the observance of ceremonial chastity.[3]

To Cause Insanity in a Woman

Catch a squirrel alive and tie one of the woman's hairs around its stomach; then release the animal. As it runs violently through the forest, sometimes head upwards, sometimes head downwards, so will the brain of the person whose hair it is carrying begin to churn violently till madness ensues.

To Cause Ferocity in Grizzly Bears

Throw the body of a recently killed muskrat against a man's back. The next grizzly bear he encounters will be ferocious, and may kill him. Knowledge of this medicine was learnt by noticing that a number of men who had been struck in play with muskrats, were killed by grizzly bears. The potency of the act has since been recognized.

754 To Cause Disease in a Malefactor
727 A number of years ago, when three Bella Coola were killed

[3]This medicine was learnt from a rather unsatisfactory informant and was not confirmed by others.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy and Childhood

789 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

774 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of 843 a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing invol-825 untary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to post-[846] pone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve
825 a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days
789 after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built [846] beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will [761] die during infancy, though the means by which the slain ani-[774] mals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [761]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 755 [761]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 regard to two figurines prepared to cause love has been described.

755 In addition to these non-specialized medicines, the Bella Coola are acquainted with remedies for several specific ailments caused by supernatural beings. One of these, to cure a person in whose head a toad was formed, has already been described.

To Prevent Blindness

[753] Loss of sight is caused by a bat flying into a man's face, or [825] by a raven's dropping falling upon him as he looks upward. After either accident, rub a feather from any bird in a raven's liver and draw it across the eyes. The person practising this [785] cure must remain continent for one year or blindness will result.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Leg

If a man puts his foot in a hole so that he stumbles and falls, he will lose the use of that leg unless he counteracts the danger by placing a small stick upright in the cavity. In the summer of 1922 the writer noticed an old Bella Coola, with whom he was walking in the woods, break off a branch about two feet in length and place it in a hole where he had stumbled. He could give no explanation for his act, except that failure would cause him to lose the use of that leg.

To Prevent Paralysis of the Feet

If a person should happen to set his bare feet upon a dead wolf, he will lose the use of his lower limbs. The antidote to this has been forgotten within recent years, and patients are merely treated by shamans.

755 To Prevent the Revenge of a Ghost

775 The ghost of a murdered person usually tries to avenge himself on his killer, who can protect himself by obtaining a small piece from the body or clothing of his victim, a tuft of hair, a shred of cloth, or even a piece of earth from above his

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

262

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating 796 the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a 574 flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by [865] having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark.

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be 226 driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full [562] time to the task, working with zest and energy.[1] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, smuxmuxaxts, which signifies that the [825] nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as:

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[2]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet 226 and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish 796 are relatively complicated. [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[1] For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[2] Cf. Boas, p. 71.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322 carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825 boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be present should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 856 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this 827 custom is known.[a]

[a] This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 300.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

It is said that, in former times, the kukusiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukusiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ABOUT THE DANCES

A detailed description of various kusiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nusqulxwaista. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

THE DANCE OF Noākynum[14]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Noākynum, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[14]Cf. Boas, p. 40.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien·a, whence its captain leaps to Nusqulxwaista to await the coming of Ālīquntām. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nebusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noākynim lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [785] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [626] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Noākynim, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noākynim 575 is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river 796 the kusiut dances begin.
[184]

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, [424] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [551] slight variations, if any. In Tsmoti the kusiut who has the prerogative of seeing Noākynim is a certain Qaxolāx·i,[11] in Kimsquit, Ātuskinwasam,[12] and in Slskistl, Xemtnim. Although,

[115] [11]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qaxolāx·i, who intimated
[426] that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578] referred to the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[12]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qothm he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

Alquntäm enters Nusqulxwaista at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noäkynum seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaisn-a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noäkynum empties a large number of olachen into the river.[11] X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut.

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noäkynum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noäkynum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Imäätundjutqulxan, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

[11] Nuskynum is accordingly often called Nuskulxum.

[The Mystery Dance]

what are to be the correct answers? The marshals decide on these, but their judgment really depends on the four remembrancers who are able to tell whether any of the replies they suggest have already been given. When Saiynâ: performed, the answers chosen were: 575* 796*

Aimaltua, "The Coming of Foul Weather." This word is said to be in the language of the supernatural ones. The implication is that this phenomenon of nature is a manifestation of the will of the supreme deity. [821] [776]

Nuxpuxta Smaiaikila, "The Eagle Down Smaiaikila." This has the significance of "The Peace Giving Smaiaikila" since eagle down is a symbol of peace. [825]

Kitlmuntämem, "The Yawning Chasm." This is the mysterious crevasse which opens before a foolish man when he tries to gain success. In cases where a white man would attribute misfortune to lack of ability or to sheer bad luck, the Bella Coola say that this supernatural chasm has opened before him. It is especially applied to failure in the giving of potlatches. [777]

Scarcely less important than the choice of answers is the second consideration, who is to give them. The uninitiated have been taught that X cannot live unless his riddles are answered, and also that whoever succeeds in solving them can do so only through supernatural assistance. As in the case of a person who finds a repository, so must the one who solves the problem be made a kusiut. This is an opportunity for an influential man with a son of suitable age and character to have him initiated into the society, and an eager parent can always be found. He is told the proper answers, and instructed to whisper them to his son the following evening. It is impressed upon the father that this must be done only at the last minute, and that every precaution must be taken to prevent the young man from telling his friends that he has been prompted.

Other matters are arranged at the same time. A shaman must be in readiness to assist in binding the future member of the society to secrecy, and every detail is worked out with care. [756]

[The Mystery Dance]

* 575 with fatal results to his victims. The uninitiated listen and
* 796 are impressed as Ano'likwolsaix confirms and supplements what has just been told them.

532 After a short pause, the announcer cries, O·····, 796 which serves as an invitation and precedes the appearance of every supernatural being. Snuuq emerges, a man clad in a bear-skin blanket covered with evergreen tufts, and wearing a mask of which the eyes can be made to swing open or shut by the pulling of concealed cords. The monster does not speak; merely circles the fire, terrifying the beholders by his ferocious expression. When the figure has withdrawn, the announcer explains the significance.

The next to appear is a Deer, Sno'elxults Ałquntäm, "The Foolish Son of Ałquntäm." The skin and antlers of a real deer are worn by two men with sticks thrust down the legs to make the representation appear life-like. Two more performers with human masks follow, trying to catch the creature which frisks around the fire and avoids them by escaping back into the enclosure. The announcer informs the audience that this is no ordinary animal, it is a deer from the land above, the son of Ałquntäm. This mischievous creature is said frequently to [578] destroy the back-room in his father's house, hence it is a mild term of reproach to call a person Sno'elxults Ałquntäm.

After the usual delay comes the Varied Thrush, an actor
• [825] with mask representing a bird. This is considered to be the finest bird songster; the Bella Coola say that all animals, including even mountain goats and halibut, gather to listen to its melody. The performer sings, then withdraws, and the announcer and Ano'likwolsaix explain who has just disappeared.

Next is Wolf, a man wearing a tail and the stuffed head of one of these animals. He circles the fire, howling like a wolf, the performer having been chosen for his ability to imitate that sound. The announcer tells the uninitiated that they have just seen a wolf from Nusqulwaists, and have listened to it howling for Ałquntäm; as usual, Ano'likwolsaix confirms his has retired from sight. Ano'likwolsaix gives her customary dance, her head bent as if she constantly wished to rest it on someone's shoulder, and her opposite arm waving violently. After one circuit of the fire she withdraws from sight behind the matting. Then the marshals tell the uninitiated to withdraw, and the growling Cannibals hurry them forth. The evening's ceremonials conclude in the usual way, except that the masks are not burnt.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The length of time required for the figures to appear and perform is so great that nakusam can seldom be completed on a single night. When the marshals decide that it is too late for further drama, they can call a postponement at any time; the uninitiated are told to withdraw and the kukusiut disperse shortly afterwards. The following evening they are recalled and the ritual is carried on from the point where the break was made. In this account it has been assumed that it is possible to complete the display without postponement.

Four nights later everyone is called back once again. The kukusiut first take their places, and then the uninitiated are summoned. The ritual on this occasion is identical with that just described for nakusam with the same promenade of supernatural beings and the same explanations by Ano'likwolsaix. After the uninitiated depart the masks are burnt, two at a time, in the manner previously described, this being the last event in the Mystery Dance.

THE DANCE OF Wiwuna

Noakgnum is not, according to Bella Coola mythology, the only bringer of salmon to the river, nor is he the only one whose action has been dramatized as a kusiut dance. A similar purveyor of fish is Wiwuna[a] who comes every year to Bella Coola. Boas (p. 38) has recorded the origin myth connected with the rite, and states that the movements of this being influence the duration of the kusiut season; this observation was not confirmed. Wiwuna is supposed to return from the

[a] Also called Kaukuatlatat, "What Brings Our Food."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

575
796
976
825
184
824

land of the salmon early in January, and it is owing to his successful raid that there is a plentiful supply of fish the following year. The fact that the Bella Coola attribute the same function to Nuákpaw provides no difficulties to native philosophers.

"Different individuals have different stories," they say, and the fact that the two are contradictory is a matter of no consequence.

793
824
825
539

The incidents described in the following myth are always spoken of as having taken place long ago, and yet the coming of Wiwaina is an annual event, a confusion disconcerting to the investigator though not to the Bella Coola themselves.

Wiwaina[*] once led a raiding party against the salmon, whose home is far to the west, and against the herrings who live in a flat and warm country beyond even the land of salmon. His crew consisted of birds who are spoken of in the myth by unusual designations, said to be either their supernatural or their hamat names. One informant spoke of these beings as individuals, and only added that they were birds as an afterthought, while another emphasized their avian rather than their human characteristics. This is not surprising, considering that the story belongs to the distant past when birds and human beings were not as clearly differentiated as they now are. Wiwaina's crew consisted of:

The Bald Eagle, Tcíkwat;
The Hawk (?) species, Awáqinkwin;
The Raven, 'Ináwaqkinin, "He Who Talks at Dawn and Wakens Everyone";
The Water Ouzel, Títtaxwatkiks, "The Walking One";
The Great Blue Heron, Maxwíllaw, "Long Neck";
The Hummingbird, Ala'yaw;
The Cormorant, Kwakwá'la, who joined the expedition as Bella Bella as a passenger;
Four lazy supernatural beings, Xmaíkhl.

The expedition was under the special protection of Kulaxa, a female supernatural shaman, who guided the canoe in which the raiders travelled by the force of her intellect as if it had been a compass. After a lengthy journey, the party reached the land of the salmon where the clouds obligingly drifted low in the heavens so that the fish could not see their

[*] A word etymologically connected with wine, the Bella Coola have the raid.

[192]

Sidwell Swanton E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of Winwina]

fish. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 993

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Gbalálmus, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nawatlámmum, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 534

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Ánskhmain, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Sqaiáitus, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the coho salmon, Sqaqamaxwalain, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Gúipus, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of heavy captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola kukuxtas have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Wiwaina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Mqaxwáw placed the name Nawaxkwai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Ba, near Sisaa. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Wiwaina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nawaxkwai has had the kukuxt prerogative of seeing Wiwaina. 824 993 998 [996]

A: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Dance of Winwina]

*575 *946 532 kinds of salmon captured by Winwina. In their efforts to make realistic representations, the artisans often use the skins of steel-head salmon, the only variety obtainable in winter, stretched over wooden frames, and painted. Various women are asked to make imitations of berries captured by the Humpbackedfish. In each case X requests one woman to make a certain berry, root, or bark used for food, and so many are needed that he often becomes weary from constantly calling out his requirements. As on other occasions, the songs are practised, food is served, and the usual ceremonies occur.

The next morning, that of qulow, the carpenters, both men and women, start early at their work. The method of making the salmon has already been described, but a word should be said about the berries. They are made of dyed cedar-bark, undyed cedar-bark, and snow-berries, the only material available in winter. The workmanship varies enormously; some realistic articles are turned out, others are exceedingly crude. In the evening both kukwiat and uninitiated are summoned to X's house for the usual protracted ceremony of qulow night.

*575 *946 *525 Nakawm follows the next day. The wooden salmon and berries are placed in a convenient spot behind the fire, and in the evening X asks some one of the senior kukwiat to assist him in their display. Sometimes one of the marshals undertakes this duty, and at any rate they have to express their approval of the dancer's choice. The kukwiat are the first to assemble, and when the last details have been arranged the uninitiated are called in and seated at the canoe behind the fire. The kukwiat chosen to assist X stands beside it, holding the wooden spring salmon in his arms, its head upstream.

"What is it?" he asks the uninitiated. "If you recognize which salmon it is you will be successful in catching that kind next summer."

The uninitiated are thus urged to guess, but four of the kukwiat acts as a dancer, and it is often some little time before a plucky youth calls out which salmon he thinks it is

2:66 Cowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[The Dance of Winning]

he. Once the first answer has been given, it is only a matter of a few minutes before some alert young man gives the successful reply.

"Yes," says the tsaxiat holding the salmon. "It is a spring salmon, called Ohuldimat by the supernatural beings. Tsitsaat captured it."

The bearer goes once around the fire, still holding the salmon, while the tsakaxiat women drum and the sticks are pounded furiously. Four times during his circuit he tosses the fish in his arms as if it were jumping, and all the tsakaxiat call out ya—— ha——, as they do when a salmon jumps in the river. He finally throws the fish on the central fire and the beating of sticks stops with almost startling suddenness. The same tsaxiat next picks up the wooden representation of a sockeye salmon and the same procedure is carried out; it too is thrown on the fire when its species has been ascertained. In succession, imitations of hump-back, dog, and coho salmon are displayed and cast in the flames. It is seldom that the uninitiated realize that the fish are being shown in the order of their coming in the spring, and their consequent failure to answer promptly is a source of considerable secret amusement to the tsakaxiat. The Bella Bella dog salmon, held with its head downstream, is the last fish shown. The representation is always made long and lean, to the annoyance of the Bella Bella, and when the holder makes it jump, the people call out nothing but ha——.

Soon after the last salmon has been burnt the displayer holds up the first bunch of "berries" and calls on the young uninitiated women to guess what kind is represented.

"If you guess right, you will find plenty of them next summer," he says.

Somewhat shyly the girls register their guesses, but the choice of berries is so great and the workmanship so poor that a considerable time often elapses before the correct answer is given. As soon as this is done, the exhibitor carries the fruit around the fire and throws them on the flames in the same

Hillcrowith E-9 (922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Thunder]

verbal to physical arguments, and one occasion is remembered 575* when the latter was shoved from a canoe into the river. 796*

In the evening the kusiut are first called in, to be followed by the uninitiated in due course. Thunder dances in the manner already described, though, if possible, with even more vigour and abandon than when he was only one of the performers in the Mystery dance. As recorded in that dance, he performs twice, on the second occasion carrying a rattle containing burning shred of cedar-bark. After each circuit of the central fire, Rainwater appears and drenches the audience, as rain accompanies a thunder-storm. The dramatic skill displayed is always impressive, and a touch of comic realism is added by the iterated remarks of Tlogots who does his utmost to believe Thunder. 776 [522]

The time-beater for the expert dancer, Nixps, appears after Rainwater. When the ceremonial is carried out with care, he wears a skull mask to show that he is a ghost who has come from the land below in answer to the call of Alxwolitnem. As he beats time he sings a wordless song of the dead. The skill of Nixps as a dancer is due to the fact that he is a yearling mountain goat among supernatural beings. The uninitiated look forward with eagerness to witnessing a remarkable dance, but after a few violent contortions the performer withdraws, followed by the musicians. [532] [533]

It would be needless repetition to enumerate all the supernatural beings who follow, so mention will be made only of those who are considered specially appropriate to the Thunder dance and who are accordingly shown on almost all occasions. Winter Wren is a masked figure which hops about in an agile manner similar to that of the bird on this earth, and Rabbit Alxwolitnem simulates the movements of an earthly rabbit. Ana'lik-[532] ulnem explains to the uninitiated that Thunder would like to taste the flesh of mortals but that he is too big and too hot to approach them, so sends Mosquito as his messenger. The masked figure representing that insect carries a stick about one foot in length beneath his blanket, and runs around the house [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Murdered Slave]

*575 *796 women drone, then she leaves the house, ostensibly to return to her repository up the valley.

The singers at once begin to compose a new song, describing X's visitor and something of her history. The ritual that follows is that of the ordinary lsuxtämem and requires no special description. On the night of nusiustälsap a large number of [532] masks are ordered, including one series representing wasps, another of young lads, and still another of the latter with swollen faces. The only other part of the dance with a distinctive ritual is that of nakusam.

In the early evening the kukusiut assemble in X's house to [532] inspect the enormous wasps' nest which the carpenters have [178] erected behind the fire. In recent years this has been made of canvas, taking the place of matting. Within are several stages, on which the defenders stand, each a kusiut wearing a wasp's mask and carrying a miniature bow and arrow. The attackers are other members of the society chosen for their small stature and armed with clubs and branches; each wears a boy's mask and each carries a second, representing the same individual with badly swollen face. Considerable time is required to perfect the arrangements and select the performers, but at last all is in readiness and the uninitiated are called in.

They marvel at the enormous wasps' nest and presently [714] witness an assault on it. The attackers, protected by armour, valiantly beat on the structure with clubs as they swing their [825] branches as if brushing away the angry insects; this is the way that boys normally attack a wasps' nest. The defenders discharge their arrows and at intervals one of the attackers calls out in pain and falls down, presently rising with badly swollen face. The uninitiated do not realize that he has slipped the second mask from beneath his blanket to his face. X stands at one side, throwing his arm with a sweeping motion in the direction of the combat, while Ana'lätwalsair gives her customary explanations. At last the nest is beaten down whereupon one of the Cannibals begins to growl and the uninitiated rush away. The ritual concludes in the usual way.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 but the kukusiut all understand that later performances by *796 those with the same name are only possible with the assistance of carpenters. This dance has not been carried out for so many years that the details have been forgotten.

THE DANCE OF THE BIRDS

*575 The Bella Coola notice that in autumn many of the birds
*796 disappear, to be seen no more until spring. Ignorant of a warmer climate to the south and of the causes of migration, ●825 they explain the phenomenon by saying that Alquntäm collects [776] the birds in some mysterious place for the winter and releases them in the spring. It is believed that he does the same with supernatural birds in the land above. The setting free of the [424] birds, which is in effect a scattering, is known as nasquekstl
[551] and is personified; he is the patron of a kusiut named Qwete. For the nuhusam of this man's dance a huge circular cage con-[532] taining wooden birds is constructed. By means of a regular maze of hidden strings they are made to "fly," to the extreme amazement of the uninitiated. This is one of the most complicated kusiut rites. Contrary to the usual practice, no eagle down is used for fear that it might settle on the strings and betray their existence to the spectators.

THE DANCE OF DARKNESS AND SLEEP

*575 The patron of this dance is a being who has the power of *796 bringing nightfall, and later, sleep. In accordance with his 776 double function, a dual personality is attributed to him. In 821 fact, he is almost two beings; as Sneplamisit, "Darkness," he [513] causes night to come once every twenty-four hours, whereupon [532] as Stritema, he brings sleep. His kusiut protégé displays on [424] nuhusam figures with black painted masks, representing both phases of his patron.

THE DANCE OF THE WHIRLWIND

Whirlwinds, though of rare occurrence in British Columbia, are known to the Bella Coola who believe that they are caused by the being Swalniarwanem. Like all supernatural creatures,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Whirlwind usually remains in the land above but sometimes visits this earth. He is patron for a kuxiut who displays a mask representing him in characteristic form, the design of which is said never to vary.

575 * 796 * 776 [821] [532]

THE DANCE OF THE EARTHQUAKE

The Bella Coola believe that an earthquake is caused by the earth slipping very slightly from the grasp of Snimia. This being is patron for certain kukuxiut and whenever a tremor occurs, his protégés call their associates and a dance is held. This may, of course, be at any season, and the ritual during spring or summer is identical with that described for dancers whose patrons are Thunder, the Sun, or the Moon. The theme of the song is of the manner in which Snimia performs his function of holding the world. A call from Snimia may also come in the normal manner to one of his protégés during the ceremonial season, but the ritual is of the usual type and merits no special description. In Kimsquit, Snimia is patron to a kuxiut named Ałłhałłałałais.

[825] [533] [551]

THE DANCE OF TIDE-MEASURER

The height to which the tides shall rise is decided by a male supernatural being, Mimłałałc-swm, "Tide-Measurer." He is patron of a kuxiut named Tsłł, whose repository is near Sałłc. One of Tsłł's ancestors brought the rite with him from above in the beginning of time. The songs used at the dance describe how Tide-Measurer uses a stick in deciding how far the waters shall rise. During the day of sałłcum the uninitiated are told to go to their houses but, by peering round the corners and through chinks, as they always do, they are able to see a masked figure walk into the ocean, and thrust down to the bottom a stick which he carries. This is repeated four times during the day.

[825] [551] [776] [533]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL BULL-HEAD

Since any supernatural being can act as patron to kuxiut dancers, and since all mammals and birds are, in a sense, super-

[825] ●

*575 natural, any of them can act in this capacity, though it is *796 usually added that the animal in question is the one resident 776 in the land above. One patron of this type is the ordinary ●825 river bull-head. It is said that long ago this fish wanted to [773] follow his friends, the salmon, to the ocean, but was persuaded to remain in the river to act as nurse to their children in his house, the river bottom. Early in the world's history he objected to people exposing his dwelling, that is, pulling up the [821] stones from the river-bed where he was wont to lie, and showed [224] his resentment by sending a very cold wind. Ever since that time boys are not allowed to fish for bull-heads in winter. As far as could be learnt, this dance has no special features.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL HERRING-HEAD

One of the supernatural beings living in the land above who is patron for a certain kwiat is the head of a female herring. Little is known of this being, even her appearance is subject to [532] doubt. For the nuhwam of her protégé, a number of masks representing herring, as well as human-like beings, are prepared. When the uninitiated are present, one of the disguised figures calls to his fellows to bring their nets and capture the fish.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL DOG SALMON

Another fish dwelling in the land above is Dakdakdwas, the supernatural dog salmon. He is patron of some kwiat but the ritual of the dance, known as cendwamnis, was not obtained. The similarity between Dakdakdwas and Dakdakdwaxwa, those who await Nakkpnas, appears merely to be an accidental re-[192] semblance in terminology, dependent upon a stem meaning "to come," or "coming." The significance of this in connection with the supernatural dog salmon could not be ascertained.

*575
*796 776
184
[755]

THE DANCE OF Almaphaikila

In Kimsquit it is believed that Ewi'Ukwalaik has a husband, Almaphaikila, who is patron for several kwiat dancers. His function is to restore to life any uninitiated who chance to where they settled. Ilpaxnów had given him the ability to kill mammals and birds by merely projecting his power at them, and in this way he obtained food for the whole party. He could also revive his victims with the aid of a peculiar stick bearing orchestra, consisting of spruce cones. These he arranged around a fire balanced on levers which he could move with his feet; as he pressed, the cones became animated and beat time feverishly. It was Ilpaxnów who had given him these non-human stick-beaters. Nimkumlaxis tried to turn mammals into men, but succeeded only with the eyes of the wolf, wherefore these organs appear human even today.

2;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424
575*
796*
539
[825]

Ilpaxnów gave Nimkumlaxis the prerogative of carrying out a kusiai dance, which has been performed in the same manner ever since by the owner of that name. His patrons, for he has four, are the supernatural Carpenters. Nimkumlaxis has the further prerogative of wearing, when dancing, a wooden head-piece over his forehead representing q'ka, probably one of the blackbirds. On the night of sunsown, when the uninitiated are called in, masked figures of the four Carpenters appear, each carrying a conventional specimen of his work. Boas (at end) illustrates the masks proper to these beings. Ax'ilkumlaxis is, as usual, in attendance and explains the significance of the apparitions.

[532]

ORIGIN MYTH OF THE DANCE OF Nanaiuxpaw[18]

There was once a middle-aged woman who had not been initiated into the ranks of the kukwist. She decided that she could gain this distinction only by seeing Ax'ilkumlaxis herself, so with this aim in view she set out to search for the supernatural one. First she pressented to the source of every creek entering South Bentinck Arm; then proceeded up the Nuskumcumcumy River to its very head, again visiting the head-waters of every affluent, and finally went up the Bella Coola River, as before, exploring each side stream. For a whole year she travelled without seeing anything supernatural.

At the source of the Clearwater she came to a lake on the other side of which she could see a single column of smoke. It ascended without twist, coil, or movement, as if it were solid, so she knew that it must have a supernatural origin. Heavily she skirted the shore, till she saw that the smoke was rising from a house made of evergreen boughs. Stealing nearer, she beheld Ax'ilkumlaxis herself within, working with a woman Nanaiuxpaw. Ax'ilkumlaxis was using rock crystals to strike the woman sunshine, and then reviving her; but all the time was causing Nanaiuxpaw to sink into the ground. Breathless with excitement the [18] Related by Snowshoe Annie.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533 (d) A somewhat boastful reference to the power of the dancer's tutwinam.
(e) Another arrogant reference to the tutwinam.
[776] (f) In Bella Bella.
[424] (g) This is a Bella Bella being of whom little is known by the Bella Coola. The right to use him as tutwinam came from a remote ancestor.
(h) Presumably, the dancer's right to perform.

Fragment of a Song Used for Kaquix, a Kimsquit Man(a)

A Alqxmoxwin	nuxlixwinmxmp	Sakxmxmxmtxu
Protect your faces,	you quiet people!	Is always shooting arrows kwhxtsiyadzlaix

my crest(b).

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

B and C have been forgotten.

[WORDLESS CHORUS]

Axwuixu	kxqlmxwxmdinit
Don't do that,	they will cover us with valuables(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be an extremely ancient one, used by some of the earliest settlers; the tune is said to be entirely different from any recent nuxalk compositions.

[424] (b) The dancer's crest was the wasp, an insect which is believed to sting by the [825] discharge of invisible, minute arrows. This admonition to the guests to hide their [773] faces was, of course, a boasting reference to the goods which would be distributed at the approaching potlatch. None of the first settlers was sent down to earth as a wasp, but several, including Nuxkilc, were guided and assisted by these insects to such an extent that they have been regarded as crests.

[558] (c) It is customary, when quoting this song, to add this final remark. It is related [424] that, many years ago, a Kimsquit man used his wasp prerogative, but was shamed at the potlatch by being inundated with goods from a rival. Since that time, none of his descendants has dared to use the right and the admonition against doing so has become almost proverbial.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nuqwilxmixix of Kimsquit(a)

A Qxxadjilxxwu	skxlqlxlwililxi	Dilqwqlqlxxdxi	wxxxqxxtxlc
We all go	to see(b).	He(c) informs us	of what he carries.

B and C No more of this song is remembered, though it was used at a potlatch about 1910.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louis Hall.
(b) Meaning: To gaze upon something supernatural.
(c) An unnamed supernatural being.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) "The Beautifier." This is one of the appellations of the infant's patron, the otter, so-called because people adorn themselves whenever an Otter dance is given. 533*

(b) Recorded as song VII D 16a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the hucist season of 1923-4 at the initiation of Lilitwumlain, a female infant distantly related to Xpemtsatsula. [776]

(c) A reference to Otter, the neophyte's patron. The significance is that chiefs have an opportunity to display, "open," their generosity by lavish giving at every Otter dance. [556]

(d) The elaborate ritual of an Otter dance dispels grief. It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions.

(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The theme changes, and is henceforth of the usual mourning pattern.

(f) Referring to the dead Xpemtsatsula.

(g) "The Loftiest." This is one of the many designations for Nusqalt, one of the dead man's crests.

(h) A reference to the expanding house described in the dead man's origin myth. [773]

(i) One of Xpemtsatsula's names.

(j) This is another name for Nusqalt. The meaning of the whole part is: Xpemtsatsula sits down within the expandible house on Mount Nusqalt. There is the added implication that he seats himself as does his supernatural namesake in the land above.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an intensely musical people. Singing in unison is an essential feature of every ceremonial rite, [796]* but, when alone, an individual seldom bursts into melody from sheer joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, shorter and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not attempt to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with [825] love, others are sung jocularly at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. II, chap. V, and appendix B.[1]

Love Songs

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccompanied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the maker of a popular one will teach it to his friends who will serenade the 533* 882 424

[1] [See cat. 116, pp. 548 to 567 - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539*
226

Nuchlipuqutsuka	ellkiyuxutsuki	ellkiyuxutsuki
Swallow right down(c),	to your very tail,	to your very tail;

dixuxtwutshlen ilsis
why you cannot even break one of our hairs(d).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louis Hall.
(b) The vocative form is used.
(c) That is: Swallow the bait.
(d) A reference to the use of human hairs for fishlines. The lad is, of course, trying to "dare" the fish.

Fishing Song(a)

This is a song sung by lads as they splash in the water after minnows, trying to drive them ashore.

Wakdimtsa	Wakdimtsa
Who is your father?	Who is your father?

Spuskipulint	dimtsa	spuskipulint	dimtsa
"Rotten stomach"(b)	is your father!	"Rotten stomach"	is your father.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 30b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) It is uncertain whether this refers to any particular kind of fish, or is merely a general term of opprobrium.

Song Sung to a Cormorant(a)

539*
825

When a cormorant is seen near a canoe, the paddlers often sing the following song. The bird, delighted, is said to come near and dance around the craft.

Sxwiyumtlu	dalkyuu ulsu	sxwiyumtlu	dalkyuu ulsu
Dance,	cormorant,	dance,	cormorant(b).

Hawtsalt
Take the bait(c).

(a) Recorded as song VII D 34a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) This is the Bella Bella word for cormorant.
(c) The singer insisted on inserting this refrain after the song. It is really a lullaby and it is doubtful whether it normally accompanies the cormorant song.

[192]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Song Sung to a Bat(a)

*533 825 When a bat is seen flitting around in the dusk, lads often greet it as follows:

Sinaskilitsw	ushih
Bat,	ushih.

These two words are repeated an indefinite number of times.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 10b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

MISCELLANEOUS SONGS

*533 525 177 Gambling games have always been popular among the Bella Coola, especially the one known as lekal which may be of European origin. Contestants sing as they play, but the songs, lacking words, consist merely of a series of meaningless ejaculations. The tunes, however, are remembered, and certain ones are considered to be the proper accompaniment to certain games. When a number of men are singing in unison, they follow the directions of a leader, but at other times the "words" vary according to individual taste. The tunes alone are important, and it is often remembered from what area they first came.[1]

*533 177 A few songs have been adopted from the Carriers and are sung from sheer delight in the rhythm, since the words are unintelligible. The most popular is the following:

---

[1] A number of such tunes were obtained:

A Kitamaat lekal song, recorded on song VII D 20c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A gambling song said to have come from the West Coast of Vancouver Island, recorded on song VII D 19b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded on song VII D 14b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded on song VII D 20b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

A Bella Coola gambling song, recorded on song VII D 13b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

CHAPTER III

WARFARE*

General Observations — Specific Accounts

General Observations

721 648 PRIOR to the establishment of British rule, there was considerable warfare among the coastal tribes of British Columbia. Long-continued struggles leading to the extermination of one or other of the participants were unknown, but there were constant raids, counter-raids, forays, and attacks. These were never as continuous as on the Plains, where martial achievements were regarded more highly than on the coast, but it appears probable that at least several villages of the Bella Coola were embroiled every few years. Nevertheless, [794] war was secondary in importance to ceremonial rites. During the winter, peace reigned and members of hostile tribes were [558] even received as guests at some dances. At potlatches they might be subjected to insults, later to be avenged in the same manner or by active hostility, but seldom was actual violence offered either to envoys or guests. The symbol of peace and 724 friendliness was eagle down; the occupants of a canoe who 825 have an invitation to a potlatch, or who were guests themselves, used to blow this substance up into the air whenever another craft approached, and it was incumbent on the latter 778 to veer over to the other side of the channel. Eagle down was [578] considered to be so sacred that when two men were quarrelling [677] a chief could stop them by blowing some of it over their heads. In winter, hostilities were prevented by ceremonies, and in 721 summer the people were usually busy laying in supplies of food; consequently, it was only in the late spring that fighting was [575] at all common. Even then the dictates of ceremonial life were [682] not entirely forgotten; no bella canoe went to war and

*Whether having long been discontinued, the past tense is used throughout this chapter.

CHAPTER IV

GAMES

517 THE subject of games, lying on the border-line of social 121 customs, was one which was not fully investigated. The [177] Bella Coola, like all other peoples, have a number of sports and pastimes and although the old diversions are being forgotten by the younger people, many of the old men and women are familiar with those played in their youth. As isolated customs these may be of small value, but games of all kinds often preserve ancient practices and, as providing useful clues to the spread of peoples or of culture, are worthy of investigation. Unfortunately, lack of time made it impossible to give the subject the attention it deserved, and the few games here described must not be considered an exhaustive treatment of the subject.

526 Though less fond of competitive sports than the Indians
[171] of the Plains, the Bella Coola enjoy canoe-racing and wrestling.
[628] The former appears to have been an ancient diversion; picked crews from different villages competed amid the encouraging shouts of their fellows, and even now the younger men are anxious to display their skill in this respect. Wrestling, which [177] used to be common during all non-sacred gatherings, has almost entirely disappeared since the prohibition of the potlatch.

539 The favourite sedentary pastime, enjoyed equally by young
[517] and old, is the telling of stories. Those of a sacred nature, especially ancestral myths, are reserved of course for ceremonial occasions, but the older men and women remember [825] many tales describing the exploits of birds and animals which are recounted again and again to the enjoyment of the listeners, although they may have heard the same recital fifty times. Children enjoy the companionship of some old story-teller and it is a common sight to see an old man or woman, surrounded by an eager group, explaining once more how Raven outwitted his rivals or was himself led into difficulties. Many of these [867] stories are somewhat indecent; others appear brutally frank,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

859 better than hunting birds and small animals with miniature bows and arrows, or snaring them in nooses of grass or string. Little girls make playhouses in which they cook wonderful meals of berries, with perhaps the addition of a wooden fish. On the whole, however, the children do not enter into play as boisterously as white boys and girls, nor do they seem to derive as much pleasure from it. In former times, when clothing was [152] scanty, small lads used to delight in picking nettles and beating [291] one another with the stinging branches; this must have caused considerable pain, but it was a point of honour not to cry out, and anyone, perhaps caught unaware, who showed discomfort, [524] was laughed at as a coward. Both boys and girls are fond of swinging, and even adult women sometimes find time to enjoy themselves by swaying to and fro at the end of a rope.

Young Bella Coola do not have as many toys as white children, and none of them is complex. Some girls have crude [575] wooden dolls, though elaborate figurines are reserved for use [231] in kwiat dances. Perhaps the most cherished plaything is a small puppy or, in recent years, a kitten, though the unfortunate animal is handled and mauled without consideration. A good carpenter may make for his son a wooden top or a bull-roarer, to the envy of his less fortunate friends. Both types of toys are said to be used in [575] Nusmît-a and at some kwiat dances the masked figures carry them to play with.

524 There is one game, sloi, which the salmon are • [825] said to delight to watch, and which is accordingly played by boys as soon as the first spring salmon have been disposed of with fitting rites. Each makes for himself, or is given by his father, a wooden spear with a projecting barb, fastened as shown in the accompanying sketch (see Fig. 1). A loop of branches is made and thrown into a pool of stagnant, or slow-moving water, on each side of which stands a rival group of competitors. At a signal, all throw their spears simultaneously, with the intention of passing them through the ring, so that the barb of each will

FIG. 1.
"Toy spears."

538 certain that his account is the only accurate one, and ridicules his rival, but as no social importance is attached to the tales, an error in narration is a matter of small moment. Probably there have been instances in which an individual possessing [556] much wealth has transformed a story into a family myth, but it was impossible to obtain a concrete illustration of this; it is thought that this may have been done in former years, though of course such would be absolutely contrary to custom.

Stories can be conveniently divided into two types:

[825] I. Those in which the principal character is a mammal or bird endowed with human intelligence.

II. Those in which the principal character is a human being.

[825] Many of the first type describe the adventures and mis-[776] adventures of Raven. It must be remembered that the Bella Coola regard these stories as accurate statements of fact, and base their characterizations of many supernatural beings on their actions as recorded therein.

Raven Stories

*534

HOW RAVEN BECAME BLACK

When Raven was being prepared for his descent to earth, Ăpănăw told MĂMĂLĂLĂ to make him the prettiest of all the birds. When finished, he was adorned with many colours and was very handsome. But the vain Raven looked at himself and was not satisfied. First he asked that one arm might be changed, and when this was done as he desired, he asked for an alteration in one of his legs; and so on with nearly every part of his body. Finally, Ăpănăw became angry, and told some of his assistants to throw ashes all over him. This made Raven a uniform black, in which guise he was sent down to earth.

RAVEN AND WATER OUZEL[7]

As he was able to assume any form, Raven, once upon a time, took that of a herald and went to the home of Water Ouzel, who, having spread a fine cedar-mat for his guest, proceeded to prepare a meal. He brought

[7] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 93.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

hold up his legs to the heat again, but though he kept them there until they were badly burnt, no more grease came. Seal waited and waited, until, becoming angry, she picked up her pan and went home in disgust. 534*

RAVEN AND VARIED THRUSH[1]

Once upon a time Raven went to the home of Varied Thrush.

"I have come to call," he said.

Thrush, a woman, politely invited him to sit down for a meal. Then she took the box which she used for berry-picking, hung it on a projecting rafter outside the house, and began to sing; instantly a few berries appeared in the box. She sang four times, and when she had finished, the receptacle was full.[2] Thrush placed the food before her guest, and Raven ate heartily. When it was time to leave, he picked up the box with what he had not consumed, and invited his hostess to come and collect it the following day.

On the morrow Thrush went to Raven's house, where he invited her to sit down for a meal. Then he made a hole in a corner of the house, placed the same food-box beneath it, and began to sing, imitating his guest's song. A few salmon berries were deceived and entered the receptacle. Again Raven sang, but this time the berries recognized the deception and the box was filled, not with fruit, but guano. Thrush was very angry.

"You tried to steal my method of gathering berries," she burst out.

Then she picked up her box and went home, leaving Raven discomfited.

RAVEN AND BUCK[3]

Once upon a time, Raven went to the home of an old, large-antlered buck and asked:

"In what month do you get fat?"

"I grow fat when they put up the sticks to dry the salmon," replied Buck.

"That is peculiar," said Raven. "I get fat then too; our families must be related."

He said no more, but waited patiently for autumn.

When the sticks were set up for salmon drying, Raven went again to Buck's house and said:

---

[1] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 93.

[2] The Bella Coola say that when this bird sings, flowers, berries, animals, and fish gather to listen to the melody.

[3] For another version of this story see Boas, p. 92.

[825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

hers, which, with her supernatural power, she was able to do. She reluctantly granted his request, and Raven became very proud of his splendid locks. 539*

Next year, when Raven caught sockeye salmon he obeyed his wife's instructions by carefully hanging the fish up to dry without removing the heads. One day, however, his long hair became entangled with the teeth of a drying salmon, and in a fit of anger he wrenched off its head, throwing it outside the door. His wife was so vexed and grieved that she cried and cried until her face was swollen and Raven became frightened at her continued lamentation. After he had left the house, Sockeye Salmon told her sisters-in-law to make a fire and put on it all her personal possessions. She said that she intended to leave that night, and that the smoke would animate her husband's salmon, but not those caught by his sisters. When it was dark she carried out her threat. She whistled, and Raven's fish came to life; then she ran to the river, raised the edge of the water as if it had been a blanket and plunged beneath, followed by them.

Raven tried in vain to pursue, but lost both his wife and his salmon.

Animal Stories

Raven is more frequently endowed with human characteristics to serve as the central figure in stories than any other bird or mammal, but the following are examples of similar tales centring around other figures. ⁂ 538 825

MINK AND CAT-FISH[11]

539*

Once upon a time, long, long ago, before men and animals had grown so unlike one another, Mink went to the home of a Cat-Fish woman, who politely invited him to stay for a meal. When he had finished eating he said to his hostess:

"Are you afraid of anything?"

"No," she replied.

"Are you not afraid of Grizzly Bear?"

"No," answered the woman again.

Mink repeated his question with regard to Wolf, Black Bear, Wolverine, Cougar, and all the other fierce animals, but Cat-Fish assured him that she feared none of them. At length he asked:

"Are you afraid of Owl?"[12]

[11]There are no true cat-fish in Bella Coola; the species so designated is probably one of the sculpins. [136]

[12]He meant the western horned owl.

⁂ [See pp. 419-493. — ANALYST]

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

from the anus and flew away. Grizzly Bear rolled around in agony till he died. 539

HOW MALLARD DUCK GOT HIS NAME

Mallard Duck married Merganser,* but soon tired of her and discarded her in favour of Red-Breasted Merganser. The incensed one began to swear at her successor, but at once Mallard Duck joined in the defence of Red-Breasted Merganser and insulted his former wife.

"Nāx! Nāx! Nāx!" he said as if he were vomiting, imitating what he claimed had been a common practice of Merganser. But the jibe was so often repeated that Mallard Duck received from it his own name, Nāxnx.

THE MISFORTUNES OF JAY

Rocky Mountain Jay was a Carrier, who lived long ago, far away in the interior mountains. One summer the snow did not melt from above his house so that his only connection with the open air continued to be a small passage for smoke and breath. Summer passed and autumn came, with the ripening of the berries, but still the snow remained and Jay kept indoors, thinking it still was winter. One day a little bird brought him a sprig of ripe berries, chiding him for his lassitude and folly in staying where winter reigned, when he could come out into autumn.

"All you have to do," said the visitor, "is to get ready and force yourself through the snow."

Jay took the advice and plunged out through the drift into autumn, carrying his bow and arrows. As he looked back at his house under the snow he thought to himself how much better it was to be out in the open.

He wandered through the woods till presently he saw Black Fox asleep. He sneaked up to him, arrow poised on string ready to shoot, when he heard a voice:

"Do not shoot, Jay," it said. "Blood will spoil the fur. Build a fence round Fox with only a narrow opening in it, where you can put a snare."

The voice came from his anus. It was as if he had two minds, one located in that part of his body. Jay followed the advice and built a fence of dry branches around sleeping Fox with only a narrow opening in which he set a snare. When this was ready he built a fire to awaken Fox and frighten him into the noose; but the fence flared up so that the startled Fox was able to jump to safety over the shattered barricade. Jay was so angry that he beat his anus.

*The species could not be identified. The Bella Coola term is shalisti.

[825]

2:McHowatt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Then she sat down to the meal with her husband, the routine being exactly as she had described it to her visitor. After they had finished eating, Itsaa's wife told him of the day's happenings, how a woman, giving her name, had visited the camp and had asked a great many questions about him, including whether or not he observed ceremonial chastity, and other personal matters. 539

"What did you tell her?" Itsaa asked his wife.

"Oh, I answered her truthfully," she replied.

"You should never have done that!" Itsaa burst out in anger. "It was none of her business. Don't you know that you should never discuss a hunter's observance of ceremonial chastity? You have behaved very badly." 715 79

Itsaa had reason for his wrath, because no wife should ever discuss this matter, as in so doing she weakens or destroys her husband's power.

A few days afterward the evil woman again visited Itsaa's camp, carrying concealed beneath her blanket a wooden club used for killing salmon. Itsaa's wife did not see the approach of her hypocritical friend, who struck her on the head with the weapon and killed her. The murderess dragged her victim's body a short distance from the camp; with her copper knife she removed the skin and drew it over her own body, endeavouring in every way to make it fit. But Itsaa's wife had been larger than the bad woman, who tried to remedy the difference in size by tying the excess in wrinkles around her hips. The greatest difficulty was about the eyes, where the skin hung in folds which the impostor sewed neatly to make less noticeable. When all was done the murderess scraped a hole in the soft ground and buried the body of her victim.

While awaiting the return of Itsaa the impostor busied herself in carrying out all the small household occupations, just as she had been told about them. Towards dusk Itsaa came back. He noticed that his wife looked peculiar and uneasy, but said nothing about it; they sat down together to the meal but the woman kept her eyes lowered, lest the loose skin about them might betray her. Itsaa wondered at that and also at her voice, which did not sound normal. At night the masquerader went first to bed, as a wife always does when her husband is observing ceremonial chastity. Itsaa followed shortly. In a few minutes an owl hooted:

"Itsaa's wife has tied up a fold of skin round her hips."

Neither man nor woman spoke. Even at that distant period it was well known that the voice of a dead person passes into an owl, though only rarely can one communicate with the living. It was, in fact, the ghost with speaking from above the spot where her body lay. The murderess feared that Itsaa would put his arm around her waist, but the wise sewed because his observance of ceremonial chastity prevented him from doing so. 775 826

Z: McDowell: R-3 (1922-1924) 1948
NKA McDowell NKA

*534 farmers, how all their people had been murdered by an old woman who had sucked out their brains through their ears, and how she was even now pursuing them.

"I know about her," their host murmured.

This was the first inkling he had received of the crimes she had committed on earth.

Shortly afterwards Swalqalqit came along, panting and running on two walking sticks.

"I am tired," she said, but Alpentine said sourly:

"I know now about all the evil you have wrought on earth."

He took a whip and beat her unmercifully. When he had finished he opened his door, and saw her to tiny shreds which he threw outside, saying:

"Henceforth you shall be mosquitoes."

*[125] The fragments floated down to Kimsquit, where ever since there have been numerous mosquitoes. Then Alpentine said to the five:

"Don't be down-hearted about the loss of your friends. I will help you. Spend the night with me, but tomorrow, when I send you home, I will give you something to restore the dead."

Next morning after breakfast he gave the oldest youth a small quantity of what looked like water, a drop of which he told him to put into each ear, each nostril, and the mouth of every dead one, for restoration. They were then told to return to earth on the road by which they had come, which would be made easy for them. It was as he had said; thanks to Alpentine's care, they reached earth in two days and one night. As soon as they came to their village the oldest boy first restored his parents, afterwards all the other people; to them it seemed as if they had only been asleep; none of them realized he had been dead. The oldest boy became wealthy through presents given to him in gratitude by those he had restored.

THE WOMAN WHO MARRIED WOLF

Once upon a time there was a young girl who was secluded in the corner of her house following puberty. Growing weary of her imprisonment, she one day crept out through the hole in the floor to pick berries in the forest. There she met a handsome young man who made love to her; at first she spurned him but at length gave in, and, immediately afterwards, the youth suggested that she return with him to his home, saying she could go back when she so desired; to this she agreed. They soon reached his house within which was his father, Wolf, who wore a wolf blanket and had a wolf's tail, only his face was human. As the old man moved around the house his tail always went into the fire.

*539f 121 him how unhappy he was, because people on earth called him a beaver.

"Never mind, my son," said Algonkin. "Presently, I will let you do my work and then you will be more powerful than anyone on earth."

Then morning the father sent the lad off to set to sea, giving him the usual supply of bear. But the boy was so angry with the people on earth that he increased this supply, hoping to burn up the whole of them. Seeing some children on play, he swooped down to slay them; it became so hot that water boiled in the lakes and rivers and the whole race of mankind was caused to death. Most of the animals escaped by hiding in burrows, but not the black bear, who at that time had a white coat. It was brave black and has retained that colour ever since, while the grizzly was scorched to his present customs. The deer and the wapiti failed to hide their tails, both of which were burnt; that is why each has a black tip to this day.

[125] [125] Algonkin, angry at his son for killing everybody, restored all to life, and broke the malicious child into countless pieces which he threw down to earth in the form of mosquitoes.

Contemporary Stories

591 Disasters which occurred in the distant past provide themes for stories of a non-ceremonial nature.

THE FAMINE

*539f Kilbo was a Kimsquit man who made a practice of watching the sun; from its movements he was able to foretell the solstices and other coming events. One winter, long ago, the sun, instead of stopping at its usual place, continued far beyond its proper course. Kilbo was much worrie and prophesied strange changes, with famine; he called on the young men to weep, but instead they merely laughed at him. That summer, when there was plenty of fish, berries, and other foods, the people jeered at the prophet. For four years there was the same plentiful harvesting and collecting, but in the fifth came a great change. It failed to become warm in April, the berries flowered, but the constant cold wind prevented their buds from opening. Few fish ascend the river, and even they could not be caught because the water remained so clear. The same conditions prevailed for four years until the people were starving; their only food was porcupine and mountain goat, with a few coots caught on hook and line. About this time a Kimsquit man, Tsalalil, went goat-hunting behind his village, and one night after seeing his snares, lay down in a cave. He could not sleep, and presently heard the [301] of the older people remember seeing in their youth another type, fabric, with a high casual grow; this may have been identical with the nuhu which others describe as having an elevated bow and a low stern. An entirely different craft was the nuhuwi'a, canoe from one of the grass, probably the white-footed grass. A strip of maple fastened along each side caught the water in moving, with a sound like that of the peculiar resting flight of the bird. The bow was often carved in the form of a bird's head and the stern in that of a tail to further the resemblance. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of these canoes, though some had heard of them from their grandparents. The large, open type of canoe made by the Haida was known to the Bella Coola, but not constructed by them. Sails were used on all seagoing canoes; they were usually of weaving, though skins sewn together were occasionally employed.

[301] [305] Canoes are occasionally lashed together. In several footer dances a wide platform for dancing is required, and the need is met by lashing planks crosswise over two canoes, near the bow and stern, thus fastening them together. Planking is laid on the two supports and a platform is constructed. Careful inquiries showed that this fastening was merely a temporary arrangement; the beams were not bound in any particular manner, nor was there any fixed distance between the craft. Sometimes the same expedient was used for voyages when the load was too heavy for two canoes separately, a device which is said to have been used more commonly by the tribes of the inner coast than the Bella Coola. Canoes lashed together are termed to canoe.

[301] [171] Rafts, nuhuwi'a, consisting of rough logs fastened together with cross-pieces, were commonly used on the lakes of the interior, and occasionally for river work when canoes were unavailable and there was no time to make them. Another expedient in similar emergencies was to make bark canoes, such as are still constructed by the Carrier. The Bella Coola regard the construction of these as definite copying, and do not profess to have as much skill as their neighbors whose canoes, it is said, can be folded for packing. There is a tradition that, many generations ago, a few clever Bella Coola learnt how to make skin canoes.

THE PREPARATION OF CRAB-APPLE

[314] [322] [324] [325] [326] Early spring is the time to uncolumi, that is, to gather the inner bark of the cedar. Men occasionally assist in the work, though this is really women's work. The worker selects a small cedar, choosing one about six inches in diameter, with smooth trunk and relatively free from knots. With a knife she makes a horizontal incision in the bark, reaching down from the ground, sometimes grubbing the sapling. Then she inserts her

S: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[String Figures]

524 Insert right hand from distal side into the loop hooked down by right index finger, releasing this finger in the process.

With tips of right thumb and index finger grasp left radial index finger string and left ulnar thumb string, taking care that the grasping fingers pass to the distal side of the (straight) left ulnar index finger-radial thumb string.

Fig. 6. "A Salmon-Trap."

Draw these two strings out to the right, allowing the original right hand loop to slip over them.

This completed figure represents a salmon-trap,[1] the opening pointing towards the left (Figure 6).

II. A WATER OUSEL

Opening 8 with middle fingers.

Bring middle fingers together, tip to tip; transfer right middle finger loop to left middle finger, and left middle finger loop to right middle finger, passing it over the loop just transferred.

Extend.

Insert left thumb into left middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, hooking it distal to the loop already held.

Insert left thumb into left little finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, hooking it distal to the two loops already held.

Insert left little finger into left thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of the two proximal ulnar thumb strings, and to ulnar side of distal ulnar thumb string; hook this string down with little finger through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from distal side, passing to ulnar side of the two distal radial thumb strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb strings; turn index finger up away from manipulator, taking up the string on the dorsal aspect of the tip of the index finger.

Release left thumb.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend.

This completed figure (Figure 7) shows the bird ready to dive in search

[1] Some informants state that this figure represents the female genital organ.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

524

FIG. 5. "A Water Ouzel."

of the small fish, or salmon roe, on which it feeds. Wriggle the hands and the bird shakes, as it does when about to dive. The manipulator sings:

Makaw	yaxet	mamamkkke	ah	mahimaqlt
Dive	down,	Water Ouzel,	in	your salmon roe.

[825]

Release left little finger.

The bird dives; the remaining knot represents the radiating ripple that marks the spot where it vanished.

III. A COFFIN

Place string over left thumb and index finger, and right thumb.

With left middle, ring, and little fingers hook down left radial thumb string and left ulnar index finger string.

With right middle, ring, and little fingers hook down right radial and ulnar thumb strings.

Bring right hand to radial side of left hand, to its dorsal aspect.

With right index finger take up from proximal side string which passes across dorsal aspect of left thumb and index finger.

Extend, taking care not to lift string from left thumb or index finger.

Release middle, ring, and little fingers of both hands.

There is now a straight string passing between the radial sides of the two thumbs, and another straight string between the radial sides of the two index fingers, while the string passing from ulnar side of left thumb to ulnar side of right index finger crosses to the radial side of the string passing from ulnar side of right thumb to ulnar side of left index finger (Figure 6).

This cumsaw opening will be referred to henceforth as BELLA COOLA OPENING.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger string.

FIG. 6. "Bella Coola Opening."

2; McDowelth K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

524 wrapping radial thumb string around tips of index fingers, and allowing original index finger loops to slip off.

Release thumbs.

There is now a St. Andrew's Cross in the center of the figure. With each thumb take up the upper arm of the cross nearest to it from the proximal side.

Release index fingers.

Transfer loop hooked down by ring and little fingers of each hand to little fingers of each hand, without allowing direction of loop.

FIG. 8. "A Rabbit."

Insert index fingers into little finger loops from distal side, hand them towards mediolateral to proximal side of radial little finger strings, alternate thumb strings, and radial thumb strings; then hand them up and away from mediolateral to distal side of radial thumb string, and to proximal side of the straight string which crosses the figure forming a loop between ulnar thumb string and radial little finger string of each hand. Hook this string on index fingers and return, taking it up on the dorsal aspect of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

[P45] The loops just released represent the ears of the rabbit. With thumbs press the ears through little finger loops and shove with middle fingers, thereby making the figure appear more life-like (Figure 9).

91. THE LONG PENIS OF RAVEN

524 Bella Coola opening.

F81 Insert middle, ring and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

With thumbs take up radial index finger strings from proximal side and remove through thumb loops, allowing original thumb loops to slip off.

Insert middle fingers into thumb loops from proximal side and take up all the backs of middle fingers the strings passing across the palmar aspect of thumbs, returning thumbs to normal position.

With hook of left middle finger grip right middle finger loop and release right middle finger.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bulletin-Cole NEB

524
[125]

FIG. 11. "A Butterfly."

chumb string, thus taking up distal radial chumb string on the backs of index fingers.

Release chumbs.

This shows the butterfly with wings extended, the head being the complicated network of strings in the upper center of the figure (Figure 11).

To untangle the string—to make the butterfly vanish—with chumbs hook down palmar string and release index and little fingers.

VIII. THE FIRE-SEEKER

Bella Coola opening.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops and hook down radial index finger string.

Pass index fingers to distal side of radial chumb string, and middle fingers to proximal side of radial chumb string, clutching this string between tips of these fingers.

Remove through index finger loops, allowing these loops to slip off.

Release chumbs.

With chumbs take up silver index finger string from proximal side.

Release index fingers.

Bring chumbs together, tip to tip, and consider right chumb loop to left chumb.

Bring ring and little fingers of each hand together, tip to tip, to radial side of left chumb loops, and consider loop hooked down by left ring and little fingers to hook of right ring and little fingers.

With left index, middle, ring, and little fingers hook down left silver chumb strings.

Release left chumb.

Insert right index and middle fingers from proximal side into loops hooked down on right ring and little fingers, thus widening this loop.

Turn palms of hands towards manipulator, with hands pointing upwards, that is, so that the fingers would point upwards if they were not bent over to hook down strings.

"Remove right hand counter-clockwise, and left hand clockwise, through ninety degrees, causing a triangle to appear in the center of the figure (Figure 12).

This triangle represents the person to whom Sempen-ski, "The Fire-Seeker," applies for glowing embers. Another person should take the part of Sempen-ski by inserting a finger through the central triangle. The following dialogue takes place:

524 With middle fingers take up about thumb string from proximal side and return through index finger loops.

Insert ring fingers into middle finger loops from proximal side.

Bend middle and ring fingers towards manipulator, to distal side of index finger loops, passing middle fingers to distal side of radial thumb string, and ring fingers to proximal side of radial thumb string. Grasp radial thumb string between tips of these fingers and return through middle finger loops, thus wrapping the string as grasped around the tips of middle fingers.

Release index fingers.

Release little fingers.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and consider right thumb loop to left thumb.

Insert right index finger into right middle finger loop from proximal side and consider this loop, releasing middle finger.

Rotate right hand clockwise through 180 degrees, so that the loop formerly held on index finger is now held on back of same finger, but has not been twisted.

With right middle finger hook down, outward, the string which passes from about side of right index finger to radial side of left middle finger.

With right ring finger hook down left radial middle finger string.

Release left middle finger.

Pass left index, ring, and middle fingers into left thumb loops from proximal side and hook down these loops.

Release left thumb.

This shows the "Toad" string crossed, head facing to left, ready to jump (Figure 11).

[1.25]

Fig. 11. "A Toad"

Pass left thumb into loops hooked down by left index, ring, and middle fingers from distal side.

The left thumb represents a stick.

The manipulator then carries on the following dialogue with the toad.

"Gakwanik? Where are you going?" (addressed to the toad).

"I should, I am going to get some huckleberries".

"Kakakwa? [illegible]? But how will you be able to reach up to them?"

"Ahachwanim, I am jump."

"What shall, the stick, Gale follow."

Z:\Mc\Dewath R-9 (1912-1924) 1968
MRS McDerrola NE6

In the manipulation says "Un shank" release right index and ring fingers and with a swinging motion the "road" can be made to jump towards the left, over the left shank. 524 [525]

A TOAD

(Second method of construction)

Hallo Cards spreading.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

With middle fingers take up silver shank strings from proximal side.

With middle fingers hook down silver index finger strings, allowing loops just taken up to slip off. The strings formerly hooked down by middle, ring, and little fingers are now held down by ring and little fingers.

Release index fingers.

Each silver shank string is held down by a loop. With index fingers take up silver shank strings from proximal side between loop and centre of figure.

With index fingers take up radial shank strings from distal side and return, allowing original index finger loops to slip off.

Release middle, ring, and little fingers.

Take up with mouth the straight radial index finger string in centre of figure.

Bring shanks together, tip to tip, and transfer right shank loop to left shank, releasing right shank.

Transfer right index finger loop to hook of right index by twisting finger without removing string, which throws original radial string on to silver side.

With right middle finger hook down string passing from mouth to left index finger between the mouth and the point where other strings cross.

Release mouth.

With right ring finger hook down left radial index finger string which runs straight across to right hand.

Release left index finger.

Insert left index, middle, and ring fingers into hooked down loop of left shank.

Release left shank.

Gently extend the figure by spreading the loop held on hooks of left fingers, at the same time manipulating it so that the loops held by right index, middle, and ring fingers are of approximately the same length. It is sometimes difficult to get a satisfactory figure.

The completed figure (Figure 17) represents a road spanning pre- [525]

524 [525] necessary to jumping. Release right index and ring fingers, and by means of a swinging movement with both hands the toad can be made to jump to the left, over the left thumb, which should be inserted into hooked down loops of left index, middle, and ring fingers from distal side.

XIV. CROSSING A RIVER

Place string as a simple loop over thumbs and index fingers.

With middle, ring, and little fingers hook down radial thumb string and ulnar index finger string.

With right index finger take up string passing dorsally across left thumb and index finger from proximal side.

With left index finger take up string passing dorsally across right thumb and index finger from distal side.

Extend, at the same time releasing middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass left middle, ring, and little fingers proximal to left proximal index finger loop, and hook down left distal radial index finger string.

Pass right middle, ring, and little fingers proximal to both right index finger loops and hook down right ulnar thumb string—which is the same string as just hooked down by left middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass left middle finger into left index finger loops from proximal side and hook down proximal radial index finger string.

Pass right middle finger into right index finger loops from proximal side and hook down both radial index finger strings.

Bend towards manipulator middle and index fingers of each hand, passing middle fingers to proximal side of the straight radial thumb string, and index fingers to distal side of same string. Grip this straight string between tips of middle and index fingers.

Turn middle and index fingers down and up away from manipulator, taking up radial thumb string on distal aspect of index fingers, and allowing original strings to slip off.

Release thumbs.

Extend gently.

* * * * A loop now crosses the centre of the figure from the angle formed by the junction of left ulnar index finger string with left radial little finger string, to the right pulmar string. With right thumb take up the radial string of this loop from distal side.

Insert left thumb into right thumb loop from proximal side and extend this loop on both thumbs.

With thumbs take up radial index finger strings from proximal side.

Narrow thumbs.

Release index fingers. * * * *

Z: McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

524 ulnar side of distal ulnar thumb string; hook down this string through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from distal side, passing to ulnar side of the two distal radial index finger strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb string; bend index finger upwards and away from manipulator, taking up this proximal radial thumb string on dorsal aspect of index finger.

Release left thumb and extend.

There is now a diamond-shaped figure of two strands near the left hand; pass left thumb into this diamond away from manipulator and take up on its back the two strings forming the right lower side of the diamond.

Insert left index finger, with its loop, into left thumb loops from proximal side.

FIG. 19. "A Porcupine."

With tips of right thumb and index finger lift loop from left index finger, drawing this loop through left thumb loops.

Release left thumb and index finger.

Replace loop held between tips of right thumb and index finger on left thumb, without twisting.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend right middle finger loop by passing into it, from proximal side, all the digits of the right hand.

Extend and the porcupine appears (Figure 19). Its head is here downwards near the left hand, and its tail is the loop around the right radial thumb string.

525 The manipulator sings:

Ayaxtlakaw-iwa	xayaxtlakaw!	xlakawaxaw-iwa	xlakaky-iwa
Don't hurry away,	go easily!	where you go	to your home, xlakaxlakiw

O porcupine!

XVI. AN OWLET'S NEST

Opening A with middle fingers.

Insert thumbs into middle finger loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to thumbs, keeping them distal, and at the same time releasing middle fingers.

[12] [13] Reproduced in using THE [illegible], National Museum of Canada, Ottawa, [illegible] Pubnoll. [illegible] from indicating children to a fundamental creation.

2:Mc:Dowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bulletin NEA

Insert thumbs into little finger loops from proximal side and transfer these loops to thumbs, keeping the three loops in their proper order, and at the same time releasing little fingers. 524

Insert little fingers into thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of proximal and middle ulnar thumb strings, and to ulnar side of distal ulnar thumb string, and hook down this string through thumb loops.

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from the distal side, passing to ulnar side of distal and middle proximal thumb strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb string; turn fingers up away from manipulator, taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

Each index finger loop is now crossed by two strings; one of these passes as a simple loop around the ulnar index finger string, whereas the other is wrapped around the same string; with the backs of thumbs take up the former string from the proximal side.

With right thumb take up left radial thumb string from proximal side.

Release left thumb.

With left thumb take up both right radial thumb strings from proximal side.

Pass thumbs into index finger loops from proximal side.

Nipsoka both thumb strings.

Release index fingers.

Insert index fingers into thumb loops from proximal side, taking up these loops.

Release thumbs.

The figure now consists of two triangles lying with two triangles between them, the base of each triangle (consisting of two strings) being vertical and parallel to the other; pass thumbs into their respective triangles, away from manipulator, and take up the bases on the backs of thumbs.

Bring thumbs together, tip to tip, and transfer right thumb loop to left thumb, and left thumb loop to right thumb, over the loop just transferred.

FIG. 58. "The Eagle's Claw."

With the tips of right thumb and middle finger grasp the left double thumb loop, remove from left thumb, rotate through 180 degrees anti-clockwise, and replace on left thumb.

Repeat for right double thumb loop.

[825]

534

Pass thumbs into index finger loops from proximal side.
Shoulder both proximal thumb strings.
Release index fingers.
Extend, and the Eagle's Nest appears (Figure 33).

[225]

XVII. THE CRIPPLE

Opening A with middle fingers.

Pass thumbs proximal to middle finger loops and take up radial little finger strings from proximal side.

With little fingers hook down silver middle finger strings, allowing original little finger loops to slip off.

Release middle fingers.

Extend loop hooked down on little fingers by passing into each the hooks of the ring and middle fingers.

With middle fingers hook down proximal silver thumb string, allowing the loop hooked down on middle, ring, and little fingers to slip off.

Transfer loop hooked down by middle fingers to hooks of little fingers, without twisting.

Insert index and middle fingers into hook thumb loops from the distal side and grasp the proximal radial thumb string between the tips of these fingers; hand upwards and away from manipulator taking up this string on tips of index fingers.

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

A straight string now passes on the silver side of the central figure from one palmar string to the other; with thumbs take up this string from proximal side over each palmar string.

FIG. 33. "The Cripple."

With middle fingers hook down index finger loops, without releasing index fingers.

Place thumbs, tip to tip, with index fingers, and cross for each thumb loop to its respective index finger, placing over the loop originally on the index fingers, that is, so that each original thumb loop is now a proximal index finger loop.

With thumbs take up distal radial index finger string from proximal side.

Release middle fingers.

Release index fingers.

Extend hooked down loop of left little finger by passing into it the hooks of left index, middle, and ring fingers.

524
524

Pass left middle finger distal to radial ring finger string and take up radial little finger string from proximal side.

Pass left index finger distal to radial middle finger string and take up radial ring finger string from proximal side.

With left thumb take up radial index finger string and radial middle finger string from proximal side, hooping the former distal.

With left index finger take up distal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left middle finger distal to distal ulnar index finger string and take up proximal radial thumb string from proximal side.

Pass left ring finger distal to distal ulnar middle finger string and take up distal ulnar index finger string from proximal side.

Pass left little finger distal to distal ulnar ring finger string and take up distal ulnar middle finger string from proximal side.

Release thumb, at the same time pulling with the right hand and the figure disappears. There appears to be no story attached to this figure.

II. THE PATTERNING OF RAVEN'S FLIGHT[*]

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb with long, pendent loops hanging down on palmar aspect of left hand.

Pass right thumb and index finger from distal side into left thumb loop, at the same time hooking down the two pendent strings with right middle, ring, and little fingers.

Separate right thumb and index finger, turn right hand upwards, and clockwise, without releasing strings hooked down by right fingers. The left radial thumb string should now run straight across to ulnar side of right thumb, and thence across to distal aspect to radial side of thumb, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The left ulnar thumb string should run straight across to ulnar side of right index finger, from where it is hooked down by the three fingers of the right hand. The distance between the hands should be about three inches; this must be maintained throughout the figure by allowing more string to pass through the hooked-down fingers of the right hand, as required.

[1949 1103]

[*] The already described, in the beginning of nine more of the five-corners in north Bound down from above as crows. It is assumed that the plumage of their little man born have attached to the reason to some way the "Raven-tail" that usual in this figure. On reaching north, these coverings were taken off without difficulty, as other represented in this design by the fully bearing of the non-physical underneath of springs. This figure was collected from a man whose first ancestor came to earth in a canoe, the descendants consequently stated that the pattern represented the specific heritage of the very forefather's plumage.

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

APPENDIX C

GLOSSARY OF FLORA AND FAUNA

824 825 828

THIS glossary does not give the scientific names of all the flora and fauna known to the Bella Coola, or even of all mentioned in this monograph, but only those of which the usual designations are ambiguous. In cases of the common mammals, no scientific terminology has been attempted, since the multiplicity of sub-species renders identification almost impossible, and the popular name is sufficient for general purposes. In regard to plants, a difficulty lies in the fact that Bella Coola nomenclature is not always strictly accurate botanically. Two or more distinct forms, for example, may be grouped together on account of their similar use as food, and one name applied to them indiscriminately. Conversely, different terms are sometimes given to various parts of the same tree, the roots, the bark, the leaves, and so on. These factors combine to complicate the study of either ethno-botany or ethno-zoology, and necessitate the collection of a large number of specimens. The late Mr. H. I. Smith has done so, and this glossary could not have been compiled without his assistance, though the writer is responsible for any errors in it.

824
825

Alder	Alnus rubra Bong.
Aspen, American	Populus tremuloides Michx.
Blackberry, Red	Rubus nutkanus (L.) Spreng.
Bilberry, Dwarf	Vaccinium caespitosum Michx.
Bilberry, Tall	Vaccinium ovalifolium Smith.
Bilberry, Thin leaved	Vaccinium membranaceum Dougl.
Birch	Betula sp.
Blackberry	Rubus spectabilis Pursh.
Blackfish—for Killer Whale.
Blueberry	Vaccinium parvifolium Smith
Bracken	Pteris aquilina (L.) var. lanuginosa Bong.
Buffaloberry, Canadian	Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.
Bunch-berry	Cornus canadensis, L.
Cedar, Red	Thuja gigantea Nutt.
Cedar, Yellow	Chamaecyparis nootkatensis (Lamb.) Spach.
Clover, Perennial	Trifolium fimbriatum Lindl.
Cod, Black	Anoplopoma fimbria Pallas.
Cod, Red Rock	Sebastodes ruberrimus Cramer.
Cottonwood	Fluderusvaw sp.
Cottonwood, Black	Populus trichocarpa T. and G.
Cow Parsnip	Heracleum lanatum Michx.
Crabapple	Pyrus diversifolia Bong.
Cranberry	Viburnum pauciflorum Rad.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

824
825

Cow	Corvus caurinus
Coyote	Rhus laciniata Pursh.
Devil's Club	Fatsia horrida (Ser.) R. and H.
Duck, Wooden	Rumex occidentalis Wats.
Dogbane, Spreading	Apocynum androsaemifolium, L.
Dog fish	Squalus suckii Girard
Duck, Harlequin	Histrionicus histrionicus
Duck, Mallard	Anas platyrhynchos
Eagle, Bald	Haliaeetus leucocephalus
Eagle, Golden	Aquila chrysaetos
Elderberry, Red	Sambucus racemosa, L.
Fern, sp.	Prob. Aspidium spinulosum Sw.
Fir	Pseudotsuga mucronata Rad.
Fir, White	Abies grandis Lindl.
Fungus, Shelf	Polyporus glabratus Fries.
Goose, Canada	Branta canadensis canadensis
Goose, White-fronted	Anser albifrons
Gooseberry	Ribes bracteosum Dougl.
Gooseberry, Swamp	Ribes lacustre (Pers.) Poir.
Gooseberry, Wild	Ribes divaricatum Dougl.
Grouse, Blue	Dendragapus obscurus
Grouse, Spruce	Canachites canadensis
Gull	Larus sp.
Halibut	Hippoglossus hippoglossus Linn.
Hawthorn, Black	Crataegus douglasii, C. Dougl. Lindl.
Hellebore, False	Veratrum viride Ait.
Hemlock	Tsuga mertensiana (Bong.) Sarg.
Heron, Great Blue	Ardea herodias
Herring	Clupea pallasii C. and V.
Huckleberry, Black	Vaccinium ovalifolium
Hummingbird, Rufous	Selasphorus rufus
Fritillaria	Fritillaria sp.
Jay, Rocky Mountain	Perisoreus canadensis capitalis
Jay, Steller	Cyanocitta stelleri
Jasmine, Flowering	Jasminum florida Lindl.
Killer Whale	Orca gladiator
Kingfisher, Belted	Ceryle alcyon
Lion	Felis sp.
Maple, Rocky Mountain	Acer glabrum Torr.
Mergansar	Mergus americanus
Merganser, Red-breasted	Mergus serrator
Mosquito	Culicidae sp.
Mussel, Fresh-water	Margarita margaritifera[1]
Mustela	Mustela vulgaris Wats.
Oystercatcher	Haematopus bachmani Richardson
Owl, Horned	Bubo virginianus
Paxley	Gonorhinus sp.

[1] For the identification of this species the writer is indebted to the late Judge Lockhart, of the Ontario Supreme Court.

3; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Pine	Pinus ponderosa Dougl.
Popular	Populus tremuloides
Pulse	Lonicera ciliosa or Fraxinus oregonica
Raspberry, Black	Rubus leucodermis Dougl.
Raspberry, Wild Red	Rubus strigosus Michx.
Rattan	Cornus canus circinata
Robin	Planesticus migratorius propinquus
Rose, Wild	Rosa nutkana Presl.
Salalberry	Gaultheria Shallon Pursh.
Salmon, Coho	Oncorhynchus kisutch Walbaum
Salmon, Dog	Oncorhynchus keta Walbaum
Salmon, Hump-back	Oncorhynchus gorbuscha Walbaum
Salmon, Sockeye	Oncorhynchus nerka Walbaum
Salmon, Spring	Oncorhynchus tschawytscha Walbaum
Salmon, Steel-head	Salmo gairdneri Richardson
Salmon-berry	Rubus parviflorus Nutt.
Sardine	Sardinia caerula
Skunk cabbage, Western	Lysichiton kamtschatcense (L.) Schott.
Snail	Ariolimax columbianus
Strawberry	Fragaria sp.
Spruce	Picea sitchensis (Bong.) Carr.
Spruce, Black	Picea mariana (Mill.) B.S.P.
Strawberry, Wild	Fragaria sp.
Swamp	Salix spithulifolius Hook.
Swan	Olor sp.
Thrush, Varied	Turdus naevius
Toad	Bufo boreas boreas
Water-lily	Nymphaea polysepala (Engelm.) Greene
Water Ouzel	Cinclus mexicanus
Willow	Salix sp.
Wren, Winter	Nannus hiemalis pacificus

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

Alkhelsiwas: Supernatural being sent by Sunsiwa to meet Nusiyum.

alnipa-ai, "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to enter him on the perch to assist impersonate though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously at every feast. [556]

Alskiwa: Alskiwa-shell covered stick used by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

Alskiwa-tsalkiwa: One of the first women to settle at Tal'ts in the beginning of time.

alsiwalk: Word of ceremonies meaning often repeated to Sunsiwa as complete term for the first night of a burial dance. [575] alskaiwum, "A Dragging Arrow": An arrow drawn with a heavy load. The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being reprimanded. [425] [553]

alpiwa: Toasted food of any kind. [262]

Alsiwaumsa: Ancestral name of a Sisaa man.

alsiq': Performed, adjusted. [252]

alsiwaustin: Those who perform to assist marriage dances.

Alsnaskulaiu: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.

Al-tsaskuiu: One of the first men to settle at Tal'ts in the beginning of time. [575] aliptalis, "Measures of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and bride prior to entering her house. [491]

alqualsin: Gifts given in secret, even after betrothal, by the father of the groom to the father of the future bride. [584] alqualsin: Marshal.

alqlaskw-i: Immortal supernatural woman; synonym for Aslaxsalaxsh.

Alsnaskuaulin: One of the men who came to settle at Mount Tsaxis in the beginning of time.

Al-skiwa: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.

alskiwi: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516]

alsiq: Accord song in first time. [593]

alsi: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [585] alsaqlsa: Ancient dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.

Al'psaiu-ai: Daughter of the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.

alsaiu: Synonym for pasaqlqai; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] alsaiu: 1—Night dance.

2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.

alsi: Crown, impressive chapter.

Alsiwa: 1—One of Sunsiwa's sons in the beginning of time.

2—One of the first women to settle at Nuwaiti in the beginning of time.

alsal-kaiu: Control sent behind the fire.

alskiulu: Harpoon with handle for pounding sticks for fish-nets. [442] alskaiulu: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola. [585] alskaiulu: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun.

Alsqlsqaum, "The Devourer of Most Killed by Another": Term used by humans to Wolf. [525]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ala: entry village.

Alaxqh, "Isle of the Tied-up Penis": Name given to a lad whose sex was disguised in infancy.

[426] ałkumuałat: Refusal to lend to an outsider a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dancers.

[374] ałnapałnumu: Meal served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.

Ałsełyumu: Name of a female shaman.

Ałtul, "The Opening of the Sky":
1—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ituse in the beginning of time.
3—Name of a Snuhet chief.

Ałtułułuin: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

Ałtułułułuin: One of the first men to settle at Ałłłłał in the beginning of time.

[575] ałłłuumu: Sunet having the ability to enter the back-room and treat initiates concealed there. The function probably antedates the employment of łut ałłłła.

Ałłpaiu: Holders, supernatural beings who restrain supernatural Cannibals.

[583] ałłuum: Frenzied beating of sticks.

Ałuumułu: Wife of Tsunałła, the supernatural hunter.

Ałuułułułuu: Supernatural calendrical experts.

Ałuułułułła: Husband of Ału'łłłułułuin; he is known only in Kimsquit.

[575] ałuułułułł: Kwiat dance of mystery.

[574] ałuułułułułuu: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony.

*ałuułułułuł

*192 Ālximēwa, "Left Foot": Ilnax repository named from part of a supernatural creature.

Ālximlaix: Kimsquit hunter living in the last century.

[825] ālqmutl: Dentalium-shell.

ālqmuk'aq, "Not Finished": Said concerning a kusiut who dies between initiation and his first complete dance.

[292 881] ālxwam: Skull cap of grass and dentalium-shells worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.

ālxwala: Guest, especially from afar, to a kusiut dance.

Ālxwalāmm: 1—Supernatural herald.
2—Assemblage of the people for ceremonies of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and guessing competitions in connection with the Mystery dance.
3—Kimsquit term for the first night of a kusiut dance.

ālxwlaix, "A Surpassing": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than they have received in return.

[576 601] āmai: Place of concealment of a Mystery dancer's power.

ā'mastāqlt: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for indirect address.

āmātax: Rightful location, especially the validated position of a chief in a house.

[415] āmātuts: Dishes carved with ancestral crest.

āmkēli: 1—Mouse.
2—Daughter of the first settlers at Sutlia.

[825] āml: Spring salmon.

āmlu: Spring-salmon house.

Āmlāklis: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.

Āmlāklis: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

āmlāmlum: 1—The allotment of work to kukusiut in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.
2—Hence, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a kusiut dance.

Ānāxulānāmlaix, "The Resident Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Snāsli.

[575] ānāmsku or sānāmsku: That which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a kusiut ritual.

ānāxāqutl: Second night of a potlatch.

[226] ānāxwalatl: Artificial, pier-like structure built into a river for use in hand-net fishing.

Āwilxaix, "Where People Go": A reflecting pool created by Raven at Kimsquit.

Ānokāxālāli: Cave near Dean Channel.

Ānolqmdimut, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Tlitsplilān-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Āpā'lātwalaix: Supernatural woman who guards repositories.

Āpāxālāmots: 1—"The Open-Mouthed" (in the sense of open to suck forth sickness): One of Tlitsplilān-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

[756 823] āsaxum: Swift running water.

āsālmatuāsax: 1—Ranks of ordinary individuals; this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the Asōk society.
2—Something supernatural seen when awake.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

192*

Anukhtsuts: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit woman.
anukhtlimut, "This Is to Make Straight Your Road": Said when a call is returned, or food thrown upon a fire for the dead.
Anukwlat, "Place of Big Stones in the River": Village at Kwatna.
Anukhkhlais: Women immolated in a repository and hence become supernatural.
anukhlil': Rainbow-coloured nose-ring worn by Death.
Anukhpkmis: Supernatural name of Hawk.
anukhtal': Short cord by which the hamps is held during the kwakwa'i dance.
Anukhtimun: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anukhmais, "The One that Fills the Rivers": Supernatural name of hump-back salmon.
anulkat: Nose-ring.
anulnatsk: Mourning song composed for a chief and, apparently, the singing of one.
Anulwum: Place on the north-west side of Dean Channel, about nine miles from its head, where curative power is petrified.
Anumatkum: Supernatural beings who remind the supreme god of his kwiat duties.
Anumitkum: Supernatural being who removes those killed by the receipt of too much power from Nincplilwa.
anunaym: Meeting of chiefs, anulnat.
anunal: Person who catches early eulachon in a hand-net.
anupsjum: Buoyant stones such as are found in a lake near the headwaters of the Bella Coola.
Anupumkilt: Supernatural being who regulates the height of tides in rivers.
anupsitum: To await, especially a supernatural being.
Anupunlaix: Son of the first settlers at Sisilis.
Anupinlaix, "What Fills People": Name created by Smanu in the beginning of time with reference to his stores of salmon.
anupsnum: Silent waiting in darkness before a kwiatum dance.
Anupuntikum: Supernatural being who gives inspiration.
Anusikhsiutsis: 1—Supernatural name of nuiat.
2—Method of killing practised by nuiat.
Anusikhsiusair-ais: Name of a Bella Coola shaman.
Anu-yhuutsum: Name of a Kimsquit woman.
anunkl'alsitum: The rare prerogative of changing from kwiat to nuiat rites on alternate nights.
Anuskitum, "The Saviour": One of Nincplilwa's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anuskmutsu: One of the first men to settle at Tal-ts in the beginning of time.
anuskumuy: Peculiar cry uttered by a kwiat scratcher.
Anuyuuar-ais: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit man.
Anuy: Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.
anuqulnutsis, "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts: Identical with selsmat, q.v.
Anuyinis: One of the first women to settle at Sishiat in the beginning of time.
Anutsktimutsut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
anutsu: 1—Excavated house furnished with stepped platforms for guests.
2—Village at Kwatna.

[825]
[301]
[593]
[778]
[226]
[823]
[424]
[198]
[342]

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NER Bellacoola NER

#192

Anuqlis: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Anuhalim: Man one-armed in an ancient story.
Anutqum-yel, "Lakeside": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anuxnalim: Name obtained by an Ilqulaut man in the beginning of time.
Anuqulnum, "Quivering To and Fro": One of Tlesquillim's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anuxtalim: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola man.
Anuxtmo-a: 1—Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Sisaa expository named from part of a supernatural experience.

[431] [426] anuqqy: Term applied to the giving of a support, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
Anuxlumulmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[463] anuxnilchow-ain: Kuxlat profanities, at Kimsquit only, of throwing snake on the fire.
Anuxnulmuth, "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme god's dwelling.
anuyus: 1—Owner of a puppet-person.
2—Synonym for ulamamamum, q.v.
Anuqulhalim: Supernatural being who rules Ashaiut of their thoughts at the Mystery dance.
Ao-ai: 1—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Ilqulaut in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
aqa: Excreta.
Aqatl-a, "The Privy One": Name taken by a chief for himself in virtue of the remarks made about his habits.
Aqulnis: Scout name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] aqum: Herring eggs.
[824] aqumulq: Cormorant.
aqua: Type of sea-going canoe.
[825] aqua: Harlequin duck.
Aqulnyutmamum, "The Constant Eater": Term used by hunters to Eagle.
Aqu-ta-i, "Concave Town": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
aqumuuq: Canoes lashed together.
Ar-ao: Locality on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.
[601] ar-cha-ti: 1—Second oldest sibling.
2—Second part of song.
[775] arintmum: 1—"They Who Have Become Supernatural": Title conferred by ghosts.
2—Women living in the moon.
Ar-iumuq: Inhabitants of the village of Arus".
[424] ar-mumulus: Person with good memory commissioned to remember family prerogatives.
Arus", "At the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
asbaiut: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post."
[752] ashaiuts: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
Ashalumun: Ceremonial bathing at dawn.
[515] Ashamalilain: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola woman.
Ashamlil: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola man.

APPENDIX D

192*

Ayilim: Village on Salmon Houses, on the upper Dean River.
ainkum: Position between two fires.
ainkul: 1—Ruined land behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural.
2—Wasteful.[1] [823] ainmiim: To vomit.
ainmiimmiid[1]: Hereditary has handed down recently to a family. [824] Ayimdo: One of Raven's Crest names. aiyiwan: Assent song to show time. [823] aiskiim: 1—Bun, synkeitz, bannock, meat.
2—One of the nights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representative of the deceased appears.
aiyu: Rocky Mountain jay. [825] ajiwanak: Curved house post.
Ahahcouit: Wife of Sasdiq; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
aaskuuit: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Aaiyuuiniiniim: Expedition of the supernatural being Wiwaiw against herons and fish.
Ayiyuuu: Swanson's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the stones has since been used by his descendants.
aayuuiniim: Only sister in a family of several brothers.
ayl: Smile. [601]
ayuuskum: Stamping in medicinal smoke as a curative measure. [825] ahiyuuiy: Fir. [755] Ahiyuuiid: Evil male supernatural being. [824] a'iiwa: 1—Death, not anthropomorphized. [825] 2—Dead. [827]
ainuit[1]: Kingfisher.
ajil: Fish-hook.
Ainkum, "Diety of the Huge Jaws": Supernatural beings resident in the land otters.
aiskiwa: Knotted spy.
aiuqhuit: plural, aiuqhuit, neutro plural, aiuqhuit.
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kitsumgalum woman.
Ajiki: unknown village.
Ayit: Bear was mentioned in an ancient story.
aya-hanjiut, "He Urinates Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indication of misfortune, hence the word really means omen. It is the Kitsumgalum variant of a-ranjiut. [787] a-ranjiut: Omen of death.
Ayet-i, "Occupied Mound": 1—Village at Kwatsa.
2—Artificial mound at Yal'in.
3—Village on the Kitsumgalum River.
4—Island near Ocean Falls.
Ayet-i ion Wanduda, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Ocean Falls where the dogs come to earth in the beginning of time.
ayuuu-i: Varied thrush. [825]

[1] The latter is a favourite place for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

#192

[illegible]: Laughing man; those whose hearts are plentiful.
[illegible]: Chief living on Tsi'o in the beginning of time.

[illegible]

[illegible]: One of the s'ulk dances.
[illegible]: I, first person singular.
[illegible]: Having eggs which brought into house ready for preparation as food.

[illegible]

[illegible]: Supernatural animal.
[illegible]: One of the five women who dance man of Kwanna in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: To guess, as done by the assistant at a Winter dance.
[illegible]: Supernatural being.
[illegible]: Longitude.
[illegible]: Central name of a Sulia man.
[illegible]: Shadow shell.
[illegible]: Influential Kwanna woman who died about 1870.
[illegible]: Rub-rapped but work by shells.
[illegible]: A Kitsaqut component.
[illegible]: Dance man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Supernatural, man-like creatures.

[illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]: The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
[illegible]: 1—"The Canoe," synonym for Nuliyum.
2—The burial paraphernalia of along Nuliyum.
[illegible], "The Ever-Canoe": Synonym for Nuliyum.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who owns Nuliyum.
[illegible]: Supernatural dog whose residence is the land above.
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]: Mary's husband.
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]: Ann's husband.
[illegible]: One of the five men to write at Hagulsut in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Archaic term for Sacred Bowlers.[1] [illegible]: Frayed cedar-wood, as used for tinder.
[illegible], plural, [illegible]: Boy, term used in dance address for an adult.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible] [illegible], "The Sun Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kwanna.
[illegible]: Collective term applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking people of the mainland.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Chief of abalone-shell people on the lower Fraser in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the five men to write at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the five women to write at Tsi'o in the beginning of time.

[1] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.
[illegible] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.

G 192*

[278]

[601]

H

[825]

I

[824]

[856]
[431]

[226]

[426]
[824]

Bibliotheca Wenzel K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

142 *
[805]

xwxtal, "The Time for Easter Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice.
xyaqyaqut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ikaikai in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Secret name of a Kimsquit man.
xhlxhlik: One of the supernatural companions.
xlxnxwxnxwxn: The separation of a wife from her husband.
xnxtal: Synonym for qwxnlut, a present for which a return is not expected.
xwxwxnlut: Hereditary tendency.
xpxn: Secret name of a Stuwx man.
xrxkw: Red rock cod. The difference between this and lxlwik is problematical.
xwlxlkxm: One of the first men to settle at Kemgaxa in the beginning of time.
xwlkwxnw'xlxnxw xlxnxw xl xl: The entreating of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to relinquish her on expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations owned into at marriage.
xpxn xlxlxwxnxlxlxlxlx: Sacrilege supernatural retribution.
xxlxlxlxx: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up.
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position.
xxlxlxlxlxlx, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
xxlxxxxx-i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
xxlxlxxlxlxlxl: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
xxlxlxxxxxxxxxxxxx: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tsi'ix in the beginning of time.
xxxxxxxxxxxxx, "The Track of the Sun": Ala'k name obtained in the beginning of time.
xxxxlxlxlxlxlx: Supernatural name of xxlxlxl.
xxxxxxxx, "Commander": 1—Said to be the word from which Alqaxxxx is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
xxlxlxxxxxx, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Sxxxxxx in the beginning of time.
xxxxxxxxxxxxx: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief. xxxxl-x: Xxxlxl name of a Stuwx man.
xxxlxxxxxx: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
xx-xxx-xxx: 1—One of the first men to settle at Kemgaxa in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
xxxxxxxxxxx, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Sxxxxxx in the beginning of time.
xxxxxxxx, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Sxxlxll and Tsi'ix.

X

Xxx: 1—Snow.
2—Unidentified berry.
Xxxxxxlix: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Xxxxxxix: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
Xxxxx: Crow.
Xxxxxxx: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

[821]
[824]

[825]

[578]
[431]
[527]
[528]
[583]

[787]
[556]

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB DeGarcesia NEB

#192

[824] tsi'talk: Top, probably bush.
Tsitsukil: One of the first men to settle at Sutcul in the beginning of time.
Tsitsilus: One of the first men to settle at Snaitli in the beginning of time.
Tsilum: Bella Bella woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsitsul: Kitamaat man.
[222] Tsiluem: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
[262] tsilum: The gathering of fish roes for food.
Tsiyumulkum: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Snaa in the beginning of time.
Ts'lwa: Kitamaat man mentioned in an ancient story.
[585] tsukuldlamu: Public ceremony, previous to marriage, of the bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[842] tsulpum: Ritual on the day before a marriage, including the recital of myths by the bride's relatives, the choosing of ceremonies, and the singing of songs of all kinds.
[576] Tsumi'u: 1—Mysterious supernatural woman.
2—"Please," or "Thank You," a word inspiring lassitude.
Tsumlamy": 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuskum in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuqulci in the beginning of time.
3—Name of the first sky that fell in the beginning of time.
Tsumlelbi: Lazy supernatural beings who accompanied Nankynum.
Tsumlqum: Man mentioned in an origin myth of Ilgulnul.
Tsumlululu: Kwiat name of a Kitamaat man.
Tsumtumy": Human brought to earth by first settlers at Nuqulci in the beginning of time.
[824] tsuul: Kelp.
[227] tsumulu: Cod bush.
tsumur: Tumination.
[824] tsunlu-i: 1—Shell lungan.
2—Kwiat dance in which a shell lungan is used.
Tsunlhu: One of the first women to settle at Snaa in the beginning of time.
tsu'ituut: Ceremonial crow.
Tsusuie: Herald of a Tal'u chief in the beginning of time.
tsuduu: Trap.
Tsusudulum: 1—Daughter of the first settlers at Sidlis in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of Ojpaul, one of the first settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[264] tsuilitu: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
Tsuqululum: One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tsuwilsdjiw-a: Supernatural berry-picker resident in the land of ghosts.
[825] tsijui: 1—Hump-back salmon.
2—Convex transverse beam near front and rear of house.
3—Mountain on the Dean River.
Tsqaie: Kwaki name of a Kitamaat man.
Tsutsu: Man mentioned in an ancient story of Raven.
[752] tsutsi: The seeking for shaman's power by a lad.
[825] tsumie: Golden eagle.
tsulum: Top, toy.
[524]

Ketsiu: Tail.
Ketskit: Arm.
Ku: Black hawthorn.
Kuiu-i: Earlier name of a Kwanusis man.
Kunéhan: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaliq who was changed to snow in the beginning of time.
Kuuli: Rapids.
Kwanéhan: Kitkata chief living in the beginning of time.
Kwaliq: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.
Kwanéhan-i: Earlier name of a Kwanusis woman.*
Lakt: Bark basket for holding liquids.
Lakwakéjan: The making of assistance from a man who owes a caring supernatural.
Lakwakéjanu: Investment property, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
Lakuu: Bark cups in which sacred substances and odors are concealed.
Lalu: Woman during menstruation.
Lalóu, "What Was Seen Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
Lamajáu: Wooden wedge such as are used for lifting box stones.
Lakwakéjan ale kwanéjan: Earlier site to which the performer appears to be devoted.
Lel ate ne lel ate, "The Guiser": One who has been initiated as a member of the Sacred society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through ceremonial knowledge or through successful participation in either a Sacrifice or a Mystery dance.
Lelóli, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Lelúnga: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Lemau: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
Léju, uwatin, léjanu: Grandmother.
Lekt-tsaw-ni-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Li'lanéhit: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
Liskanawaxu, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Lisnéhan: One of the first women to settle at Alqéhit in the beginning of time.
Lisu'o-i: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Lomaw: 1—Crab.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Lúpdau: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
Lúji: Red elderberry.
Lúlu: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark.
Lúu: Unidentified plant.
Lúwu: To toast dried salmon.
Malamanéju: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Malqanati: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Zawadi.
Ma'ya: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

*This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kuiu-i.

192*
[825]
[824]
[585]
[415]
[426]
[431]
[424]
[812]
[575]
[756]
[601]
[825]
[824]
[419]
[252]

#192
[1]
[1]
[1]

APPENDIX D

[illegible] 192*

Aalhamer: Gaaqis were for presents given to a future bridegroom by the father of the future bride. [431]

Kaishkinaqlan: Supernatural being whose research is set in the land above. [584]

Kaqqis: Gaaqis.

Kaskaqlaqwa, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Wunsas. [576]

Kaskasas: Designation for a series of difficult and spectacular Kwakiutl dances.

Kaskwas: Said to be identical with ulalamakis, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactors. [752]

Kaskil: ginwal, kalaxtas, wanitis, kaskwa, wanitis ginwal, kalaxtas.

1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season. [575]

2—Member of the society.

3—"The Lowest One": Designation occasionally applied to a supernatural being, especially a cannibal one, or to a person having power to cure the sick. [752]

Kaskwa: Kwakiutl female shaman living in the last century.

Kaskwa: Relatedness, especially a child, this is the vocative form of the word.

Kaskwam: Orphan.

Kaskwikalaqlaka: Woman dwelling on Fort Rupert in the beginning of time.

Kaspale: South Sulia.

Kaskwal: Supernatural name of Cannonsun.

Kas-kasa: Mosquitoes. [825]

Kaskwanakil: Mosquitoes sucked by the first settlers at Nass. [763]

Kaskwas: Unidentified kind of which the name is an omen of death.

Kaskin: Rarlat name of a Bella Coola man.

Kaskinas: Rarlat name of a Bella Coola man.

Kaskinamat: Rarlat name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.

Kasd-ia-i: Smooth pavements, "jadeite," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands. [823]

Kasis: Evergreen bough. [824]

Kaskasal: Famous Bella Coola warrior.

Kasqwal: One of the sculpins.

Kasstas: Rarlat name of a Kitsepsis man.

Kast-nad-a, "The Big One": Lustful male supernatural being.

Kastlaxalas: Man who came to earth near Ziaxa in the beginning of time.

Kas-tsam: Kitsepsis woman.

Katlaiis: Kitsepsis man mentioned in an ancient story.

Katlam: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.

Katlam: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Katlaskala, "One Who Has without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Katsis: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nuqalkilt chief, the word is a synonym for Wiwas chiefs.

Katlilas Nuskinqas: One of the nine supernatural siblings. [533]

Kaskwalalas-ala: Lullaby.

Kaul-yala: Archaic expression used in a string figure.

Kaslu: 1—Pen or trap in the ocean for salmon. [226]

2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

4 192

L

[825] Lakhkhlu: Kimsquit man mentioned in ancient story.
Lakiz: Squirrel.
Lapsumuis: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ḳwapsis in the beginning of time.
2—Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[463] Lasnisyas'i: Name of a professional warrior; the word is said to have originated in Kitkatla but has remained for many generations in Kimsquit.
La'pulu: Atnarko River, northern fork of the Bella Coola.
Lalamck: Sunsk name of a Kimsquit man.
Lalawhkila, "The Brother Of [of Gonts]": Professional name of one of the first settlers at Snaldi in the beginning of time. This may be the same word as Lalawhkila.
Lalawhkila: Another name for Tsalakit, the supernatural hunter. This may be the same word as Lalawhkila.
[825] Lilimsulais: 1—"The Breacher": Supernatural name of Otter.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
[886] Lilqudzilz: Return in old age to the thoughts and actions of infancy, senile decay.
[426] Lodjat: To repay indebtedness of any kind, especially presents received at potlatches.
[583] Lolimodjat, "A Paying": An arrangement by which a man's son-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative by way of repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters.
Lomas: Wrestling or shoving.
Lilsem: Abbreviated Cannibal rite.
Lo'qwa: 1—Famous Bella Bella chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Lulumu: Mash.
Lulu: Tool for making vertical incisions in the bark of cedar trees.

Ł

Łakwakila: Tsesut man living in the beginning of time.
Łakiuks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[823] Łalla: 1—Copper.
2—Unidentified town on the outer coast, mentioned in a story of the beginning of time.
3—Chief of this town.
Łaliasiuts: Daughter of chief of the town of Copper.
Łaliaslal: Copper canoe acquired by the first settlers at Sisus in the beginning of time.
Łaliaks: Man's name, created by the first settlers at Sałlia, in the beginning of time.
Łaliakdja: Name taken for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Łaliaks: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Łaliamg: Sisook name assumed by one of the first settlers at Ałpałasi in the beginning of time.
Łaliasas, "The Copper One": One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Z: McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

#192

Kuhchaut: Earlier name of a Kwakiutl man.
Kulu'ximut: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
[824] kupel: Inner bark of cedar.
kusstimuk, "A Stripping Off": The giving, on demand, by a marriage dancer of his clothing to a herald.
Ku'xumpalaix: Supernatural name of Raven.
[828] kwanis, "Frenzied": Term applied to Cannibals and other destructive behavior when in a state of madness.
kwaus: Occasional exclusion of all but the singers from a house where a shamen is performing.
Kwaxumwalaix: Kitamgaix man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kwaxumuxu: Earlier name, probably of Kwakiutl origin.

M

Ma'ulus: Female dancer mentioned in a Raven story.
Malaxat: Earlier name of a Kemgaix man.
[601] mama, mamie, mimmy: Mother, term used by children.
Mamaiyu: Celebrated Xenaix hunter.
[825] mam-aipa: Butterfly.
mam-aika: Measuring worm.
[824] mamu: Fly, insect.
ma'mutsu: Swamp gooseberry.
[601] mata: 1—Father, common term in indirect address.
2—Occasional designation for the supreme deity.
[614] matadimus: Stepfather.
matamauk: Elderly male relatives of same unilateral family.
Matang[w]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuhlum in the beginning of time.
2—Form of the name Da'xang[w] when used by a male child.
Matang[w]-ma-a: Form of the name Dadaxang[w] when used by a female child.
Matakilkuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[804] Matlapcuuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[825] ma-lpi: Measure of distance equal to the breadth of one thumb plus one finger.
ma-tuf: Toad.
matupu: Supernatural giant toad.
matuta: Salmon eggs.
ma-wuja: Old male sea-lion.
[825] ma-xatkha: Water ouzel.
Maqutsu: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Maxantilan, "Long Neck": One of the supernatural names of Great Blue Heron.
maxat-i: Co-husband in a polyandrous household.
[824] ma'xual-i: One of the paralys.
mefal: Berry, black in colour.
Memestikma: Generic term for the four supernatural Carpenters. memikelp: Spruce.
Mial'ula: One of the first men to settle at Satla in the beginning of time.
Mikhma: Land of salmon.
[224] Mi'ala: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[824] mi'a: Stick carried by hunters when penetrating into the mountains.
milta[w]: Red huckleberry.

Zolbi Dewalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

192*

mimmiqhalq: Leaf of salal berry.
mis-mulqat: 1—Dance of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence.
2—Smallpox.
mitha: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mma, mmitta, mmim: Child.
Mmokula: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mnal': Known.
mnmnmi, mnmim, mnmnmim-i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person.
mo-ldimmum: The commemoration of a chief's patronches and other major ceremonies by means of place posts erected near his grave.
Mothim-mum, Tilla-Mumum: A supernatural being.
Mumlim: Man mentioned in a song.
Mithlilla: Supernatural being who gives potency to sacred rites.
mulkum: Grandiloquent expression used by the initiated with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives.
mulhulum: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living.
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mul': Provided, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mulmulu: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by dancer initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mqala: Lice.
mqatsla: Adolescent youth.
mtimmulk': Blue grouse.
mumumlhkimulu: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
mu: Hand net for catching chinook.
mulqmulqalum: Yellow cedar stave decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
muximum: Wrestling.
Mutawa: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nain'ahwa: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Na'ma: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nam: Grizzly bear.
Nantalit: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time.
Nawit: Kwiat name of a Nuxalk man.
Nenaldmi: One of the first men to settle at Ilmo in the beginning of time.
Nenalelwith: One of the names of Mount Nuxalk as chief.
nin-lamt: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling.
Nass: Indeterminate locality in the distant east.

[183] ai'ik: Mountain copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Ai-ai: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
amum: To dance.
[185] amumalis: Those who dance at marriages.
amum: Mallard duck.
[324] amumnuxum: Night of potlatch on which sacred initiates appear for a short dance.
amulis: Species of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] anahapitu: Thimble-like wooden dish.
anaklakum: Ceremonial meeting of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Ananqulus: Name acquired by a Nuxalk Indian man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Ananulus: Professional name of a hamat'sa member.
Ana-nuxu-a: Kaxlax name of a Bella Coola horseflies; the designation was derived from Nuxalk Indian.
Ai-ula-a: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Ai-ximalus: Influential Bella Coola chief.
[770] Ahkulakum, "The Rainbow": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
[784] ankaum: 1—Fourth day of a hamat'sa dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Aqqaw: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
asaxal, "Little Dance": Form of grandson humility.
asemkum: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the hamat'sa season.
Ananiz-mukumis: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Tlitqalitlas-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Kaxlax name of a Bella Coola man.
Ananulinuis: Kaxlax name of a Nuxalk man.
atsalamim: One who has preserved a marriage song.
atsawalmuch: The intangible atmosphering that comes to a bridegroom as a result of the creation of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] [431] Atsilkiliz: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tsaxid in the beginning of time.
[524] atsiq'ual: Wooden ring used in a game.
Atlaxis: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the dog formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
[825] atlapaya': Otter.
Atsilkat: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Atsiamalais: 1—"The Restorer": One of Tlitqalitlas-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[556] atsum, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a copper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Atsumilmit: Shaman's name derived from Tlitqalitlas-a. atsumlus: "I have saved you."

192*

[824]

[825]

[622]

[559]

[746]

[688]

[426]

[821]

[769]

[823]

[535]

wiwilaxa: Intraglith hamat prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract.
Wuju: Expert supernatural dancer, so his successor he is a yearling mountain goat.
wunly ay wakalyakum: Free complete dance given by a hamat initiate.
wunwuil: Mammal, any kind.
Xamsamsin: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
Yaahlda: 1—One of the four seats to settle on the upper Dean to the beginning of time.
2—One of the five seats to settle on Swaihl to the beginning of time.
Yaakyawa: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.
Yaamsamsin: Name given to his grandson by one of the four settlers at Xishsal to the beginning of time.
yakwim: Hamat prerogative as a Bowdoin; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.
yakwim: Sleeping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kitamaat, hamat masks are hung.
yawnak: The cooking and use of hand seats for chiefs.
Yaudjamaxum: 1—"The Adviser"; One of the names of the supreme god.
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; verbally, "The Sages."
ya'nuxlim: 1—Ceremony at which noted women are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers.
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed.
ya'nuqlut: Assemblage of the hahamat to practice difficult rites.
Ya-ghum, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Phrytabus name given to a deserting wife.
Yawahlis: One of the names of Raven as chief.
yawahlishum: Sentence of death passed by the hahamat on one of their fellows as punishment for an error.
yawiyum: A loss, especially of an ancestral right.
Yaakyawa: Synonym for Yaakyawa, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.
Ya'ium, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
yaqlyaku: Tobacco.
yaxcile: Birch.
Yaxdzaqu: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind.
yaxkl-ax: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead.
yaxkl-ax da ilawax: 1—High tide.
2—Long life.
yaqlgaxu: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold chicken-net post steady while being driven.
Ya'yaxsil, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Yeal": 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.
Yaxlamlamin: Synonym for *Xaxamlamlaml

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Nuxûqhelum: An influential Kwakiutl chief.
Nuxuxu: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.
nuqaxem: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a hoxiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.
nuxûqmûl: Cream extracted from sockeye salmon heads.
[825] Nuxûqûi: Ancestral name of a Tsaxo chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[778] nuxûla sta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where curses are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.
Nuxûl, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
Nuxûwizadjas, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[552] Nuxûqumûl di mûsk', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.
Nutalomemum: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Nuxûymem's departure to warn hokaxiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.
[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.
Nutalulsk, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[431] nuxqum: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.
Nutilqalank, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.
Nutisqemenkta: One of the first women to settle at Tal-io in the beginning of time.
nutmkmankdas: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.
Nutkiûl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.
nutkmûkdas: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nutmkmankdas.
[428] nutmâstmax: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.
nutotsnik-sta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a nusak head-dress.
nutj: Landslide, such as is caused by Tsutalkit or nsiatl.
Nutqanlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nutqualt in the beginning of time.
nutqunta, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.
nutqutsa: House-posts nearest to front door.
nutsnikta: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
[426] nutlsmamamum, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donor who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his [556] clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.
nutsadjim: Cry uttered by a nusak official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of nusak novices.
[342] nutsinpailaix: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a nusak novice.
nutswalkals: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.
numâlkals: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.
Numêm-ta, "Place of Flies": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

nemu, nemtin, nemutsu: Member of same sex and same ancestral family as speaker. [601]

Nemitim: Supernatural being who comes with Nestpum to bring a call to the latter's protégé. [614]

Nemulkmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

nemil: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract. [826]
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.

nemomskin: Toilet-hole.

nenlutmun: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony. [465]

nenmkmmun: Exchange marriage. [583] nenpkhitmun: Passenger.

Ne-nts: Place near Nuliaz.

Nentemlain: Kuziut name created by uyuyuyut at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

nenmui di mimu: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker. [601] nenmui ti mimu: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.

Nenuno'ts, "The Inhospitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Nenukmunk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nenudjipum: Supernatural being who created repositories in the beginning of time.

Nenulunk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nenulpum: House occupied by the first settlers at Nutsymit in the beginning of time.

nenu-t'mimut: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.

nenulwutmun or nenulwutitmut: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dyed cedar-bark to Thitsplitz-a. [782]
2—The making of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire. [775]

Nenumu-nk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nenunaithdimut: Male supernatural being who travels with Nestpum, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.

Nenuaska: Mother Nature.

nenupp: Fisherman with inherited right to use of a salmon-weir or of a place for catching olachen. [424] nenupmormly, "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation. [226] [761]

Nenujemals, "Where Water Entered": House of one of the first groups of settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Nenuqualists: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola man.

Nenuqualsleiqu-a: Professional name of a female droner.

Nenuqualsmun: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.

Nenushmai: Kuziut name of a Bella Coola man.

Nenumonk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nenuzumulsk: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Nenutthemum, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers": Supernatural name of sockeye salmon. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nuxlu: The visit to every house in the village by a Mystery dancer on receipt of his call.

nuxiual, plural, nuxuiual: Singer.

nuxi'tuklu: Quiver for carrying arrows. [415]

Nuximuxu: Mountain near Axsu-ax-i.

nuxiutsli or nuxiutslup: Second day of a kuxiut dance.

Nuxiuliuxikum: Synonym for Tutwai-ai: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.

nuxkiuxtu: Repository.

nuxkli: Any unusual occurrence, regarded as an omen of death. [763] Nuxkulaumuxu, "Whence Things Came Down": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

nuxlulutu: Wash-basin, especially the supernatural one that remains in the land above.

Nuxliapuk: 1—Supernatural being presiding over the Land of Ashes.
2—Locality on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, not far from the head.

Nuxmuxu: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tuxisi in the beginning of time.

Nuxnuxiljuxtu: Axe carried in the beginning of time by the man who was later turned to stone as Mount Nuxfulst.

Nuxnuxsi: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tuxisi in the beginning of time.

Nu'xlulukumu: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

nuxlutu: Wasps' nest. [825]

Nuxtuxlutuxlu: One of the first women to settle at Snulili in the beginning of time.

nuxtuxutu: House in which a memorial potlatch is being held.

Nu'xtum: Mountain on south side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxtuxuxuxlum, "The Cherished One": Designation applied to one of the sons of Alpuxtun.

nuxtuxtu: House in which a potlatch is taking place.

nuxlumy: One who has gone to give potlatches in a new sphere; this rhetorical expression is commonly used when referring to a dead chief. [195] nuxlulutu: Wash-basin used by a shaman when curing.

Nuxlulutumiljut, "He Whose Wash-Basin Is in His Own Body": One of Tlisaplitu-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans. [756] nuxlumuxlutu: Enclosure behind fire in which kuxiut dancers are secluded.

nuxlumutu: Cleansing rites in connection with death. [764]

Nuxlutuxlumy: Tsiyakum name acquired by a Kimsquit man as a result of a supernatural experience.

Nuxmiuxui: 1—Eagle that perched on a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
2—Name, derived from that of the eagle, of one of the first men to settle at Ilpuxu in the beginning of time.

Nuxnu-a: 1—"Place of Stories": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxfulst in the beginning of time.

Nuxnu-aiu-a, "Women of Nuxnu-a": Probably wife of Alpuxtun.

Nu'xulilu: Mountain on north side of lower Bella Coola.

Nuxulilumulu: Subterranean chamber in which rivers were confined in the beginning of time. [772]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Nuxnannqlt: Area around a spring near Nuhmx.
[198] nuxnuxta: Chamber-vessel in the language of supernatural beings.
Nuxwlxta: Kuxiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nuxkuxnuxta, "Place of Meeting": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nuxpunta Smalaitkila, "The Peace-Giving Smalaitkila": Designation of the supreme god with reference to the function of peace.
Nuxpaps: Skeena River.
Nuxpáts, "Place of Many Spring Salmon": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
nuxqalt-a: 1—Chamber-vessel.
2—Nickname of a Kimsquit child.
Nuxqalt, "Place of Sqalt": 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Mountain, the loftiest in the Bella Coola valley, near the village.
Nuxqat: tsimy village.
nuxqdjat: Kuxiutem rite in which the performer pretends to have his stomach cut.
nuxqlhutxta: Person fastened to the ground with roots.
[824] nuxqo: Person suffering from umbilical hernia.
[431] nuxqodjuxnuxta: Appurtenances for washing given by the donor of a potlatch to his guests.
Nuxqulxwaxta: House of the supreme god during the winter dances of the supernatural beings.
[825] nuxqual: 1—One of the a'alt dances.
2—Yearling mountain goat.
3—Man dwelling in Xemoqwa's house.
nuxqualsi: The alleged attraction of the spirit of an uninitiated person to a performer in the house where a kuxiut dance is taking place.
Nuxqulxwaxta: Variant of Nuxqulxwaxta.
Nuxqulxwalmikt Nutkymm: Supernatural dancer who comes in Nutkymm's canoe.
[198] Nuxqustata, "Kingfisher," in the language of supernatural beings: Ancestral name of a herald who came down to the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Nuxqustuxta, "The Making Place" (with reference to qustuxata): One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nuxqustu-i: 1—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Green Bay.
2—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Stuxa.
Nuxq'ulsi: Supernatural merry-maker or clown.
[825] nuxqwskal: The annual scattering of birds by the supreme god in the land above.
Nuxqut: Locality near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.
[583] nuxqwutxnuxta, "Washing Appurtenances": Term applied to presents given to a husband by his wife's relatives when rebuying her.
[431] Nuxhlsta: Locality near Stuxa.
nuxkumtlu, "Ground Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate nuxsk initiates with regard to the ground over which they will dance, or chiefs to the ground over which they will tread.
[556] nuxkumtuxta, "Seat Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate the seat of a chief or of a nuxsk dancer.
[431] Nuxlitsq: Herald of Smaxqa in the beginning of time.
Nuxkumtumuxta, "Place Where People Were Made": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nuxlukuqs: Carpenter.
nuxqumuxta: Smear of red paint.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nuxwin-ems, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago. 192* nuxwinxts: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578] Nuxs: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nuxpelyip: Tal-is bird hunter.
Nuxpemds: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal-is in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqaltal in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]
Nuxpemistn-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Alqaltal in the beginning of time.
Nuxsop: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Barrenness": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nuxt'ipsts: Repository, archaic term.
nuxwuu-ts nulnum: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] nuxwukmpsts, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [585] nuxwu-psts: Wooden dish used for washing an infant.
nuxwulkmtem: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [415] nulaxlem: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [785] [756] Nulaxlaxw': Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nulem: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nulel, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nulexymm: Alteration of a dance from nuxsk to kustat. [825] nulkalcts: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.
nulkalcmmm, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [586] nulkalcmm: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Nulkus, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nulkulel: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nuxpelyip in the beginning of time. [845] nulkumt: Parents of twins. [825] nulsymm: Wolf.
Nulsthmis: Mythical house in the sky.
Nulsymmts: One of the names of the supreme god's house. nulxlem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Thinqlilxw-a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nulaxlem. [756] nulxymm: A creation of new kustat names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulxtsalm: Kustam rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nulxwum: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431]
2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nulqsm, "The Fate Maker": Name given to a woman who paints upon the bandages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nulsymall, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Nulsimts: Kustat name of a Tsimsit man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 nuhuinuts: Synonym for qume-ts, the large cone-shaped nuxsá whistle.
[534] Nulya-kut: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nulya-kut: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nulqpt-kwaw-a, "Nearest River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Nuletta-conney.
ne'qaqulais: Stone supernaturally born from another at sea level.
[103] Nuwaist-a: xtemq village.
[823] Nuwalait, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nuyalk: Bella Coola valley.
Nuyálkmq: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nuyem: Kwiat name of a Stuxx man.
Nuyem: Name of a female composer.
Nuyelmalais, "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
nuyas: Light.
Nuzim: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nuzimalais: Ts'aqa name of a Kimsquit man.
Nuqmalumaw-a, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Stuxx in the beginning of time.
[825] nuxsáwak: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nuxsimut, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kukwiat after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nuxnuxtis: Cross-piece which holds open mouth of ulachen net.
Nuxulit: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] nuxwulitlum: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for resultant children. This is [425] combined with an oration of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is automatic.
[828] Nuya: Mountain near Stuxx.
nuyálkhmut: Person who wanders away from home in dependency.
Nuyal-alais: One of the first women to settle at Tal-is in the beginning of time.
Nu'yas-ialm: Land of salmon.

O

o'alqum: Kimsquit term for a'alk, archais.
'O-ó': Kwatna lad mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] okal: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Ólqumtq: Valley pre-empted by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Ólqúmut: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
oly: 1—The kwiat prerogative of scratching.
2—Bad, adjective.
Olwa-i: Kwiat name of a Stuxx man.
Ollíyaiya, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Olnáhmut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] 'omstalil': Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

[illegible]: Goods obtained by a man's own exertions and forming the nucleus of his wealth for a potlatch. [556]
[illegible], plural, [illegible]: Kusiut patron.
[illegible]: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Son of Raven in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sîskiut in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—?cimotl woman who died about 1915.
[illegible]: village.
[illegible]: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola kusiotem dancer.
[illegible]: 1—Ancestral name of a Snuhili man.
3—Celebrated Kimsquit hunter.
[illegible]: Any non-sacred rite, especially an a'alk dance held subsequent to the kusiut season.
[illegible]: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit kusiotem dancer.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: The taking of food to another tribe for ceremonious bestowal.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who sleeps perpetually, literally, "The Sleepy One."
[illegible]: 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Celebrated Bella Coola warrior. [824]
[illegible]: Skunk cabbage.
[illegible]: Supernatural being, herald of Älquntäm.
[illegible]: The steeping of sisook novices in smoke, this being the final rite of initiation.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sîskiut in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Temporary fish-dam of interlocked branches. [226]
[illegible]: Small mountain on south side of the Bella Coola valley behind Qomqots.
[illegible]: Place near Stuix.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: The leading across of a bride to a groom during a wedding. [585] [illegible]: Hereditary tendency.
[illegible]: One made sick by salmon, especially a woman who suffers from this cause through disregard of adolescence taboos. [827]
[illegible]: Variety of dog salmon found at Bella Bella. [784]
[illegible]: Conferring of ancestral names at a potlatch. [825] [illegible]: The performance of a kusiut dance with supernatural dog salmon as patron.
[illegible], "Trueces Place": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Distribution of strips of mountain goat skin at marriage. [585] [illegible]: "Where are you going?"
[illegible], "Lake-Swallower": A mythical monster.
[illegible]: First night of a potlatch.
[illegible]: Third oldest brother or sister. [601]
[illegible]: Name of Mink as chief.
[illegible]: One of the names of the supreme god.
[illegible]: Celebrated Wuyal-a warrior.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

atsulta: Promontory on hunting ground extending into ocean.
Ovlxăn·i: Kimsquit fisherman.
Owiki: Calvert Island.
Oxłoxem: Synonym for Xemxemălotla, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[415] p̓ai·s: Small wooden dish.
P̓aluăil: Legless messenger of the dead.
P̓a·s: Place on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
[585] [431] p̓ăsutnm: Synonym for nup̓axsikel·im: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.
P̓ăscăcus: Ancestral name of a Nusp̓alst man.
[412] p̓ăsulta: Bone needle.
p̓ăxetla: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, rhetorically, to Cannibals.
Pe·sib: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Necleetsconnay; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Necleetsconnay and the Bella Coola.
Piqotla: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
pilstl: Herring scales.
pinăxta: Dance-apron.
Pinqhla: One of the first men to settle at Snuhili in the beginning of time.
[825] p̓kim·: Mosquito.
Ponpoilotsdimut: Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
po·qwais: Variety of smuq.
Potlus: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
Po·isib: Mesatche Nose, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] potsql: False hellebore.
[411] potstun: Bow, weapon.
[195] poyăx, "Fallen Heavily with a Crash," as when a dead tree thunders to earth: The term is used rhetorically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[372] p̓seixl: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[825] p̓skun: Meeting of chiefs.
[824] p̓wi: Halibut.
p̓x': Crabapple.
p̓xolt: Bunchberry.

Q

[525] Qa'aklis: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
qai: King stick in a gambling game.
qainaxqualist: Women's droning cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qai·nuxs: Uncommon term for the second day of a kusiut dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qaiyu: Name conferred on the grandson of Smaoan in the beginning of time.
Qak'lis: Man mentioned in a story.
Qakmo: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

qalitu: Omen of death, generic term.
qalka: One of the berries, probably raspberry. [787]
qamá, vocative, qamao: Mother, term used by child.
Qamálsem: Celebrated Carrier chief. [824]
Qamux: 1—Village on west bank of the Necleetsconnay, about three-quarters of a mile from the sea. [601]
2—Mountain behind the village.
Qámspoxtámem: am'hl-a name of a Kimsquit man.
qámxámila, vocative, qámxámilao: 1—Term used for spring salmon during the ritual following the first taking of the fish. [825]
2—Term used by smmq to human beings, who are like salmon to them.
3—Salmon, in the language of supernatural beings. [198] qanxta, "Rope Fastenings," i.e., something binding: The function of the "Bed Covering" and other presents given with a wife which bind her to her husband. [585]
qas-lnks: Unidentified species of duck. [431] Qeominouka: Kwakiutl term for "The Weeper," a female supernatural being.
Qepátus: Kusiut name of a Stmx man. [825]
Qi-pxook: ustmq chief living soon after the beginning of time.
*Qqát*li:* Herald who came with the first settlers to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Qéqos: Carrier pronunciation of Tcaqos, one of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
qáiaxm: Kusiut with ability to produce a puppet-patron, cf. nunuyaxmm.
qátitsta: Sweat-bath. [515] Qálmus: Slave mentioned in an ancient story.
qátsy': Star-fish. [825]
qax: Rabbit.
qá-y: Salmon-berry. [824] Qaxlowáls: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
qáxmáts: Unidentified plant. [825] qahm: Black cod.
qam, "A Wiping of the Feet upon the Ground of Chiefs": Term applied to a deadly insult offered to persons of importance. [578]
qamta: Wooden armour. [714]
Qankist: 1—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Island off Rivers Inlet.
3—Island.
Qay-axwsila: One of the names of Raven as chief.
Qril: 1—One of the first men to settle at Slskiut in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stmx in the beginning of time.
qr-ka: Unidentified migratory bird, black in colour. [825] Qeldjut: Scratch River, near Bella Bella. qi'aqa: One of the a'alt dances.
Qiqia, "Head": Stmx repository named from part of a supernatural creature. [578] qaskpályáxeslaixpnam: A verbal exposure of what should have remained concealed, such as comments upon the slave ancestry of a person whose blot in this respect has been covered over by lavish giving. [431] qlshlitsta: Presents distributed by a wife to strengthen her husband's seat, and thus prevent him from "wobbling." [556]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

qmāthmelp: The dancing, by several of his associates, to "help" a kusiut performer.
Qnumi: Undefined locality in the Bella Bella area.
Qo: Mountain above Stuax.
[777] qokān·i: Supernatural bird, bringer of good luck.
[825] Qolkaistl: Locality near the head of Dean Channel.
qolon: 1—Beaver.
2—Nustakamq name of a Kimsquit man.
Qolosti: Man mentioned in a song.
Qolliaohmq: Kusiut name of a Stuax man with prerogative of biting himself.
qoludik: The location in a house taken by a wife when ceremonially seated behind her husband.
Qolkwelistl: Influential Nusqalst chief who died about 1910.
Qomāmakwala: Ancestral name of a Stuax chief; the designation may be of Kwakiutl origin.
Qomcwa: 1—One of the nine supernatural beings.
2—White person.
3—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
qomniqwl: Clean, dry skull.
qomoqmai·s: Stump, in the language of Raven.
Qomoqwa: 1—Supernatural being, lord of the under-sea world.
2—Ancestral name of a Qomqo·ts man.
Qomo'sala: Man living in Bella Bella in early times.
Qomotla: Ancestral name of a Tsimsil woman.
[534] qomo·ts: Large, cone-shaped whistle used in nasak rites.
Qomqo·ts, "Salty?": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
qopai: To drift over, of smoke.
Qoqumpmān·a: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
[252] qopta: Framework of split sticks for toasting salmon.
[534] qopta: Drum.
Qoqmai: One of the first men to settle at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
Qoqyal: Bella Bella village.
qosa: Kwakiutl term for "eagle down" presents.
qothm: Third day of a kusiut dance.
Qotlnālas: Harbour on Labouchere Channel.
Qotlmalas: Settlement in the Carrier country.
[581] qoinakm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud.
[825] qotsik: Wolverine.
[567] qolstilsis dimmas, "A Washing to Free from Taint": Term applied to a ceremony to clear the path of the children when a husband has married a slave wife or vice versa.
Qowi: 1—One of the names of Raven as chief.
2—Thaiyakam name of a Kimsquit man.
3—Susaak name of a Kimsquit man.
Qoultanas: Supernatural woman from whom the Carpenters are said to have derived their skill in the beginning of time.
Qowolān·i: 1—Kusiut name of a Tsimsil man.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] qoxax: White swan.

APPENDIX D

 192*

qaxis, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]

ḳhamḳjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]

ḳpaulikmum: To revolve sunwise. [195]

Ḳpaupaulikmumlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Thiteplilan-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Ḳpḳalus: Place of petrified power near Kwatna. [778]

Ḳsxman: Village on the Skeena River.

ḳsoisut: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being. [825] ḳubut: Salmon liver.

ḳuks: Co-wife in a polygynous household. [575]

ḳulus, vocative, ḳulusis: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking.

ḳulwaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601]

ḳuma: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825]

Ḳuqumum ul di dā Spem, "The Unlocser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.

ḳupstānm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.
2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.

ḳuputālts: Stone axe. [412]

ḳus: Period of engagement.

Ḳuskila: Ḳumqo-ts man.

Ḳusi-lils: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ḳuistumlaix: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ḳualxsān-j: Shaman's name of a Stuax woman.

Ḳuirwos, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.

ḳualts: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]

ḳualm, vocative, ḳualim; plural, alḳualam: Eldest brother or sister. [601]

Ḳua'lems: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

ḳualik: Gull. [825]

ḳual'ma'ks, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.

Ḳualmalalim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Tāl-io in the beginning of time.

Ḳualna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]*

Ḳumasa'ks: Chief living on the upper Tsamat in the beginning of time.

ḳuanā-xsta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]

Ḳuapa: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.

Ḳuqmal: Place on Schooner Pass.

Ḳuqnasila: Sisaok name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳualuhum: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211] ḳualuxsam: Figure representing crest.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

[773] qwalhnuta: 1—Tally post, one of he supernatural elements possessed by all human beings.
[777] 2—Invisible supernaural element which constantly moves before the face.

qwalhnta; vocative, qwalhnatas, (rrely, qwalhnta): Crest.

[825] qwax: Raven.

qwax: Big old male mountain got.

Qwaxila: Qomqo-ts man living in he last century.

Qwaqlislis: Celebrated Kwakiutchief.

Qwaqwax-nemm: Name of a shaman who received his power from Raven.

[601] Qwarnats: One of the first men o settle at Stusx in the beginning of time.

qwarnam: Fourth oldest, or youngest, brother or sister.

qwa'sakts: Steller's jay.

Qwakil: Kimsquit woman.

[825] qwane: Woman's pubic hair.

qwata: Sea-lion cub.

[431] qwem: Those who are present an receive gifts when an announcement of a marriage is first made.

Qwets: Kusiut name of a Bella Cola man.

qwis-x'sem: A revelation, such a the sight of a supernatural being or object usually concealed.

[825] qwilais: Yearling seal.

qwimap: Word used in inviting o a marriage announcement.

Qwinso: Kimsquit man mentiond in an ancient story.

Qwiqwanoma: Kwakiutl supernaural being, said to be identical with Ałqunłam.

Qwislokik": Nuxqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Qwiyai: Bella Bella village west of Namu.

Qwul: Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.

Qulaiya: Professional female mariage droner who came down to Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Qulaxwa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Qulisil, "Place of Herbage": Vilage in the upper Bella Coola valley.

qunts: Inspiration, in the sense of the source of a kusiut dancer's power of thought.

[583] Qwusalk: Village west of Kwatna settled in the beginning of time.

qwuslandjut: Actual goods used for the repurchase of a wife.

[854] Qwuyusditna: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit chief.

qwusl: Cradle.

Qwu'nsk': Kusiut name of a Bell Coola woman.

Qwun-a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[581] q"xila: The noble and rightful sentiments engendered in both families by an elaborate marriage, either rel or fictitious. The word embodies the concepts of financial interdependence and of consequent mutual strength.

[195] qwuskim: The transference of activities to a new sphere; the term is used, rhetorically, when referring to the death of a skilled craftsman.

S

saiks: 1—Skeleton.
2—Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Saikuaio-sem: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

sai-mis ploks: The constant blinking of the eyes.

Saiutl: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saixnäs: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] salälsi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173]
sä·lhälsnum: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431] 2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sä·lpsta: Cannibalistic incubus. [25] sä·lpstnum: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sälskekdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] sälukwalas: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
säml: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sänoltnmulsts Älquntäm: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sanunusmmlaix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sänutlkm or Sänutlkmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusqalst as chief.
Sänuximäxots, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stnux man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sähx; vocative, sätki; vocative plural, säthxwa·ki: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sä·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sätlia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sätlyenuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sä·lma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] sälelts: Whetstone, archaic. [412] Sä·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river. [101]
Sä·tskamg: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
satskwal·a: Raft.
Sä·thamnän·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sawa: Pillow. [513] sawadjut, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
saqi, vocative, saqinas: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Saqinas: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
säxkam: Bracken. [824] säxwänas: Tide flats. [823]
sakdjulk: Heart.
Salwalosam: That part of Sonx[w] which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Samhetl: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Samsiutän·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
samsumlkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time. sa'mtsta, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sänkwolsäm: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa-qua-t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sijidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sakakwa-a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sakiltst: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
[822] sakima siakumtak: River net for salmon.
Satsalank: Echo.
Saxuxtalais: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Saxuxtualyalaislaix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Ttitcaplilta-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Sialxelax: Ancestral name created on earth by a Qomqo-ts man.
Siapam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[825] siddagsu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
[805] Siduhaos di Ano'likwalsaix, "The Coming of Ano'likwalsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siusala: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Sl'Islalil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Sl'Iwai-sil, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] sl'illiulak: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of marriage is broached.
[431] sl'Iylum, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Slum, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Slusami, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Silslumtak, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] silki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and sisaok rites.
Sililiktum: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siluly, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikwalwalsk: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikwaldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
Siknm: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
[226] Silias: Celebrated composer.
silmuq: Salmon-weir.
[827] sinaqyme'ax: Sisaok head-dress.
sinimits: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si-nipadjoxstumax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Sinpacus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinomwak, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkemil, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinunaklilum: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sinuqyul: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximātl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Sinax repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio"mste: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] siqalqālosuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] siqkim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Siqālyam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqaluxnām: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Sisut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626]

siqwsek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage. [425]

sisusts: Departure to a new locality.

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother. [601]

sisut: Paddle.

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Sitlhmsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitlling': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778] sisut, vocative, sisat: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."

2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large sisaek whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·l: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutaqkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutulos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·es, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldānux chief living in the last century.

sinliktam: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Sigman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsān·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsixqutnam: Synonym for Mulakila, the supernatural being connected with sisaek rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, ānānuskn, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwqāuksmk: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

siwusil: Unmarried mother. [848] siyentla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sientla may be connected with this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 sisa: Supernatural good luck.
[821] nkuoos: Fog.
[825] nsu': Pack-rat.
[828] nk: Mind or mentality.
nkqan: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
nkrotlcalrua: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.
Sillslan-i: One of the first women to settle at Sätlis in the beginning of time.
[825] nmd: Mountain.
nmlk or nmlkts: Salmon, generic form.
nmqmnikdu: (Probably) viscera of an animal, archaic.
Smsiutaäks: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[173] nmsma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.
Sumtus: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] Sunl'luxum: Bella Coola chief.
[828] Sunqlominit: Darkness, anthropomorphized. nnqu: Anger.
nnx: Sun.
Sunxäkila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Alqälxel in the beginning of time.
Sunxälotla: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—S'alk name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Susook name of a Kimsquit man.
Sunxan-a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] nnxkt: Mucus.
Sunxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
nqwlaätk: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] nsook: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
nsiutl: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
Sunxakila: Shaman's name of a Sunxl woman.
nskink': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tlitsplilan-a to the one favoured.
[601] nskum: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] nsmmlts: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] nsqo-si: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] nsyunk': Western dock (plant).
[824] nsxwatmaldp: Snowberry.
nxnqoinu: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[825] nxmmsts, "Food Supply": Synonym for sel'olum, ancestral hunting-ground.
shalk": Porcupine.
[824] skal-uts: Black huckleberry.
[821] skalutslaix: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

shalt': Devil's-club.
shalnamadits: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Shami, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Swalili chief about 1910. [765] shamtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shay: Anus.
shanm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824] Shamolsyman-a: One of the first women to settle at Swalili in the beginning of time.
Shatpts: Chief of the spring salmon.
shatsamhm: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585] shelists: Merganser. [825] shekwadjut, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584]
shi: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Shimutsitl: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
shinap, "Cure Ye!": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
shiwas: Cloud.
shma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [825] shma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon. [412] shmaix, shmanl, or shmdjut: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755] 2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
shmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Shmi, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
Shmnanl: House used by a group of first settlers near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Shmnulan-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nusfalst in the beginning of time.
shs'tcalx: Fungus. [824]
shsmaiasts: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of nasak head-dress.
shsy: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
shshl': Rose.
Shshlkwan-a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [825] shsl: Wasp.
Shshmmasts: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727] Shwalsl: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Slskisl in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
shsl, secatlw, shsai: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] shlay: Suitable place in the river for setting oolachen nets.
shlsa: Game played with throwing stones.
shusiut: Synonym for yearman, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukusiut in addition to a dance rite. [424] shuwakin: River sculpin. [825]

smā·tl: A place of petrified power, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered incapable of moving. [778] smātl ās skwatsta, "Petrified Name": Designation brought from above in the beginning of time.
smı·ks: 1—Mussel. [825]
2—Freshwater mussel.
smıxmıuxls: One of the thrushes.
smuqāmāts: An animal, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.
Snākelt: Āsān·ān·i man mentioned in an ancient story.
snānik': 1—Gum.
2—Name of son made by Raven in the beginning of time.
snāx: Slave.
Snaxhākila: One of the first men to settle at Sātlia in the beginning of time.
snāxom: Visionary receiving power direct from the supreme god.
sniāndcuqs: Worm or larva living under the ocean.
Sniaxlikwan·a: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Sninia: Supernatural being who holds earth in position.
Snitsmān·a: Supernatural woman who restores those who suffer misfortune in the performance of kusiut rites.
Snmkkwkts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Tāl·ia in the beginning of time.
smmq: 1—Mythical monster.
2—Man living at Kimsquit in early times.
smmqos di sonxwdai: Posts of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices. [821] smmqos wa smdās: Variety of smmq living above tree line.
Smtqwalmkaista: Stealer of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a potlatch by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being. [828]
Sno·abādāx: Island south-west of Bella Bella.
Sno'oinkıls Ālquntām: Deer son of the supreme god.
Sno'oniqwlx, "On the Point": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Snoqolqs: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
snu'aiyewa: Ceremonial collar of hemlock-bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Ťlitcāplilān·a. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.
snudaxt'oq: Unidentified berry. [824] snukālmāls: Top used by one of the sons of the supreme god.
Snukilmāls: Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to curl up and come to him.
snukimāx: Part of house behind fire.
snukllaik: Unidentified plant. [824] snulikuml: Piece of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a landslide.
Snulexwnimutik: Chief of supernatural singers who accompany Nodkyam. snulwustlt: Twin.
Snulqulqāls: 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in Qomoqwa's house.
Snunua·lma: Locality containing repository of name received from Death.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola-NE6

 192*

Sonq'mai: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
Soptos: Kusiut name of a Tsimoil man.
sofolräxum: Scalp.
soqwalält': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot. [824]
Spaixpaxqmmän·a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spänbällnaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
späniesta: Temporary camping-place.
Spätcaldt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spälkl: Star.
sphkm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581] spependouts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] sphkphkmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
sphkta: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Sphpiqinän·i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spi'xnunsta: Island west of Namu.
sphx: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smuq with female organs. [824]
spoxälicua: Unidentified berry. [821] S'ps', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Spskunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Spmqo·ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
sphla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputy: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spuxdjut, "Eagle Down-ness": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825] Spuxpuxhällaix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxqä'mpdimut: Sisook name of Xuxais origin.
Spuxspuxta: Sisook name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqäl·a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqoolt: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqäpts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqali: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqalst or sqalstutl: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nusqalst. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
squma: 1—Chest. [103]*
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Squml: Land of Ashes.
sqasusts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] sqals: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Sqatsdx: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [823] sqoum: Flood.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[824] sqedilp: Cedar roots.
sqetl: Sling.
[578] sqetlqtskm: To use a sling.
sqili: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
[821] sqinamas: Fleecy cloud.
sqiols: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
[412] sqma: Wooden comb.
S'qa't: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Sqami.
sqo: Umbilical hernia.
[601] sqolxmas: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
sqolkisdjat: Long phallus.
Sqomali: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sqosa: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
sqoselg: Food distributed for carrying away as sqosa.
[415] sqoli: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
sqpmrax: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
[431] sqtelp: Maple.
[824] squm: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
squpaitl: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
sqwal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
sqwalm: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] sqwalxwalm: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
[825] sqwal-ann: Large, unidentified bird.
Sqwlahua: Heat: A supernatural being.
[374] Sqwli: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[825] sqwo'nn: Loon.
stai-tl: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
[262] Stalqalaxm, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks": Talk name obtained in the beginning of time.
stalhmq; plural, stalhmq; vocative plural, stalhamq:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalasi in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Sinai in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smaxan for a grandson.
5—Sisaak name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] stan: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] standabidam: Bat.
standimut: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
[601] stanamamts: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] sleeli: Whetstone.
Steets: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Stap': Mountain near Tal-io.
stapam, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
stamamts: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] sleli: Cranberry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

sk̓ᵊqalikw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Skē·tixem: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
skuq": That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Sciltema: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [573]
2—Sleep, intangible kusiut prerogative.
sciusnām: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Sqemsthstkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] sq·pil: Shadow.
sqiqumas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
sqhas: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601] sliamālqs: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
stihus: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stip: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] shikx: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
shxem: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] sitakt: Caribou.
sihms: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832]
Sihmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sihmsta or sihmstānālas: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sihmstaliktsta: Body.
sihmstānālasām: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sikwuxwuhnimāx-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sikwuxwuhanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] siska: Mountain goat grease. [824] siskālya: Castor.
Siskial, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Slskla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time. [825] slsmas: Octopus.
Slsnakhlas: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] slsqmasma: Red rock paint.
slsta: Singer's baton.
slsulk: Text. [823]
slilc-qass: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
stuin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stuas: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
stutnm: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
shumsoiks: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sukwalt: Black raspberry. [824]
sulstu: Ocean.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[825] Sulukul: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
susle-ul'tsku-kus: One of the river sculpins.
susshumk: To gather cedar-bark.
Szimána: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sutal: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sultulu, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutskinp: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Szewulk: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swuklu: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swulg: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swulkumdimus: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swulsta: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swu'swu: Mud.
szuldz: Person or object which is taboo.
Szuiarmax: Evil supernatural being.
Spuidzus, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon.
szukmem pli máns: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
spúkstu: Sorcerer's box.
Sus-lhutmáx-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
spás: Female lover, especially a paramour.
spámu: Male lover.
Spuje-ul: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
spem: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sustsis: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sustsudjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sustsusai: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
spuk: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Spuhdjustáx-a: Part of a peculiar repository.
ssim: Cedar-bark cord.
Szimána: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Szimszimuk: Immoral supernatural woman.
su'ul': Afterbirth.
Sujustáx-a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sputs: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
[761] 2—Man who performs woman's work.
szumánuts Ahl': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sul'lul, South Wind: A supernatural being.
[805] Sulkl, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
sulu-ul': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
sulamuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sqnqnsisûs: Supernatural children guarded by the hermaphrodite in the land above.
Sqsul: Name taken by a Stnax man in the beginning of time.
sxtsqmul: Place in stream or river where a salmon has just jumped.
sxwanâ·a: Name created upon earth.
sxwapânil: Deer.
sxwat: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a mountain goat.
Sxwahqnem, "What Sweeps Away the Food": First moon after the winter solstice.
sxwemqs, "Tears": Preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.
sxw'lâmkis, "Short-lived": Rhetorical term used with reference to the death of a young chief.
sxyawi: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of womanhood.

[825] [415] [805] [431] [195]

T

lâbâlit: Cave.
lai: 1—Son, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for lads unrelated to the speaker.
2—Masculine suffix.
Taiakwala: 1—One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuhe·ll in the beginning of time.
taiamtmak: Desertion of husband by his wife.
lain: Dorsal fin of a fish.
taitaing: Heavy kind of copper.
taitamax: Tournament between rival villages.
Tal·la: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
Taliokûn·a: Nuxqual name embodied in a Snuhli origin myth.
Tamtamlo·pna, "The Breather": One of Thixplilan·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Tamukus: Stnax man mentioned in an ancient story.
tapanamnum: The issuing abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
laqtx: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees.
laqul: Blood-stained cedar-bark pad.
ta·s: 1—Bird arrow.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills its prey.
Tats; tacatlu, Tâtse: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer.
2—Father, term used by child.
lalhamlp: Water-lily.
Ta·pe·ak: Land inhabited by the Kwakiutl.
Tashwum: Leading chief of Alqalad and reputed founder of the village.
Taqqlum: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
lahu: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical.
tamtmâ·i: 1—White-fronted goose.
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird.
lamat: Husband (di tamatalai: My husband).
tamaw': River.
Tamumuthi: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

[601] [586] [825] [628] [101] [824] [601] [824] [825] [601]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Tuqualsisla: Bella Bella chief mentioned in a semi-historical account.

[825] Tusahl: Northern tribe, possibly Haida.

Ipli: Dog salmon.

Tsisilhmy, "Whose Feet Are Shortened": Village on shore of North Bentinck Arm west and north of the Necleetsconnay River.

tspnpin-i: Owl.

[601] tsai: 1—Daughter, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for girls unrelated to the speaker.
2—Feminine suffix.

Tsakwaskis: 1—One of the names of Mount Nusqalst as chief.
2—Man who descended to Mount Nusqalst in the beginning of time.

Tsakwak: Supernatural name of bald eagle.

tsakwalst: 1—Type of expansible house brought down from above by several of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
2—One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[825] tsakulina: White slug with black and red face.

[824] tsikchakum: Pleasure walk.

[411] tsiit': Cedar-bark.

tsi'n: Sealing spear.

[825] tsan: Snake.

Tsqalsk': Mountain near the Dean River.

Tsqos: One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean River in the beginning of time.

[824] tsisisalp: Red cedar tree.

Tsewat: Locality on mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island, probably Knight Inlet.

tsawanst-ala: Unidentified grape-like tuber.

Tsaltsup: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[342] tsiba: Underground house with entrance and flue combined.

Tsiba: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.

Tsiknust: One of the first men to settle at Alpalsal in the beginning of time.

[825] tsiman-i: Large clam-shell.

Tsimlaia: Sisaak name of a Sisal man.

Tsimtlaa: Lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tsipsa: Fisher.

[601] Tsisendylaig, "The Sleep Giver": Name of a female shaman.

tsi gwas di ents: Nephew's wife, term of indirect address.

tsi gwas di sisi: Uncle's wife, term of indirect address.

Tsiwosi: Man mentioned in an ancient story of the upper Bella Coola valley.

Tsiksa: Celebrated Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Tsi'laiya, "He of the Penis": Nickname given to a lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tsmalk: Valley.

Tsmasi, "Where the River Covers the Stones": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tsmpsik: Locality on Fitzhugh Sound.

[824] Tsnalsi: Mountain in the Carrier country.

tsnkwsnalp: Unidentified hollow-stemmed plant.

Tsnkwsnalya-ts, "Where There Is Much tsnkwsnalp": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

APPENDIX D

Tsukt: River on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
Tsepintl: Mountain near Dean Channel.
Tcwe·st: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
tslaos: To marry.
tslaosem: 1—Marriage in which the woman's relatives make the first proposal, especially one hurried owing to bereavement or other financial stringency in the man's family. [584]
2—Marriage without lengthy engagement.
tsilit: One having a voice like an eagle's.
hqwaistmam, "A Holding": The arrangement by which a man's sons-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative in repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters. [583]
hacus: Clover. [824]
hatala: Robin. [825]
hanuma: Game played with bows and arrows.
hamanta: Arrow. [411] ayta: Adze.
hawema: Stone maul without handle for driving fish-net stakes. [412] ila: Black bear.
Ilaiyakam: 1—One of the a'alk dances. [825]
2—Ceremonial held to shame a deserting husband or wife.
3—Name taken by an early Ilaiyakam dancer at Kimsquit. [586] Ilakan: Snail.
Tlakwaitl: Bella Bella woman married by Smaoan of Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [825] Tlakwakila: 1—One of the first women to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—Name acquired by one of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
3—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Tlakwakilayek'm: Woman dwelling on the coast south of Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
Ilakwa·i: Knife of mountain goat bone. [412]
Ilakwalk: Red rock cod. The difference between this and uxlag is problematical. [825] Tlaliatlis: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlaliak'lak': 1—Supernatural woman known to the people of Smith Inlet.
2—One of the first women to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlao'kwas: Servant to the supernatural being Nuxkiayat.
Tlaowika'lis: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlaqmai·ks: Supernatural woman resident in the land above. This word is said to be unrelated to Tlaqma·ks, although a common origin seems probable.
Tlaqma·ks: 1—Supernatural child resident in the land above.
2—Name acquired by a female child in the beginning of time. [824] Ilaqlas: Fir-bark.
Ilaqaqs: Correct term, in the language of Raven, for skull-cap worn by adolescent girls. See ilawam.
Ila'awala: The pouring, by a shaman, of grease from ten vessels on the fire as a means of curing the sick.
Tlawas: One of the first women to settle in the Dean valley in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Tlaxamymitl: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.
[825] tlcakndltotl: Sardine.
Tlikmaxstakka, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water ouzel.
tlikmuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.
[825] tlima: Mountain goat sinew.
Tlisla: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nusqalst, when in human form at the beginning of time.
Tlitcaplitan·a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.
[825] tlixin: Sea-lion.
Tlmstadimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.
[821] tlok': 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.
[825] tlokly: Virulent skin disease.
tlopan·i: Cormorant.
Tloqo·tl, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Tloqots, "Maligner" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.
tlqa: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.
[823] tlpanap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kusiut dances.
tlpapalam: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.
[415] tlulai·: Water-tight basket.
[824] tmiax: Water-washed stump with scoured, radiating roots.
Tniqo: Region on the upper Kitlobe River.
[482] tmixsl: Tump-line.
toka: Navel.
[825] Tokntl: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.
tqa: Mink.
tomidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.
[583] top·a: Synonym for ulxamamatmm, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.
[825] tqpimaz: 1—Fawn.
2—Nustakamg name of a Kimsquit woman.
[821] Tqiksta: Star in the Great Bear.
tqanq: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.
Tqumatos, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Talia.
[291] tsalkat: Hat with flat top and broad brim.
tsaia: Stonecrop.
Tsaialid: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsa·kmal: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.
Tsalits: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsal: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Tsaslamem: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
tsa·ti: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.
[825] tsiiax: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Ṭsi·dis: Kitlobe River.
Ṭsiłwakłs: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825] Isima: Animal's entrails.
Isi·t: Note of the kwakwa, foretelling death. [763] Isitsowi: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
Inkluxnam: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [586] Ṭnkwi: Restoration Bay.
Ṭnłkt, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [431]
2—Bald eagle.
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [825]
Inx: Novice, either kusiut or shaman.
Inxstmem or Inxstłaix: First night of a kusiut dance.
Iskankdmut: 1—Heavy coppers in Ḷemoqwa's house.
2—Name obtained from these by a Sałlia man in the beginning of time.
Iski·kdimut: Kusiotem rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]
Isla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
Islaqwaix: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the perpetrator. [784]
Istla: Presents distributed when a nusok initiate dances. They are provided by the donor "To Shield Our Eyes" from the tutwinam and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]
Isma: Belt. [465]
Isna: Nettle. [824]
Ṭsmłłaks: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
Ispadjut: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431]
Ispait: Small woodpecker, species unidentified. [824] Isqaika: Winter wren.
Isqwalt: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825]
Isubilta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] Isulkm: Prompter.
Ṭsumłłaks: One of the first women to settle at Snukoll in the beginning of time.
Ṭsuskilak: One of the first men to settle at Tsmoil in the beginning of time. [824]
Isxwasly: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825] Isxlusag: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic.
Isxpa·i: Trout, plural.
Isxs'ats'ikwik: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
Isxya, "What Is Good": Synonym for Ustamamtmm, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Ṭsmai·ox: Synonym for Nusiłłaiwalkm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
Isxwinam: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to nusok and a'alk initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Ṭsałłit: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Twalosdimut: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

twikmdimut, "A Coming up from Below into Plain Sight": Term used with reference to the obtaining of a call through the medium of Dark-Shade.

[424] tqamätl, "Whence We Came": A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[103] Tqultsik: Old village near the head of Dean Channel, at the site of the present cannery on the opposite side of the fiord from Manitou Cannery.

Tqnqn·iaqim: Tree, inhabited by owls, behind the supreme god's house.

kwunikwalott: Space in a house between central fire and row of chiefs seated behind it.

U

U·sqäxus, "What Is Wanted Is Lacking": Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alqälxl in the beginning of time.

W

Wäkus: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuhili in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwlst in the beginning of time.
4—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
5—Name of the Kimsquit River as chief.
6—Sisook name of a Kimsquit man.

[825] wai·s: 1—Cohoe salmon.
2—Name acquired by a man from cohoe salmon.

Waiuxnm: Man who descended to the Clearwater River in the beginning of time.

Wakitmai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stnux in the beginning of time.
2—Fraser River.

Wakwas: Village at Kwatna Inlet. This word is in the Bella Bella language.

Walqkitmai: One of the first men to settle at Stnux in the beginning of time.

[825] wal·äsqia: Lynx.

[586] walikw': Woman who has deserted her husband.

wakmptnm: To express a desire concerning the disposal of one's goods after death.

walicinu: "I go."

[824] walilikwätsälätsälats, "The Most Potent of the Pond": Water-lily.

Wanql: Name of Smaoan's grandchild in the beginning of time.

Wanuq: 1—Rivers Inlet.
2—Collective term for the villages on its shores.

Waoxqslaix: Nusäxkämy name of a Kimsquit man.

Waowal·is: Celebrated shaman, central figure in an ancient tale.

Waoyel·a: Tribal name of one of the Bella Bella-speaking groups.

Wa·put: Mountain near Stnux.

Wasila: Kustut name of a Bella Coola man.

waskustutaix: Death in the house where a kustut dance is taking place.

[533] was·nän·imutsts: Mourning songs regarded as expressions of real, not ceremonial, grief.

[765] wasonq^w wawstkloqstil: Synonym for sonq^w: The sky.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Wat·as: Xixais woman living in the beginning of time.
wals: Dog. [825]
wawnlt: Dog, archaic.
wa·xsia: Cape of yellow cedar-bark. [291]
waxwaxtsia: Brother or sister of grandparent.
Wiakai: One of the first women to settle at Snuiłli in the beginning of time. [601] Wiaqaii: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
Wikwan·ikwla: Synonym for Kwla: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusḑalst chief.
Wikwanutl: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
wina, vocative, winao: War-party.
Winās: Slave living at Nusḑalst several generations ago.
winās di ḑala, "War-Party of the Ocean," or winās di sā·łldjo·ts, "War-Party of the Tides": Supernatural being.
Winwina: Supernatural being who captured birds and fish for the benefit of mankind.
Winwintsmak: Supernatural being, perhaps identified with one of the warm winds.
winxta: Assistance rendered by the inhabitants of a town to a neighbouring settlement being attacked. [628]
Wipitpewakas: Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time. [726] Wisamkilak: Smaoan's daughter-in-law in the beginning of time.
Wi'talao: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Wiłslks: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Wixat: Man who travelled to the Skeena River in the beginning of time.
Wixon: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
wł·a: Kusiut dance in which the nine supernatural siblings are summoned to earth.
Wlẓ: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Wlx: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
wlẓ: Cripple.

X

Xaisqalał: Ancestral name of a Tāl·io man.
Xaiqts: Stream entering the Bella Coola from the north near Nuitux. [821] Xai·utl: Continuous North Wind, anthropomorphized.
xak'loi·: Cry raised as each of the first spring salmon is brought ashore. [226] Xalaiya: Step-daughter of Raven in the beginning of time.
xaqants: Great blue heron. [825]
Xat: Designation of a tribe, probably a branch of the Carriers, dwelling far to the south-east of the Bella Coola.
xāxaf': Canada goose.
xal·a: Root of qāxmāts, an unidentified plant.
Xekalus: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Xekwotsaw·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xelitmai: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.
xem: The successive rising of the sun from day to day. This word, which is common in derivatives, appears usually to be pronounced xem after s. [821] Xemena: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Ḷomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtmm: Kusiut name of a Sl̓skistl man.
Xemxemälotla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Sisook name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtmm: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqälast in the beginning of time.
[533] xe·tla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xadilkos: One of the first men to settle at Qotinelos in the beginning of time.
Xelässu: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] ʼsqus: Marten.
[412] xilis: Stone axe.
xlxel: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximoslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
[821] ginginäs·i, plural, ginginäsoksi: Little girl.
[517] Xinginos: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xitsis: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xiximä·a, "Right Foot": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xqis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xumäuäs: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xläxtum: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xläni: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
[586] Xlikwals: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
xlokw·imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
[825] Xmaxots: Locality below Nusḷalst.
gmgmatsl: Minnows.
[601] gnus: Woman, or wife in indirect address (kei gnuslaix: My wife).
[614] gnusläis: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[423] gnusdäm or nugnusdäm: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
Xnutli: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
xokit: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xolärwosem: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] xoldjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[831] Xomtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xomxomqa: Ancestral name of a Stuix man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xonqottm: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xoqutlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

xoso: Kwakiutl term for presents distributed as "Eagle down."
ẓoto: Scoop-net for catching salmon in rivers.
ẓoẓpankuẓta: Head-dress of eagles' tails worn by kusiut dancers.
xwanetl: Spring water.
Xwantlo: Settlement in the Carrier country.
xwe·k': Cow parsnip.
Xwelbon: Name obtained in the beginning of time from the Skeena people in whose language it is said to mean whale.
Xwinxwitsakimlaix: Shaman who obtained his power from Thunder.
Xwisamkila: Daughter of a Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
xwlxwulla: Wrestling.
Xwodjen·i, "The Crash": Name taken by one of the first settlers at Nulkax in the beginning of time but long since changed to a kusiut designation.
xwonxwonim: 1—Hummingbird.
2—One of the first men to settle at Äiqäläxl in the beginning of time.
xwonxwontäl·aix: Puppet-patron in the form of a hummingbird.
xwopa·xts di siut: The concluding ritual of the kusiut season.
ẓwosän·i: Gambling game played with crabapple sticks.
Xwolxekmis, "The One Whose Work Has Failed": Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
xwpintmak: The desertion of her husband by a wife.

[227] [292] [824] [825] [525] [586]

Y

Yäkoths: Ancestral name of a Stnux man.
Yä·k"axwaxwa: Kimsquit man mentioned in an allegedly historical account.
yao: "Hello!" "Hail!" or "Greetings!"
ye·: Exclamation having the significance of, "May you have a safe passage," said when a corpse is drawn through the roof.
Yeälos: One of the first men to settle at Nuisqwalt in the beginning of time.
'Yeäxdji: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
yeaxmax: 1—Prerogative, tangible or intangible, which some kukusint possess in addition to a dance.
2—Similar prerogative formerly displayed in nsaok rites.
yeix: 1—Call, that is, that which impels a kusiut to dance.
2—Kusiut whistle.
Ye'mdjaloos: Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
yeotla: Term, implying both wealth and good fortune, applied to a man able to give a memorial potlatch soon after the death of a relative.
yeyä'timut: Presents given by a prospective bridegroom to his future father-in-law.
ye: Good, adjective.
yeki: Mountain goat.
Yel·äxlaix: Goose Island.
yehle: "All Right," cry used in a kusiut dance.
Yelhal·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Yelyalhuslaix: One of the first men to settle at Äiqäläxl in the beginning of time.
yelkulmem: Bringing down of a call by means of the rite of sewadjut.
yellailaixl: Presents given by the bride's relatives to the groom's when they enter her house on the wedding day.

[576] [431] [584] [825] [431] [585]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[728] yuhmax: Peace ceremony.
Yekshn: Bella Coola carpenter living in the last century.
yen·imut: Ceremonial error.
[534] Yentsänl: House of the first settlers at Sätlia in the beginning of time.
yet·en: Rattle.
[425] yet·imm: The sending back of a name to the family of its original owners through a return marriage, or the proposal to do so, made by the relatives of the wife.
[583] [554] yetsalt; plural, yeetsält; vocative plural, yeetsalt: A woman who has attained an honourable position through being many times repurchased from her husband; virtually, a female chief.
Yelıqwikaiya: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
Yexasila: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
yexdimut: Fire-holder carried by Thunder.
[825] yexo'maitl: Old, female sea-lion.
Yeşlin: Ancestral name of a Sinxl man.
Yexwomaitl: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Yulätimut: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[372] yuhmta: Sticks for making fire.
yuhalş: Promontory.
yu'pätl: The actual appearance of a performer at an a'alk dance during a potlatch.
Yuşwa·t: ıstämş village.
Yuyuhmşl: Stone on the shore of Dean Channel believed to have been a man a long time ago.
Yuyulk"mai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Äläältxl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuhöll in the beginning of time.

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 789 856 The beneficial purposes include: making a child grow up to be a good dancer, industrious, a swift berry picker, or a strong man; curing lung trouble; making the river erode where wanted; and two ways of stopping rain. The injurious purposes include: two ways of making a person grow up to be a thief; the causing of craziness and quarrelsomeness and the three ways of causing death.

754 789 824 825 The materials and actions used include: ashes of aspen leaves; a dead toad, used with hair, with a red cedar bark face wiper, and with lost pieces of thimble berry shoots which were accidentally dropped while being eater; ashes of a yellow jacket's nest; a living raven with phlegm; beaver paws, in two instances; a skin bracelet from a beaver's foreleg; a dead wood-rat; a dead mouse; a grizzly bear's skin; a living red squirrel with a bit of apron fringe; setting fire to a wood-rat's house; and poking an ant hill.

789 856 824 535 To make a person a good dancer the ashes of the burned leaves of the aspen or trembling poplar were said to be useful, but Joshua said this may have been a joke. The Bellacoola Indians say the leaves dance. They never say that they tremble. When a baby was born, if the parents talked about it and the father desired that the baby grow up to be a good dancer, the mother or father got the leaves, burned them and put the ashes on the baby's hands, knees and elbows. When telling of this Joshua held his hands with the finger tips up and moved them as the Bellacoola do in dancing. Both rich and poor men danced.

789 825 856 A baby girl would grow up to be industrious, it was believed, if the warm limbs of a recently dead beaver were applied to her. The Bellacoola apparently observed the great industry of the beaver.

To make a baby girl grow up to be a fast berry-picking woman, the ring of skin from between two cuts around a beaver's foreleg was put on her wrist and was left on until it wore off.

To make a boy grow up to be a strong man, a skin of the grizzly bear, was thrown over him, generally by his father.

755 825 For phlegm on the lungs, more permanent than a simple cold, the patient expectorated in something and some one secretly mixed the fresh phlegm with salmon eggs and put the mixture

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out for the ravens to eat. This was done four times, and if a raven ate it, the patient recovered, according to Captain Schooner's belief. As the call of the raven sounds somewhat like a person affected with phlegm in the throat, this may be a case of sympathetic magic, at any rate it is one of witchcraft. 755 825 [754]

To make the river erode at a certain place in order to break a log jam, a beaver's foot was buried in each of several spots in the place. 789 825

A continuous rain would cease, and the sun would come out, it was said, if the people set fire to a wood-rat's house.

When it rained too much the Bellacoola Indians poked down an ant hill and said, "Give us warm sunshine." They believed this would bring results, but now that Joshua is a Christian he says he does not believe it and says it is useless play talk.

Bad boys or girls, but not adults, would take a dead mouse, warm it over a fire, and rub the warmed mouse on the hands of a baby. This made the baby steal when it grew up. The so-called stealing habits of the mouse were supposed to be transferred to the child. 754 856 825

The still warm body of a freshly killed wood-rat was used in the same way to make a baby, boy or girl, "crazy," and grow up to be a constant thief. The notorious habits of the wood-rat, as well as those of the mouse, were evidently well recognized by the Bellacoola.

To make people crazy, the red squirrel had to be properly used by a shaman and then it possessed strong power. One woman who had been made crazy in this way died in 1887. She did not like the shaman and he did not like her. He stole her apron. She was sorry. He took it into the forest and performed witchcraft because he wanted to spoil her life by making her crazy. He caught a red squirrel alive, possibly in a little basket. He had a box called a "bad box," in which he kept his things of evil power. He put some of the fringe of her apron around the red squirrel and let it run far away. The woman then became crazy and sometimes fell down, but part of the time she seemed well. My Indian informant, Joshua, had seen her. This example of sympathetic 754 756 825

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754
756 magic probably originated from observing the many very erratic 825 and apparently purposeless movements of the red squirrel.

754 When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow
825 up to be a quarrelsome person, a yellow jacket's nest was burned 856 and the ashes were rubbed on the face, hands, and arms of the child. When the child grew up, it was believed, he or she would fight with everyone. The yellow jacket's natural defense of it's nest is interpreted as quarrelsome, even by white people.

754 The toad was a powerful medicine for the bad box used in 825 witchcraft.

To make a man or woman die of craziness, one of the hairs of the person's head was put in the body cavity of a disemboweled toad.

[515] To make a person's face swell and superate until death came,
[825] the little pieces of softened red cedar bark used to clean the person's face were put in the body cavity of a disemboweled toad. The idea underlying this was probably the reproduction of the warts of the toad on the face of the person.

[824] To make a person die, a piece of the young shoot of a thimble berry, lost by that person while eating, was put in the mouth of a toad. Death was supposed to take place in half an hour.

754 One very old man, Judas by name, boasts of having killed seven people by means of his bad box used in witchcraft, especially of having caused the death of Mr. John Clayton, who was the first white man to remain long in this area, having kept the Hudson's Bay store at Bella Coola, and later a store of his own, but who died far away from Bella Coola in 1909.

Mrs. Samuel King who died in 1922 was said to have been poisoned by Willie Mack. Her father, Captain Schooner, was said to have stated that Willie would die in July on the anniversary of her death. Willie Mack died in the summer of 1923. Captain Schooner died a few days later. He was said to understand malevolent witchcraft thoroughly. It was said that people often cut off the collars of Willie Mack's shirts. Willie Mack's father was too great a chief so that people were ashamed, and consequently killed Willie by means of witchcraft with something in a bad box.

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

of these data refer to insects, and may be of interest to entomologists, although my spelling of Indian words is very problematical, because some of the sounds I can neither hear nor make, and I am unable to record adequately many of those that I can hear. The data here given are preliminary to a complete working over of my notes, but are believed to be nearly complete.

Insects apparently were not so well observed by the Bellacoola as were useful mammals and plants, the stinger of the bumble-bee, for instance, being supposed to be in its mouth. Few insects had names, that is, mainly those which were used or which troubled the Indians. Insects were not used for food, and honey was unknown until after the coming of the white man. The head of the gad-fly was used as a pattern in painting designs, the nest of the yellow-jacket in sympathetic magic or witchcraft, and "fly spit" was said to be good for sores. They had a story about the bumble-bee.

Among the Ulkatcho also observation of insects was weaker than that of mammals and plants, and they apparently had names for only a few insects, those which troubled them. Ant lyon pits and its method of taking prey were known. Insects were of no use to the Ulkatcho whatever. An instance was observed of an Indian amusing himself with a buzzing fly held in his mouth. They employed smudges, fish oil, gum of the cottonwood, and blossoms of cow parsnip with oil to protect themselves from mosquitoes, black flies and no-see-ums, and smoke to protect foods from flies.

The Ant lyon, among the Ulkatcho, is called Kinnelkats. It is said to be numerous at Ulkatcho, but that it was useless and that there was no story about it. My informant voluntarily showed me the pits made by the larvae of this insect and, catching ants for the purpose, demonstrated its well-known method of taking its prey.

The grasshopper (Orthoptera), that makes a noise by rubbing its wings together when it flies, was called Telcus, among the Ulkatcho.

"Fly spit," that is the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, also known as a frog hopper (Cercopidae), is said

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B 825 757 by some old Bellacoola men to be good for sores, but my informant did not believe it.

C 825 Among the Ulkatcho it is numerous, but was not used, not even as a medicine.

B 825 A bumble-bee, identified as Bombus appositus Cresson, by Dr. H. J. Franklin, among the Bellacoola, was called Tikquanats or the large Skotl, Skotl being the name of three kinds of insects, a bumble-bee, a yellow jacket, and a hornet. It was not taken nor used, and was said to do no harm to people. My informant did not know whether it had a house or not. Neither did he know that it made honey until told so by white men. They say the bee took one of the prickers of the swamp gooseberry for a stinger, but my informant said he did not believe this. He thought it had a sting in its mouth, not in its tail, until I showed him. The Bellacoola have a story that a being considered by a little girl to be a man, but by an elder sister to be a bumble-bee, was once seen coming from the noonday sun. The little girl became blind, B [773] but her eyes appeared to be all right. Many thought she was made blind by too much sunlight when she looked at the man who was a bumble-bee.

C 825 226 Among the Ulkatcho, this bumble-bee was called Whultocho, Whultto being the name of a yellow jacket, and cho meaning large. Whus or Whis means pricker. The bumble-bee was not used as fish bait.

B 825 An insect, probably the hornet, is called Slow lowstl, by the Bellacoola, who say it has a little white on the tail and makes a small nest in a tree in July.

The yellow jacket among the Bellacoola was called Quolalaits (Clolaclaylaits) (Clolaclaylaits skotl) while all three kinds of insects, the bumble-bee, the yellow jacket and the hornet, were called Skotl. The yellow jacket was known to make a nest. The nest was used in sympathetic magic or witchcraft as follows: When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow up to B be a quarrelsome person, the nest of the yellow-jacket was burned [754] and the ashes rubbed on the child. When the child grew up he or she would fight with everyone.

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B 825 [103]

A fly which does not bite, perhaps the house fly among the Bellacoola, was called Mammish, and was said to lay its eggs on fish and fish eggs. The place called Numammish was so named because the people thought they saw flies and they said mammish, but when the supposed flies fell they were seen to be toads.

C 825

Among the Ulkatcho, this fly was called Asthuz, and was said to lay its eggs on salmon. To keep off flies of all kinds and mosquitoes the blossoms of the cow parsnip, Heracleum lanatum Michx, called Goosss in Ulkatcho, were put in oil of the eulachon fish or any kind of oil and the mixture was put on the body. Every food that was smoked was smoked so that flies would keep away from it. Flies were not used as fish bait.

C [824] [251] [226]

B 825

The Gad-fly, Tabanus sp.? probably sonomensis O. G. of the family Tabanidae, which is commonly called horsefly, is numerous when the horses come down to Bella Coola from the interior. Among the Bellacoola it is called Silt lay estl. It is said to lay its eggs in the backs of the caribou in July, and these hatch into "worms." The face and eyes, being pretty, were used long ago as a pattern for a picture which was painted on fine boxes. There was no story of this fly.

B [532]

C 825

Among the Ulkatcho, this gad-fly is called Clez co, and a smaller one is called Clez cho yaz, yaz signifying small. Once I was told that no medicine was used to keep off the gad-fly, but on another occasion that cottonwood gum with oil was used. Apparently for his own amusement, my Ulkatcho Indian informant held one of these flies by the abdomen inside his mouth and made it buzz.

C [824] [751]

B C 825

Two kinds of little black biting fly, horse fly (Symphoromyia sp.?) apparently considered as one, are called Skikpie estl in Bellacoola. They are called Clez cho yaz in Ulkatcho yaz signifying small.

The Black fly, Simuliidae, among the Bellacoola is called Ticos cosee and Alk co ok hotl.

Among the Ulkatcho it is called Whuchu, while Tsih is the name of black flies, mosquitoes, and no-see-ums. All these were kept off with a smoke smudge made with a fire of any kind of wood on which were put such things as green, wet, or rotten wood,

4: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7

B
C 825

or grass. Black flies were sometimes kept off by putting oil of either salmon or trout on the face and hands. Cottonwood gum with oil was also used for this purpose.

The No-see-um among the Bellacoola is called Sleigh et el ke.

C
[753]

Among the Ulkatcho the no-see-um is called Whetlcatl and it is said that the bite of this little fly causes swelling and sicknesa. It was kept off in the same manner as the black fly.

Mosquitoes, Culicidae, among the Bellacoola, were called Pikim.

C [824]
[751]

Among the Ulkatcho they were kept off with smoke in the same manner as the black fly, and with blossoms of the cow parsnip in oil in the same manner as flies. It is not clear if the gum of the cottonwood was or was not used for this purpose, as it was to keep off no-see-ums.

C
[226]

Among the Ulkatcho "worms" were not used as fish bait.

VICTORIA MEMORIAL MUSEUM, OTTAWA, CANADA.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [846] near the room for a year (according to Nuak'zlu'sta, for ten days), else [825] the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [852] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member [556] of the Kû'siût, when it is given its Kû'siût name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qē'mtsioa name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [262] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His [431] friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day.
He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest.
A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man.
At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisau'kH secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy. 774 756 [828] [753] [828]

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Snq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Snq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself. 756 [776]

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ē'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Mā'tem) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.' [171]

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek-'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called snak. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms. 753 755 754 [825]

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strown in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die. 682 754 [825]

I add here a few current beliefs:— 827

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry. [777]

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die. 825

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky. 763 777

WARS.

When a war party was organised the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their 726 714

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

776 the House of Myths, but who has given up his place in favor of Senx and Alk'unta'm. These two might be called the rulers of mankind. In most traditions they are described as trying to destroy man, notwithstanding the fact that they are considered the creators of mankind. This peculiar charac-773 teristic of these deities is clearly brought out in the traditions recorded on 776 pp. 78 ff. In one legend which I collected in 1890, Alk'unta'm's mother, Nānusōmik·ēeqonē'm, is described as a Cannibal, who inserts her long snout in the ears of man, and sucks out his brain. Eventually she was transformed into the mosquito.[1] I did not hear her mentioned as one of the deities residing in the House of Myths. According to the same tradition, the salmon were obtained by a man who gambled with Alk'unta'm, the stake being the salmon. Alk'unta'm lost, and the man took the salmon down [825] from heaven. Another legend of the origin of the salmon is recorded on p. 38, where it is told how the birds obtained the salmon. According to still another tradition (p. 94), the Raven obtained the salmon by marrying a salmon girl.
In the tradition quoted above, Alk'unta'm also gives to man the power to cure [755] disease by means of the water of life, which the shaman sprinkles on the sick person.

776 A number of inferior deities live in the House of Myths. They might be called the assistants of the principal deities. In order to understand their [772] functions, it is necessary to state that the deities residing in the House of Myths have particular charge of the religious winter ceremonial of the [796] Bella Coola which is called kō'siut, and which corresponds to the ta'ētsa'eqa of the Kwakiutl. I have described this ceremonial, and its importance in [575] the social life of the Kwakiutl, in another paper.[2] The kō'siut is of equal importance to an understanding of the social life and mythology of the Bella Coola. It is sufficient to say at this place that the ceremonials performed during the kō'siut are mostly dramatic representations of myths [532] referring to the various deities, particularly to those of the House of Myths:
therefore masks representing these deities are used in the ceremonials.
Plates VII to XII[3] show a series of these masks. Figs. 1, 2, and 4 (Plate VII) are Senx, Alk'unta'm, and Snālk'ulx·a'ls. The functions of many of the 575 inferior deities seem to refer solely to the kō'siut. These deities and their 776 functions are as follows: Slx·sēk·lial'x· (Plate VII, Fig. 6) ordains the death of man and animals. According to one statement that I received, there are four deities of this name in the House of Myths. It is his particular duty to kill those who transgress the laws of the kō'siut. This deity is mentioned by Jacobsen, who calls him Sek-seik Kallai.[4] Nusnē'neq'als (Plate VII, Fig. 7), or the Snēnē'lq of the House of Myths, sits by himself in one

[113]

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1894, p. 843.
[2] Report of the U. S. National Museum, 1895, pp. 311–738.
[3] Drawings by Mr. Rudolph Weber.
[4] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 588.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 775 their ka'siut. It is just below the burial-place of each village. The dancing-house is very large and long. It has four fires. The women stay on the floor of the house, while the men sit on an elevated platform. The houses have doors, but the ghosts who first reach the lower world enter the house through the smoke-hole. A rope ladder placed in the smoke-hole facilitates their entrance. Two men stand at the foot of the ladder. They are called Anoet.'axsai.ai'x'. For a person who has once entered the dancing-house there is no return to our earth. The souls are at liberty to return to the lower heaven, which they reach by ascending the rope ladder. Those who return to the lower heaven are sent back to our earth by the deities, to be born as children in the same family to which they belonged. Those who enjoy life in the country of the ghosts, and who do not return to heaven, die a second death, and then sink to the second lower world, from which there is no return.

I received another description from an old man. He stated that he reached the country in his canoe. He saw two trails,—one the trail of the living, one that of the dead. He followed the trail of the dead, and reached a village in which there was a dancing-house. The language of the ghosts differed from that of the living (see p. 42).

773 ●825 [823] The Bella Coola believe that in the far west is situated the land of the salmon, which is called Mia'ltoa. The salmon leave this country early in the spring every year, and ascend the rivers. They are believed to return to their own country in the fall. The following tradition is of importance, explaining the manner in which the salmon were first brought from their country to the rivers of our world:—

Once upon a time a man named Winwt'na lived at Q'o'mqōtis. One day he was sitting in front of his house, looking at the river. He thought, "I wish fish would ascend this river." At that time not a single salmon visited Bella Coola River. Winwt'na entered his house and lay down, thinking about the salmon. One night while he was asleep he dreamt that with the help of all the animals he had made war upon the salmon, that he had vanquished them, and that since that time the salmon had ascended Bella Coola River. When he awoke he invited all the animals to his house, and told them about his dream. They all came, and when they had entered he shut the door. Then he spoke: "My brothers, I have invited you to my house that you may hear what I wish to do. You shall help me to obtain what I desire." The Mink asked him in what they were to assist him; and he replied, "I want to go to Mia'ltoa. There is not a single fish in our river, and I dreamt that with your help I vanquished the fish. Let us make war upon them. I shall certainly take some slaves, and we will place them in this river." Mink retorted, "I am glad that you are speaking, in regard to this matter. I asked my father the Sun (see Chap. V) to give us salmon, and I think he gave you the dream which you told us."

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773
825

All the birds agreed, and they resolved to start as soon as possible. Then Winwr'na asked Masmasala'nix to build a canoe. The latter complied with his request, and made a self-moving canoe, to which he gave the names "Winaiotstuls" and "Kunkunu'qstuls." In the third moon after the winter solstice the canoe was completed, and Winwr'na started, accompanied by the clouds, the birds, and by all the animals. The Hermaphrodite was sitting in the stern of the canoe. They went down the fiord; and when they passed the village of Bella Bella, they saw the Cormorant sitting on the beach, who asked to be taken along as a passenger. They travelled westward for a long time, and finally they reached the country of the Salmon. They saw that there were no trees. The country was a vast prairie. A large sun was shining in the sky. Soon they descried the village of the Salmon. They sent out the Raven as a spy. When he returned, he told them that in the evening the Salmon were in the habit of playing on the beach. Mink suggested that this would be the best time for carrying some of them away. Then the Crane (according to another version, the Hawk) said, "I shall carry away the Sockeye Salmon." The Wren said, "I shall carry away the Humpback Salmon." The Kingfisher (according to another version, the Crane) said, "I shall carry away the Dog Salmon." The Raven said, "I shall carry away the Silver Salmon." The Fish-Hawk said, "I shall carry away the Olachen and the Salmon Trout." The Cloud said, "I shall carry away the Spring Salmon." Finally the Cormorant said, "I am only a passenger, and I will take whatever I can get." The Mink remarked, "I will not say what I am going to carry away; I only want to tell you that you must each take one male and one female. Now start. You are invisible to the Salmon. When you approach them, they will not be able to see you, just as we cannot see the ghosts, even when they are walking by our side." They left Winwr'na to guard the canoe. Then all the birds and the Mink took each one male and one female child of the various kinds of fish. When they carried them off, the children fainted, as though their souls had been taken away. Their bodies remained at the place where they had been playing. The Salmon did not see their captors, and did not know why the children were fainting. The birds returned to the canoe, carrying the fish. Then Winwr'na said, "Let us go on and see what is beyond the country of the Salmon." Soon they arrived at a place called Qualc'nia (this name is not quite certain), in which vast numbers of berries were growing. Here the Hermaphrodite went ashore, and picked all kinds of berries, which she carried into the canoe. Then they returned home. For seven months they had said in the country of the Salmon. They reached the coast shortly after the winter solstice (?). When they passed Bella Bella, the Cormorant

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca.1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 825 said, "This is my house. I will go ashore here." He went, and took along the Salmon which he had captured. Ever since that time there are salmon at Bella Bella. The others travelled on, and came to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Then they threw all the various kinds of fish into the water. The Salmon jumped, and began to ascend the river. Then Wiewi'qa arose in his canoe and told each at what season he was to arrive. He scattered the berries over the mountains and through the valleys, and told them at what season to ripen. After he had done so, he invited his companions into his house, and gave them a feast.

773 825 192 In this tradition the birds and animals are not called by their ordinary names, but by mythical names. These names are as follows:—

ENGLISH.	ORDINARY NAME.	MYTHICAL NAME.
Spring salmon	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sockeye salmon	[illegible]	[illegible] ("very long")
Humpback salmon	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dog salmon	[illegible]	[illegible] ("[illegible] weather")
Silver salmon	[illegible]	[illegible] ("[illegible]")
Salmon (sp.?)	——	[illegible]
Cloud	[illegible]	[illegible] ("long hand")
Hawk (?)	[illegible]	[illegible] ("looking down into water")
Wren	[illegible]	[illegible] ("jumper")
Crane	[illegible]	[illegible]
Raven	[illegible]	[illegible] ("rising early")
Cormorant	[illegible]	[illegible]
Horned owl	[illegible]	[illegible]

773 According to the belief of the Bella Coola, Wiewi'qa's canoe arrives from the country of the Salmon every year. It stays in the country of the Bella Coola for nine months, and then returns to the country of the Salmon. At the moment when it leaves, another canoe, which is named "Ni'ah'xam" or "Nanah'ni'lanam," which brings the ka'ulat ceremonial, arrives from the country S'anik!pa'lus. The canoe reaches a distant point of land before the departure of the canoe of the Salmon. After four days it reaches a nearer point of land. Four days more, and it is seen at the point of land nearest to the mouth of Bella Coola River. Another four days, and it reaches the mouth of the river. The Indians believe that there is a house named Sa'ana.tanuk at this place. A post is standing in the water in front of the house. It is called Sautsualaxtanna'ah. In the house live three men who are named Naqaqanna'a, A'nanagilis, and Tla'ah'a'nanam. The canoe is tied up in front of this house. As soon as it arrives, the ka'ulat ceremonial begins. At the head-waters of Bella Coola River, forming the watershed between Bute Inlet and Bentinck Arm, is a mountain called

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They had hit a stone, and their points were broken. He staid there some time, and when it was nearly dark he returned home. Before he reached his house, he cut his own belly and took out some of the fat from his intestines. He cut it in five pieces, and replaced his intestines. He put the fat into his quiver. When he reached his house, he hung the quiver up outside, and entered. He imitated everything the Lynx had done. When it grew dark, he told his wife to fetch his quiver. She brought it, and he told her to open it and to feed his children. She took the fat out, placed it on a stick, and put it near the fire; and as soon as it grew warm, the Raven cried, "Tsu! Don't put it so near the fire. I feel sick when you do so." He jumped up took hold of the fat, and put it back in his belly. The Lynx said, "Formerly I fed your children, but you were the first not to treat me properly. You did not give any food to my children." Then the Lynx took some fat, and flung one piece to each of the Raven's children. He cut some meat and gave it to them also. Then the Raven said, "I will give you one of my children, that it may grow up in company with yours." 539 776

It is said that the former spirit Tsu'lus,'t was killed at one time by an Indian who took his place. This tale is recorded in Chap. IV. It belongs to the tribe of the village Nuxat'q'l. A similar tradition is told of Astas,[1] by which name the Carriers call the Raven, their principal culture hero. Many traditions referring to Astas are common to the Carriers, the Bella Coola, and the Awi'k'enax of Rivers Inlet. 713 776 [171]

The Bella Coola believe that a being called K'tsus is the father of all mountain-goats. When a hunter meets him, he thinks he sees a kid. Then he should close his eyes and open them again. If the animal is K'tsus, it will appear in its real shape as a buck of enormous size. The hunter should then ascend the mountain. If he should descend, he would fall and die. 776 825

The thunder-storm is produced by the Thunder-bird, who lives on the mountains, in the company of a number of spirits, who are considered his particular friends. The Thunder-bird himself is represented by a black mask with red nostrils. The nose is strongly curved, the forehead bulges forward, and the chin protrudes almost as far forward as the nose (Plate XI, Fig. 1). His herald is called Ax.ala'xnaxm (Plate XI, Fig. 2). His face is painted with orange and blue stripes, and he carries a speaker's staff, which is painted with spirals of the same color. He watches the door of the Thunder-bird's house. In his house live the Rabbit (Plate XI, Fig. 3); the Owl, who is considered the rival of the Thunder-bird (Plate XI, Fig. 4); the Mountain, c.i'qas (Plate XI, Fig. 5); the Raindrop (Plate XI, Fig. 6). 776 [821] [532] [575]

[1] Vorläufiges über Mythen transkribiert für Anthropologie. Fähnrich und Tsimshian, etc., p. [illegible]

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and 844 suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Sxaiarwax, though invisible, is present on every occasion; [776] the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, [177] but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary.
The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay, [845] hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to [826] cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of [465] $2.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother 853 would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and 854 carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing.
When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. [846]
Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of [165] love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive the perils of infancy.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches 842
immediately after the delivery of a child.

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as im- 826
portant as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is sxaiäx, a 844 word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing 783 which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it.

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions 845 to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon [825] into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple [787] birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one [756] foetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, [847]
no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth.

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium, [301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

●826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789
shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841
unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing [773] everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [825] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881
in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581 regard the married state as the normal condition of man. 589 Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons [732] forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581
and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects [462]
berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most [858] important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in a kind of a cave. He here unties the rope, dives into the water and out through a narrow passage to the open fiord where he is picked up by a waiting canoe. 778 755

If he is to recover, he feels as he dives the scraping of some rough-skinned animal against his side. No one knows what this is, perhaps a fish about seventy yards in length which was seen near the place about 1905. If a person is too ill to make the dive unaided, a stick is forced through the entrance from the fiord, with a rope attached. The patient, who has been lowered to the ledge from the upper air, is then tied firmly to the stick and hauled out. Before leaving, shreds of his clothing are always left at the mouth of the cave in payment to its supernatural occupant for his assistance. [787] *

The method of curing at the spot, Ăłłssmos, differs from those previously described since it is only the man whose repository (II, p. 8) is there who is able to exercise the power. Patients whose flesh has become rotten are carried to the place and he scrubs their bodies, in the water, with various prickly bushes. This man is not a shaman, his power rests solely on the fact that this curing place is his repository. [756]

At uxsekam the virulent skin disease łłokilx can be cured.[17] This is caused by a morsel of cohoe salmon or fern root passing from the mouth up into the head, instead of down into the stomach. The Bella Coola have only slight knowledge of anatomy, and by "head" probably mean the passage connecting mouth and nose. In this spot the food becomes a frog egg, hatches into a tadpole, and finally transforms into a frog. If a shaman is called on immediately, he can remove the frog by thrusting his finger up the nasal passage and banging down on the patient's head, but if he delays, the ears and nose become clogged, the hair falls, and the flesh on arms and body wastes away until the skin is shrivelled. Then the only hope is to visit uxsekam. [753] [826] [753] [756]

Friends of the sufferer carry him to the spot and place him in an ice cavern, roofed by the glacier itself, and then retire to [17] In its earlier stages it can be treated elsewhere.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 In the beginning of time it used to sing.

789 "I shall use a spoon and eat when the Bella Coola River has burst its bounds on account of the teeming salmon in it."

825 The people used to laugh as it repeated this song year after year, until the bird changed its note:

856 "I shall use a spoon and eat when all is cold and clear. Then there [539] will be Death instead of salmon in Bella Coola."

The next year the streams were so clear that no fish could be caught and the starving people asked the bird to return to its first song. When it did so, the water became murky so that it was possible to catch salmon once more.

The Bella Bella, not the Bella Coola, use the body of a blue jay to cause an infant to grow up with the ability to master difficult tunes in the same way that the bird has a variety of notes. The method of applying this medicine could not be learnt.

789 Most of the above medicines are well known and can be applied by any parent. If, however, a man has employed one 856 of them successfully on a number of occasions, he is often requested to use his ability for others. In such a case, the father of the benefited child is expected to reimburse his friend. [184] The application or non-application of such medicines is purely the concern of the child's family; they can use as many as they like, or none at all, according to their discretion.

The following medicines are used during the first year of life:

304 To Cause Beauty

789 Bandages of the softest undyed cedar-bark are prepared for infants of both sexes soon after birth. A woman who is a good 856 artist is requested to draw with charcoal two pictures on one 532 of the pieces of bark—of handsome men if the child is a boy, or of lovely women if a girl. An unmarked wrapping is fastened round the infant's head, then the painted one so arranged that one picture is over the forehead, the other over the occiput, and finally other plain bandages to cover the whole. These [826] are left in place for about one year. They flatten the forehead

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856

To Cause Left-handedness [825]

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Hakwik (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [858]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.
[532] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-
[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence [825] that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes. A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [622] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious, and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For 771 example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Ałquntām, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere washing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Agility

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that one man accidentally sucked when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its master could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dyed and undyed cedar-bark. 789 825 886

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

To Cause Obesity 789

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten. 826 622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an axuxon·i (varied thrush?) alive and pat it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying: 533 789

"May she be a singer like you." 825

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

To Cause Ability in Hunting 224

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained. 789 824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Heat the penis of a mountain goat or beaver at a fire. 789 821

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the ocean or a river, saying: 825

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

262

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481

"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322 carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825 boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[19]

[19]This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 *796 On the following evening, nebusam, when the uninitiated have been called in, they see Älquntäm standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, wearing a large mask and a blanket decorated with tufts of dyed cedar-bark. Ano°likwolsaix moves to and fro as she gives her customary explanations, which are echoed by the heralds. The masked representation of Sno'olxults Älquntäm rushes back and forth behind the fire, waving his arms to and fro as if he had an uncontrollable impulse to scratch someone. The four masked Holders move with him, as if to restrain him from dashing among the uninitiated.

"See!" says Ano°likwolsaix. "That is what they do in the land above."

After gazing upon these wonders for some time, the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut perform a dramatic act. As many as possible crowd around Sno'olxults Älquntäm, pressing with their hands against the back of his neck, the seat of [826] the spirit, calling koip, in an effort to soothe him. This is done four times, without avail; he remains as wild as ever. Then one of the marshals removes the mask, and the same methods are used to try to soothe the wearer. But still they are of no avail. The mask is replaced, and Sno'olxults Älquntäm rushes forth, with the four Holders in close attendance, and followed by a large number of kukusiut. Starting at the lowest house, he enters each in turn, dashing around the fire and startling the uninitiated in the same manner that X had done, but not actually scratching anyone. Non-members cower in terror at this invasion of their houses by a supernatural being. On the return to X's home, Sno'olxults Älquntäm is pacified by the frenzied beating of sticks. The masks [532] are burnt in due course, after which the kukusiut assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house to sing one of his songs and thus further the return of his call to the land above. Sometimes X himself wears the mask of Sno'olxults Älquntäm, more [834] often it is entrusted to another kusiut, but the wearer must

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

142 sally used but the older people state that beards were by no
144 means rare in former times. Careful inquiries were made [302] concerning the ancestry of a man, about seventy years of age in 1922, whose curly beard suggests that he must be a half-breed, as indeed he is assumed to be by the white settlers of the valley. His father was Potles, the most influential chief of recent years, his mother was herself the daughter of an important chief. None of the older men had ever heard the slightest rumour of faithlessness on her part. There were white [648] traders on the coast at the time of his birth, and intercourse with [567] slave women and others of low family was not uncommon, but [622] it would have been difficult for a chief's wife to misconduct herself, and still more difficult for her to conceal all knowledge of it in view of the open life which prevailed at that period. Moreover, it is said that Potles himself had a similar beard, as did also the parents of several men who in 1922 were fifty or sixty years of age.

142 Although the possibility of white mixture cannot be over-144 looked in the case of this one individual, one must not dis-826 regard the opinion of the people themselves on hairiness in [302] general. They are proud of it and regard beards and moustaches as marks of virility given to them by Älquntäm; baldness and lack of facial hair are considered a sign of weakness. They aver that their fathers and grandfathers were even more hirsute than they. Furthermore, they point out with pride [186] that this is a difference between themselves and the tribes of the interior, who are, as they say in scorn, "hairless like Chinamen." Finally, it is noteworthy that the hair on the head of many Bella Coola is wavy, or even curly (see Plate 20), instead of straight as among the majority of Indian tribes.[2]

Character

181 It is an almost impossible task to describe briefly the characteristics of a people. Those of the Bella Coola have

[2]This characteristic has led the writer to wonder if it could possibly have been caused by Ainu mixture.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

numao, vocative, numaotao: Member of same sex and same ancestral family as speaker. [601]

Numätlam: Supernatural being who comes with Noätqnum to bring a call to the latter's protégé. [614]

Numeisämut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

numitl: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract. [826]
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.

numinmnktis: Toilet-hole.

numlutsnam: Recompense, virtually pay, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a mourning ceremony. [465] numnälsmtmax: Exchange marriage. [583] numpälotlimm: Passenger.

Nu·mts: Place near Nulleax.

Nunäxmälaix: Kusiut name created by usynuyut at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

nunmaoi di mänao: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker. [601] nunmaoi tci stänao: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.

Nunuaax'as, "The Inhospitable One": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

Nunuäsmusek: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nunudjiqmm: Supernatural being who created repositories in the beginning of time.

Nunulnusek: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nunulqänem: House occupied by the first settlers at Nutsqwalt in the beginning of time.

nunu·l'stimut: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.

nunulxwotstmm or nunulxwotstimut: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dyed cedar-bark to Tlitcäplilän·a. [782]
2—The making of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire. [775]

Nunumu·sek: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nununaixikdimut: Male supernatural being who travels with Noätqnum, takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.

Nunuska: Mother Nature.

nunupy: Fisherman with inherited right to use of a salmon-weir or of a place for catching olachen. [424] nunuqomaxmly, "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing": Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation. [226] [761]

Nunuqsmäls, "Where Water Entered": House of one of the first groups of settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Nunuqualaiuts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Nunuqwelslaiqen·a: Professional name of a female droner.

Nunuqwiutmm: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.

Nunuskmai: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Nunusmaouk: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.

Nunuxwmolek: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Nunutäkentmm, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers": Supernatural name of sockeye salmon. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Nusnäxungkt: Area around a spring near Nulleax.
[198] nusnutsta: Chamber-vessel in the language of supernatural beings.
Nusnutsta: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nusp̓skunsta, "Place of Meeting": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nuspuxta Smaiaikila, "The Peace-Giving Smaiaikila": Designation of the supreme god with reference to the function of peace.
Nusqäps: Skeena River.
Nusqäpts, "Place of Many Spring Salmon": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
nusqälät·a: 1—Chamber-vessel.
2—Nickname of a Kimsquit child.
Nusq̓alst, "Place of Sq̓alst": 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Mountain, the loftiest in the Bella Coola valley, near the village.
Nusqatl: ustämg village.
nusq̓djot: Kusiotem rite in which the performer pretends to have his stomach cut.
nusqilbutsäx: Person fastened to the ground with roots.
[826] nusq̓o: Person suffering from umbilical hernia.
nus'qodjusmsta: Appurtenances for washing given by the donor of a pótlatch to his guests.
[431] Nusqulxwaista: House of the supreme god during the winter dances of the supernatural beings.
nusqwal: 1—One of the a'alk dances.
[825] 2—Yearling mountain goat.
3—Man dwelling in Qomoqwa's house.
nusqwalxi: The alleged attraction of the spirit of an uninitiated person to a performer in the house where a kusiut dance is taking place.
Nusqwalxwaista: Variant of Nusqulxwaista.
Nusqwalxwalmikt Noäkymm: Supernatural dancer who comes in Noäkymm's canoe.
[198] Nusqwalsix, "Kingfisher," in the language of supernatural beings: Ancestral name of a herald who came down to the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Nusq̓wathnaista, "The Making Place" (with reference to q̓wathnusta): One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nusqwaxlän·i: 1—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Green Bay.
2—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Stuax.
Nusq̓"los: Supernatural merry-maker or clown.
[825] nusqwekstl: The annual scattering of birds by the supreme god in the land above.
Nusq̓ul: Locality near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.
[583] nusqwotsonmsta, "Washing Appurtenances": Term applied to presents given to a husband by his wife's relatives when rebuying her.
[431] Nusulsta: Locality near Stuay.
nusluxemälta, "Ground Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate nsaok initiates with regard to the ground over which they will dance, or [556] chiefs to the ground over which they will tread.
[431] nusluxemästa, "Seat Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate the seat of a chief or of a nsaok dancer.
Nusliuq: Herald of Smaoan in the beginning of time.
Nusllumnämmsta, "Place Where People Were Made": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nusloksqs: Carpenter.
nusloqwasmär·a: Smear of red paint.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 what cause this divergence is due. Mythology and religion are so closely [171] connected that a few words on the former must be added here. The principal deity of the Bilqula is Snq, the sun-god (compare sûnq, sun).
773 The rays of the sun are his eyelashes. When prayed to he is called 776 Tâat'au. In praying the Bilqula look heavenward. I obtained the following formulas: Atlkun itlô'tlnq, Tâat'au, 'Look on us where we are [782] going, Tâat'au;' and Tâat'au, atlkmaltnomdô'tlq, 'Take care of us, Tâat'an.'
[539] Snq is pre-eminently the ruler of the world, and does not interfere with the actions and thoughts of men. These are given by Masmasalâ'niq. According to the tradition of the Bilqula, before the liberation of the sun, and before the world was made as it is nowadays, four deities lived on the earth: Masmasalâ'niq, Yula'timot, Matlapê'eqoek, and Itl'itlu'lak. The raven wished to obtain the sun, but he was unable to liberate it. Then he went to these deities and asked their help. They ascended to the sky, and tore the curtain, which up to that time had been expanded between heaven and earth, hiding the heavenly orbs. The sun appeared, but he shone dimly, as though darkened by clouds. The raven ascended to heaven through the rift made by Masmasalâ'niq, and found there a beautiful prairie country in which all the birds lived. Masmasalâ'niq and his brothers painted them beautifully and sent them down to earth, giving each his song and his arts. The raven was not content with the sun, and resolved to try and find a better one. He flew to the house of a great chief, who kept the nusqê'mta (nu-ta=place of, sqêm=the day is dawning). The nusqê'mta was a small round receptacle closed all around like an egg. The chief guarded it jealously, and kept it suspended from one of the rafters of his house. The raven knew that he could not obtain it by sheer force, and resorted to a ruse. He assumed the shape of the leaf of a spruce tree, and let himself drop into the pond from which the chief's daughter used to take water. The girl drank from the pond, swallowed the leaf, and thus became with child. She gave birth to a boy, who was the raven himself. The old chief loved the boy dearly, and allowed him to play with the nusqê'mta. This was what he desired. He ran out of the house, broke it, and flew away in the shape of a raven.

After the sun had thus been obtained Masmasalâ'niq said: 'Let us make man.' He made the image of a man out of wood, but he was unable to endow it with breath. Matlapê'eqoek and Itl'itlu'lak tried likewise to carve human figures and to give them life, but they failed. Finally, Yula'timot carved the figure of a man and endowed it with life. He made a man and a woman in each country, and they became the ancestors of all the numerous tribes. Then Masmasalâ'niq gave them their arts. He taught them to build canoes, to catch salmon, to build houses. He made rivers everywhere, that man should have water to drink, and that the fish might go up the rivers to be caught by man.

The Bilqula believe that Masmasalâ'niq and his brothers still continue to give new ideas to man. They say that any new design of painting or [176] carving, or any other new invention made by a member of their tribe, has been given to him by Masmasalâ'niq.

The religious side of the potlatch and of the secret societies has been referred to above.

774 The soul is believed to dwell in the nape. It is similar in shape to a [826] bird inclosed in an egg. If the shell of the egg breaks and the soul flies [761] away its owner must die. Shamans are able to see and to recover souls.
[756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

years ago a chief, when hunting, sat down to rest. While he 774
sat a slide plunged down the mountain-side and swept away the ground where he would have been if he had not stopped. The Bella Coola know that such a fortunate escape is no accident, as foolish white men believe, but is the result of an active spirit. Sometimes it can convey only symbolic hints of what is to happen. An old Kimsquit man told how his lower eyelids once became sore and his stomach began to heave. This [827] [787] occurs with sobbing, so he knew that ill-fortune was before him and was not surprised at the death of his son. A thoughtful person pays great attention to indications such as these, knowing that his spirit is always striving to pierce the future and obtain information for him, however indefinite. The importance of the supernatural to the Bella Coola can be judged from the fact that they attribute every action and thought to an element of this nature.

Mentality, nlk, though caused by the spirit, is somewhat 774 vaguely regarded as a separate entity. It comprises two parts, 828 one constantly urging to good deeds, particularly to activity in ritual matters, the other to evil. No one knows the appearance, if any, of human mentality. Some of the thoughtful older men hazard the opinion that every tree has mentality, whereas others say that it has a spirit. In former times especially, as one was falling, the cutters could occasionally see a dark object somewhat resembling an otter flash away and disappear. Not until then was the tree actually dead. Even the old people do not profess to know anything definite about mentality, which is important only as an attribute of the spirit. In indefinite 774 association with it, too, is breath, sininits, provided by Alqantăm [761] for everyone at birth. The word signifies more than [827] the material act of breathing, it denotes the actual physical state of being alive, a condition "lent" by Alqantăm to mortals. The connection of these two elements with the spirit is unequivocal, though their exact relationship is indefinite.

If the spirit moves far from its proper position at the back [753] of the neck, the owner falls ill; if it leaves him, his condition [755]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is the life that suffers,
761 whenever the skin is broken. Any wound may prove dan-[752] gerous, but particularly one that cuts either of the invisible [827] lines along which vitality flows from the little finger to the little toe. An injury to one of these channels spreads rapidly and is in many cases fatal.

761 It is generally considered that a person dies if his life leaves his body. In contradiction to this, though the discrepancy 774 seems of slight importance to the Bella Coola, is the belief that it ascends at the winter solstice to the gathering of the supernatural beings in Nuxmálc to greet Alquntám. It is common knowledge that some part of the human body does this, but there is diversity of opinion regarding which it may be. Some say it is the spirit, but the consensus of opinion is that it is the life. If it is successful and receives presents in the land above, its owner will prosper on earth; if it is unfortunate, he will be the same; if it falls in the crush as the guests hurry forth to escape the heat of Alquntám's entry, he will die. By dreams 761 a man learns the fortune of his supernatural representative, 787 and from them he can judge what is in store for him during the coming year and receive intimations concerning birth and death, secret society matters and, in fact, every phase of human activity, since all are decided at the meeting of Alquntám and his associates. Dreams are considered to be especially important at this season of the year (I, p. 608) and information obtained from them may, perhaps, be the origin of the present firm conviction that some portion of the body actually ascends.
[182] Bella Coola beliefs have so broken down in recent years that lack of unanimity concerning the specific part is not surprising, nor does it alter the importance of this conviction. No attempt is made to explain how an individual can remain alive during the annual absence of his life.

761 Although the life is so ethereal, it really consists of four intangible elements which unite to form the immaterial whole.
One of these parts, including the voice, is located in the throat, another in the trunk, a third in the legs, and a fourth in the feet; the body is thus divided into four quarters. The con-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

nection of these with one another and with the spirit, the mental director of the life, is a matter of advanced Bella Coola theology on which opinions differ. Only men of philosophical temperament even hazard an opinion on such matters, which are beyond the realm of daily routine. 961

When a man dies, his life leaves his body and the useless flesh begins to decay. At the same time the life is freed to travel as an intangible wraith, having the form and appearance of its dead owner. It visits all the places where he had been in the habit of going during life, irrespective of their distance from the scene of death. Sometimes it journeys to the locality where, in a dream, the mother of the deceased received her first intimation of pregnancy (I, p. 615). It wants to see former friends and sometimes makes its presence known to them by whistling. A person who hears this sound is saddened by the realization that one of his associates has passed away in some distant place. At other times, a man merely senses its presence and feels frightened without hearing or seeing anything to account for it. Very rarely, a dead person's life speaks to a dearly loved friend to inform him of his loss. During the existence of the body, spirit and life are closely associated, and the former sometimes accompanies the latter on its round of farewell visits before ascending to Nuxmit-a. 961 795 [774]

After four days the life descends to the land below where it lives forever as a ghost. Some believe that it is the shadow which assumes this form, but the seeming contradiction is relatively unimportant since the life is essentially shadow-like. Ghosts have already been described in connection with supernatural bodies, and further information will be found in vol. I, chap. VIII.

At death, when the life as a whole becomes a ghost, its constituent parts likewise undergo transformation. The one situated in the feet remains with the corpse and disintegrates; that located in the legs enters a wolf and nothing more is known of its fate; no one knows what happens to the one situated in the body. The part in the throat, including the voice, enters [527] [525] [534]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

961 an owl, possibly one of those which normally roost on the tree
775 behind Nuxmit-a. This element of a dead person occasionally 825 communicates with a living relative, as evidenced by the fol-[534] lowing story.
[827]

A number of years ago a party of men and women camped for the night beside one of the rivers flowing into South Bentinck Arm. After supper, as they were resting by their fire, an owl kept hooting from a neighbouring tree. One of the men turned to a friend who had been making obscene remarks and, half in jest, warned him to be careful in case one of his relatives was listening. The foolish fellow looked at the owl and asked:

"Are you a relative of mine?"

There was no answer, but when he had repeated the question four times, the owl spoke:

"I am so-and-so," he said, naming the deceased grandfather of his questioner.

Consequent upon the belief that the voice of a dead person enters an owl, the bird is treated with considerable respect. It is improper to make fun of one, or to ask who it was when alive. Should a person do so, the owl answers with the interrogator's own name and he soon dies.

961 On the whole, the life does not affect the daily existence of the Bella Coola as profoundly as does the spirit. When they stop to ponder on the reason for some event, they readily admit the importance of the life with its constituent elements, but they are not always considering its activities and seeking to strengthen it. It is essentially a religious attribute, of greater moment to a man of imaginative and suggestible temperament than to one who carries on the daily routine without asking why and wherefore.

THE TALLY POST

773 In the beginning of time, when Siyustim sent the first 777 people down to earth, he erected in Nuxmit-a posts emblazoned with the bird or animal crest taken by each to serve as a memorial, or reminder, to him of the number of individuals existing

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The recent decay of Bella Coola culture may have destroyed
[182] traces of more definite obligations with respect to the ancestral family, but all the evidence indicates that it has always been a fluid unit. Its very lack of functions makes it difficult to [128] discuss, and the above account was pieced together from scraps of information collected from many different people at various times; yet, intangible though it be, it is a very real unit to the Bella Coola and pervades their life. Each individual knows those to whom he is related. In many cases the exact kinship is lost, but it is remembered that a man from such-and-such a village married a woman from another village, and it is proved from the use by their descendants of names from the same origin myth. The concept of physical strength imparted by a closely akin ancestry is always present and gives a person the real "power" in the village founded by those first ancestors
614 of his. For the ancestral family is usually thought of in terms
621 of villages. A man belongs to the village where his first ancestor came to earth, though he is equally a member of other towns into which his ancestors may have married. A [554] man without ancestry, without sel'alam, is a miserable creature; he has no home in this world, or, theoretically, in the world to come. The ancestral family is a unit essentially held together by the ties of sentiment and pride of ancestry.

614 In addition to the above social elements of the ancestral 827 family, it is felt that all its members have certain tendencies. If one of the first ancestors had a certain physical peculiarity, or met with a particular kind of fortune, either good or bad, his descendants are more likely to experience the same than any other people. These tendencies may skip many generations, and may be inherited either through the mother or the father. In fact, Bella Coola belief on this point closely agrees with modern knowledge of heredity; the term for such an inheritable tendency is xalaxlim or xalaxwaqlat. Such characteristics are:

(1) Proficiency in using tools;
(2) Ability as a hunter;

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(3) The bearing of exceptionally well-behaved children; 614
(4) The bearing of exceptionally naughty children; 827
(5) Disposition to steal;
(6) Uncontrollable sexual desires;
(7) Sudden death, that is, members of certain ancestral families are less apt than others to die of disease or old age;
(8) Death by drowning. One informant, in whose family this is a tendency, has twice been thrown into the water and barely escaped. He fully expects to meet his fate in this manner;
(9) Insanity (not a common malady); [158]
(10) Dribbling at the mouth with increasing age;
(11) Liability to contract the skin disease known as łoqałx. 614
With regard to the transmission of this disease the surprising 827 information was received that if a relative of a sufferer should 753 drink from the same bucket or use the same spoon as the 177 patient, he is likely to contract the disease, whereas another person can use them with impunity. This statement may be based on a knowledge of germs learnt from the white man, and warped by a belief in inheritable tendencies, although it is amazing that the theory of germs could have reached the elderly Bella Coola. Possibly this statement is a relic of an old belief in the transmissability of disease through contact, but it is more reasonable to ascribe it to white influence.

In a later chapter an account is given of certain occupa- 614 tional abilities, including that of carpentry, which must be 827 confirmed and validated by presents. The above are quite different; they are either present or absent without any action on the part of the individual.

The Village Community

The village community referred to in the preceding section 614 consists, fundamentally, of the descendants, traced in the 621 patrilineal line, of the reputed first settlers to occupy a site. Since a Bella Coola always describes himself as a native of such-and-such a town, it follows that the village community

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

775 to a ghost, he informs a shaman of the fact and the latter [756] notifies the relatives of the deceased. If no shaman is convenient, the shade does not hesitate to help himself. Invisible, 264 and armed with a barbed hook, he approaches a person who is
775 eating and pulls away a crumb which falls to the earth. Should the eater stoop to pick this up, the ghost, robbed of his booty, 753 beats the offender with his hook, causing toothache or sometimes a sharp pain in the head or stomach. Other ailments are caused by the ghosts hitting with invisible stones those who have offended them. Consequently, no one picks up a crumb which has fallen, since it is impossible to know whether it has
[827] been an accident or a seizure. Another indication of a ghost's [782] hunger is loss of a tooth. The loser should throw it on a fire with an invitation to the dead to accept his offering.

775 The barrier between ghosts and human beings is considered to be little more than a wall of smoke, just too dense for ordinary eyes to penetrate. In early times intercommunication between the denizens of the two worlds was so easy that a doting mother was once allowed to tend her dead child on earth. Unfortunately, the woman's mother one day insisted on holding her grandchild, unaware that he was a ghost. Shocked at his appearance, the old woman dropped the child, much to the anger of the dead people.[44] Ever since that time it has been impossible for human beings to see and talk with [538] their deceased kinsmen. Like so many Bella Coola stories, it is doubtful whether this one is regarded as more than an item of ancient history; it is considered to be a fact, but it is not one that enters into the daily thoughts of the people.

[825] Ghosts frequently come to their old homes at night where dogs can see them. If one of these animals begins to bark and gazes fixedly at a spot where nothing is to be seen, it is because a wraith is standing there and the dog's owner hopes that it will remain invisible. It is true that some individuals have [754] received shamanistic power from a ghost, but more often a visitation is disastrous and to be avoided. A dead person often

[44] This story is recorded in detail later (I, p. 577).

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [761]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 755 [761]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

827 If the father dies, she beats her son or daughter, adding:
865 "Cry now. See what you did."
[761] Henceforth the child restrains himself, but usually drastic steps are taken to reform an infant before his weeping causes any such misfortune. The parents of a petulant child request aid from a man of even temperament to cure him. The person undertaking the task prepares a large basket, watches until he notices the youngster crying and displaying bad temper, then seizes the offender, thrusts him into the basket and hangs it in the doorway, free to move with every stir of the child shut within.

"Cry as much as you like now," he says. "If you become hoarse like a heron you will turn into one of those birds."

This threat is based on an ancient story describing how a child to whom this was done changed into a heron and flapped away in bird form. Sometimes the man says that the same will happen to the child, or simply that he will be able to fly like a heron. All day he is left suspended, no one heeding his sobbing and howling, but in the evening he is taken down, petted, and told not to be naughty again. This medicine always cures a petulant child who can thenceforth be held to ridicule by being reminded that he is "A Basket Boy." The same remedy is often employed for a quarrelsome brother and sister who are shut up together.

865 To Cure Disobedience and Rudeness

861 If a child is persistently rude and disobedient to his parents, they request the assistance of a man of even temperament to cure him. The person selected must be one who is never angry, and who attends to his own business in a placid, quiet manner. The mother and father discuss who is best fitted by character to help their erring child and then ask his aid, promising a suitable recompense. If the man accepts the task, he waits till he notices the child crying peevishly. Running to him, he holds the youngster firmly and, in spite of this strug-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

is spoken of in the Chinook jargon as a mesatche box, that is, a "dirty," "unclean," or "repulsive" box, and this term is one which is mentioned whenever an unexpected death takes place, or whenever a coastal Indian is accused of loitering around a deserted camp or of stealing into another's house. The belief is not limited to the Bella Coola, but has formed the basis for criminal cases all over the coast of British Columbia. It is difficult to find words sufficiently strong to express the disgust, loathing, and fear with which the Bella Coola regard a person suspected of sorcery. 754 171 [554]

Ability in this respect carries with it certain prohibitions. A sorcerer would lose his power if he should wash or blow his nose except when about to commit murder. The one old Bella Coola now thought to be a sorcerer never washes; he knows that if he did so, he would be immediately accused of plotting someone's death. This man is greatly feared, as he is said to have a collection of spittle from every member of the tribe; efforts have been made to break into his house and steal this, but it has never been found. He takes credit for the death of at least one white man in the valley. A peculiar impediment suffered by all sorcerers is a prohibition against turning around, although no one knows why doing so should deprive them of their strength. The explanation may be that their power would recoil upon themselves, a concept well illustrated by the following incident: 754 [515] [827]

When the first Christian Bella Coola left the old village to settle near the mission station, they were regarded with dislike and suspicion by their fellow-tribesmen. One day, one of them happened to follow a path through the woods which led her to a rude shelter in which was a bundle. Hastily summoning her fellows, they opened it and found an article of clothing belonging to each Christian. The man who told this incident described his fear at finding a dirty shirt of his own among the others. They felt that the garments had been collected by a young man who claimed to be a shaman, but whom they suspected to be merely the accomplice of a sorcerer, and this was soon proved to be the case. He was insufficiently trained; instead of touching the patient's body with his stick, he used to suck wherever the pain was located and then

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 manner, and was definitely stated to be the case by one well-796 informed old man. It is clear, however, that every spring salmon was landed with the cry of xak'loi·, taken to the Spring [424] Salmon House, and cut up by the men until the time when women were allowed near the river. Another old man stated [574] that the feast took place at night and that only the heads and [251] refuse of the first catch were eaten, the remainder being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed [562] on the river bank, and were rigorously excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when the sun's shadow reached a diagonal scar on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there was no calling of xak'loi·, and women, except those who were taboo, could cut salmon freely on the bank. It was even stated that refuse of salmon could be thrown into the river after that time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition, or why it should end when the sun reaches a certain point, but it was faithfully observed in former times.

In Kimsquit similar rites were carried out, the chief variation being that the bodies of four swans were placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish laid with these at intervals in the line. Moreover, the youth used to bite the back of each salmon as he presented it with the cedar-bark streamer. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon as for olachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

372 The following miscellaneous beliefs and customs cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a spark from a fire jumps out and lights on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you [the person on whom the brand has fallen] food."

● 827 If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481
"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322
carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825
boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[10]

[10]This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

is now sufficiently tamed so that he can lie down and rest, and thenceforth the nocturnal raids on the village are discontinued. 575* 796*

X remains concealed on the platform, supposedly without eating, for four days. On the fourth day occurs the ceremony of washing. Early in the morning a herald goes to every house in the village asking for urine and grease extracted from the heads of sockeye salmon. The kukusiut gather in X's house, to which full chamber-vessels and pots of grease have been taken. No uninitiated are allowed to be present, but from adjacent houses they hear sounds of furious struggling, combined with growling. Presently they see a number of kukusiut carrying X, smeared with liquid, to the river. Some informants state that he is actually covered with urine and fish-oil, others that these are merely emptied within the house and water poured over X, that their collection is merely to deceive the uninitiated. At any rate he is taken to the river, where, in spite of his shrieks, kicks, and struggles, he is four times doused by his guardians. Often he seizes stones from the bed of the stream and hurls them at his captors, sometimes bruising them severely. This washing assists in the restoration of X to sanity. He is taken four times to every house in the village, no longer growling and struggling, and a herald announces that he will dance that evening. 787

Soon after dusk the kukusiut are summoned and they practise the four songs composed for X. Then the uninitiated are called in. As his songs are sung, X dances in the usual kusiut style, but more violently than most, and growling at intervals. The women drone and his four guardians stand close by, spitting into his ears to soothe him.[49] This is done by calling hoip loudly close to his head, so that a spray of fine saliva is ejected over him. After dancing, X sits down once more and a marshal calls out that food is to be given to him; he is supposed to have eaten nothing but morsels of human flesh since his departure for the upper world. The women are sent [827] [562]

[49]Spitting also occurs frequently in connection with curing by means of the frenzied beating of sticks.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) Recorded as song VII D 55, National Museum of Canada; quartet, Reuben Schooner, leader, Jim Pollard, prompter and announcer, assisted by Tāl'io Charlie and Steamboat Annie. 533*

(b) So many of Yexthn's ancestors had been drowned that he considered such a fate to be an inheritable tendency and mourned accordingly. This song was composed for a memorial potlatch held after the drowning of three of his sons. [761] [827] [195]

(c) Xem means, literally, the successive rising of the sun from day to day; it has therefore, the significance of: The span of life is shortening.

(d) This wail replaces the usual wordless chorus.

(e) Raven. This is one of his rarely used chief's names.

(f) The reference is to an incident related about Raven in the beginning of time. He made, and gave life to a son who was his chief joy and delight. Alquntām wondered what the creature might be and sent down one of his eagle-like supernatural birds to seize him. Raven, ignorant of the reason for his son's loss and with no idea that he was being carefully guarded, was absolutely disconsolate. The myth is recorded in vol. I, p. 83. [773]

Shaman Songs

In contrast to the carefully prepared and logically worded mourning songs, many of those used by shamans are extremely incoherent. This is natural in view of the belief, already described, that the words and tune are given to a sick person at the time that he is cured. Those who recover from an illness are convinced that they must have received a supernatural visitation, and at once begin to ponder on the song brought to them at that time. A person of imaginative temperament easily persuades himself that the words which begin to form in his mind were actually brought by an agent, and, having thus deluded himself, it is easy for him to convince others. The coherence of the text thus depends upon the ability of the patient, a factor which explains the extreme lack of skill in many compositions. The examples here given are, perhaps, unusually complete. 533* 756 [753]

Song Used by Ninitsamlaix(a), a Kimsquit Man(b)

A Wāsumlwalhnumqudu	skāninitsumlaiyas
In the beginning(c)	the life-giving power(d) was made;
yao diaī'aiyaltul	aldānālsiwanudai
that is what we have given	within them(e).

[WORDLESS CHORUS] (f)

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192 *

ɪxxiut, "The Time for Kusiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] ɪyɪyɪyut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ałqałxł in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Sxaok name of a Kimsquit man. ɪłłułułk: One of the supernatural carpenters.
ɪłsamanumnm: The repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] ɪnsiak': Synonym for ɪpuxdjut, a present for which a return is not expected. [431] ɪwaxsmxdjut: Hereditary tendency.
ɪqem: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [827] ɪrias: Red rock cod. The difference between this and łłakułk is problematical.
ɪnłłołum: One of the first men to settle at Łomqo·ts in the beginning of time. [825] ɪnłłłiwatem'xiamet·al·ał': The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage. [583] ɪqɪw·abałwadjutłaix: Sterile supernatural visitation. [787] ɪrkłuta: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up.
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position. [556] ɪsłłłmłq, "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
ɪsłwman·i: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
ɪsłokwaladjut: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
ɪsłqotłamsqmaxdjinas: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tał·io in the beginning of time.
ɪsnukwwałsaix, "The Track of the Sun": A'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
ɪsnułkamłaix: Supernatural name of ɪsiutł.
ɪsqunłam, "Commander":1—Said to be the word from which Ałqunłam is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
ɪsłłikmasaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
ɪswappatsdjut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
ɪswał·a: Kusiut name of a Stuix man.
ɪswimała: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
ɪs·wunaisa: 1—One of the first men to settle at Łomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
ɪsyałyatsaix, "The Circuit": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
ɪsyałam, "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Snułdł and Tał·io.

K

kai: 1—Snow. [821]
2—Unidentified berry. [824]
Kaiusdiłs: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kałamił: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
łakas: Crow. [825]
Kałoła: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

mixmixłulp: Leaf of salalberry.
mla·wadjut: 1—Omen of misfortune, such as preceded the outbreak of smallpox, hence, [824]
2—Smallpox. [787]
mlka: Type of sea-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.
mna, vocative, mnae: Child. [601] Mnakais: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.
mnk': Excreta.
mnmnts, vocative, mnmntsān·i: Ancestral family, practically equivalent to children when used by an old person. [614]
mnskānmnts: The commemoration of a chief's potlatches and other major ceremonies by means of plain posts erected near his grave. [211]
Mnstlsto·mm, Tide-Measurer: A supernatural being. [764] Mstnlos: Man mentioned in a song.
Mstlakila: Supernatural being who gives potency to nsask rites.
mthtsts: Grandiloquent expression used by the kukusiut with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives. [776]* mtlkłsām: 1—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living. [775]
2—To visit, term used with reference to the coming of a masked representation of a dead person; the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.
mok': Pounded, dyed cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.
mokwuks: Head-ring of cedar-bark worn by kusiut initiates in the upper Bella Coola valley.
moqla: Lice. [825]
moqnila: Adolescent youth.
mormorkł': Blue grouse.
mormoułłokānda: Dentalium-shell ear-rings worn by adolescent girls during seclusion. [301] mu: Hand net for catching olachen. [227] mudemhokstn: Yellow cedar stave decorated with swan feathers such as is carried by a Mystery dancer.
mustmax: Wrestling.
Mutan·a: Rivers Inlet man living in the last century.

N

Nain'alwas: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Nā'mu: Bella Bella village; the Anglicized form is Namu.
nāw·: Grizzly bear. [825]
Nānātlis: Name received from Grizzly Bear by a Kimsquit man in the beginning of time.
Nānātl: Kusiut name of a Nuxłalt man.
Nānātlsnā: One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
Nānālkmitł: One of the names of Mount Nuxłalt as chief.
nāw·łmut: Non-ceremonial weeping, usually individual, and always with real feeling. [827]
Nass: Indeterminate locality in the distant east. [152]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nunutcuxynam: Woman endowed supernaturally by Ano'likwolsaix and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer.

[787] nunulliuts: Omen of death.

Nunutsmmkmem, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Ṫlitcāplilān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nunuxemlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Ḷomoqwa's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nunuxim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nunuxmeux: Kusiut name assumed by a Stuix woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nunuyaxwum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qālāxum is obscure.

Nu'oxwatlamnaix, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nupāxsikel·um: Synonym for pāsutnm: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nupliāhlsikān, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuḷao·axta: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqāxlām·i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqāxmāts, "Place of Much Ḷāxmāts": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqenqāmis: Nusqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqiliaxailen·a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuḷmusme·tl wa songʷ'als: One year.

[828] nuqom: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuḷpik, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuḷsdjut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuḷsilʷ': 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqlitsta: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqwaxots: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiotem and other important kusiut rites.

[777] nuqʷantnikim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwikumlaix: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwdlax: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqwliāls: The upper heaven.

nuṗuna: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwxulioḷlsān·i: A Stuix repository.

Nusālquntāmsta, "Where Ālquntām Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nusāmqwa·nay: Cottonwood buds.

Nusāpānis'sta, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smaaan in the beginning of time.

nusāllemy: Canoe-maker.

Nusālnm: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nusḷalst.

[535] [869] nusāxhāmy: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

omätuslaix: Goods obtained by a man's own exertions and forming the nucleus of his wealth for a potlatch. [556] omätuts, plural, älomätuts: Kusiut patron.
O'miätl: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
O'mielkx: One of the first women to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
O'miätlmai: Son of Raven in the beginning of time.
Omqomkikka: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle at Siskiut in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Tsmotl woman who died about 1915.
'Omllom: ustämq village.
Omqut: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola kusiotem dancer.
Onikutl: 1—Ancestral name of a Snulsli man.
2—Celebrated Kimsquit hunter.
'onikwatl: Any non-sacred rite, especially an a'alk dance held subsequent to the kusiut season.
Onixwalicus: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit kusiotem dancer.
Omqwak: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
onostlpstmm: The taking of food to another tribe for ceremonious bestowal.
Onstcitoma: Supernatural being who sleeps perpetually, literally, "The Sleepy One."
Oqmikmq: 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.
o'qok: Skunk cabbage. [824] Oqolikts: Supernatural being, herald of Älquntäm.
oqpt: The steeping of nsaok novices in smoke, this being the final rite of initiation.
Oqsmai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Siskiut in the beginning of time.
oqla: Temporary fish-dam of interlocked branches. [226] Oqwan·i: Small mountain on south side of the Bella Coola valley behind Qomqo·ts.
O·qwi·: Place near Stuix.
'Oqwalikämut: One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
oqxälemsk': The leading across of a bride to a groom during a wedding. [585] osälodäm: Hereditary tendency.
osdukän: One made sick by salmon, especially a woman who suffers from this cause through disregard of adolescence taboos. [827] osipax: Variety of dog salmon found at Bella Bella. [784] o·nmtdiqiawaix: Conferring of ancestral names at a potlatch.
osnämunaix: The performance of a kusiut dance with supernatural dog salmon as patron. [825] Ossqpamq, "Treless Place": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
osqälim: Distribution of strips of mountain goat skin at marriage. [585] ostämnäks: "Where are you going?"
Ostcilikq', "Lake-Swallower": A mythical monster.
oshwallaix: First night of a potlatch.
olitk: Third eldest brother or sister. [601]
Oltuqu: Name of Mink as chief.
O·lhk di Stalamq: One of the names of the supreme god.
Olowa: Celebrated Wayal·a warrior.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa-qua-t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmaw-a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekilayt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
sekima siskumtsk: River net for salmon.
[822] Sutsalani: Echo.
Sexuxpalsis: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexuxpualyalsalsis, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Tlisxpalsis-a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Sialselsis: Ancestral name created on earth by a Xemqe-ts man.
[825] Siaqam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sidaqsin: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
Sidakaas di Ana'likwalsis, "The Coming of Ana'likwalsis": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
siwala: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'ishlil, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iwai-sil, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'illiukk: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of marriage is broached.
[431] si'ipikm, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Sâmt, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Sâqtmi, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sikalamtsk, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] sili, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and nuaut rites.
Siklikimm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siqulq, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikualwalsk: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikuldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
Sikum: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
[226] Silas: Celebrated composer.
silmaq: Salmon-weir.
[827] sinaqpmu'ax: Suaxt head-drum.
sinisis: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[961] si-nipadjaxtmax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Sinpiaus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinowuk, "Time for the Use of Oïachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkamid, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinwuhlilim: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 ciya: Supernatural good luck.
[82] nhaxs: Fog.
[825] nhe': Pack-rat.
nik: Mind or mentality.
[828] nipon: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
nlcuthalmu: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.
Sillaxa-i: One of the first women to settle at Sillis in the beginning of time.
nmd: Mountain.
[825] nmlt or nmlhs: Salmon, generic form.
nmlmmikhs: (Probably) viscera of an animal, archaic.
Snulutaxhs: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[173] nmma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.
Snmtu: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] Snel'lhamu: Bella Coola chief.
Snulumint: Darkness, anthropomorphized.
[828] nnlu: Anger.
nnu: Sun.
Snuxhila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Sillaxa in the beginning of time.
Snuxhlu: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—Alt name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Snuxl name of a Kimsquit man.
Snuxwa: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] nsuk: Moxus.
Snxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
nqulsitk: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] nsuk: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
nxint: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
Snuxuhila: Shaman's name of a Snxl woman.
nxlel': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Ninqhlaxa to the one favoured.
[601] nxlum: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] nxmuhs: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] nxpwi: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] nxpwl': Western dock (plant).
[824] nlcwmumlhs: Snowberry.
nxuqulsiu: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[825] nxumuta, "Food Supply": Synonym for cal'ulum, ancestral hunting-ground.
chalt': Porcupine.
[824] chal'ulu: Black huckleberry.
[821] chlutchlu: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swooms it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman hears its buzzing wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy.

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Sēq. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Sēq will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to suck out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself.

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: 'When an Awiky'ō'noq wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountain where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Ma'tsis) who will initiate him. No Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way.'

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ek'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 612), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called sink. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is inclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms.

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the lids closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die.

I add here a few current beliefs:—

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about one.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry.

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die.

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky.

WARS.

When a war party was organized the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and strewed their

Ichiki Dwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

838 woman who dressed as a man and used to hunt successfully,
[171] though she was married. Such practices are said to have been not uncommon among the Haida. The women were considered bold and independent, but the Bella Coola of today know little *[776] about them, and are not even certain that Spatz is responsible for a female assuming the actions of a male. It will be readily understood that he is not regarded with much awe, nor does he influence their daily lives.

*776 Another supernatural being, uninfluential though resident [822] upon earth, is Echo, Sawalitel, "The Voice Repeater." The Bella Coola regard him as a male being, in human form, and recognize his presence whenever sounds reverberate. He figures in mythology, occasionally appears as a masked figure at [575] Sacred or Secret dances, but has neither helped nor harmed human beings for so many generations that he is accordingly neglected.

*776 A supernatural being from whom many Bella Coola have 787 had unpleasant visitations is Sîkmcile, the cause of nightmares.
● 828 He is a man-like creature with black face and an enormous head which he constantly scratches. His home is in Nacmâ·a, but he frequently descends to this world and frightens sleepers. If a person scratches his head while asleep it is because he has just seen Sîkmcile doing so, and if he walks in his sleep it is to escape this supernatural visitor. A sleep-walker is usually aroused by having a bucket of water thrown over him. A [951] person frequently troubled by Sîkmcile can avoid him by painting a black circle around each eye before going to sleep.

*776 With the exception of Sîpuntên, the supernatural beings thus far described play little part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They believe in their existence, but do not expect to meet them, and do not believe that they exercise much influence on the course of their daily life. Supernatural beings of this ineffective type are exceptional. A man goes into remote parts of the 781 mountains, or even into little frequented areas around his
*776 village, with mingled fear lest he encounter an actively malicious being, and hope that he may meet a benevolent one. More-

1:14c:Dewolfe X-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

one at Restoration Bay. He had reached the point where he needed help to turn the craft over, and one day, returning to his work, he heard the sound of many voices. He tarried for a few minutes, and when he reached his canoe it had been turned over as he desired.

On that occasion the beings who assisted the canoe-maker appear to have had definite form, and certainly to have displayed physical strength, but this extreme anthropomorphizing is unusual with respect to the assistance given to carpenters. The construction of a canoe is an arduous and difficult work; the person who has made one is regarded by his fellows with respect mixed with envy, and it is tacitly assumed that he must have received more than human assistance. Considering the number of anthropomorphic beings known to the Bella Coola, it is not surprising that some individuals should assume that the successful carpenter must have had assistance from one of them, but to other Bella Coola the explanation would be in the intangible help vouchsafed to him by some kind of supernatural power.

Similar intangible power is believed to be evident in a person's thoughts. If a man receives either good or evil from a comrade it is his duty and privilege to repay. He intends to do so, but only a good man can carry out the resolution. What a white man would attribute to forgetfulness, procrastination, or laziness, the Bella Coola say is caused by the intervention of Ts̓aqwalukulaxa, who steals away his thoughts. It is doubtful whether this being is considered to have any definite form; rather he is a barrier, normally situated within the doorway of every house. The ideas of a strong man are able to surmount the obstacle, but Ts̓aqwalukulaxa obstructs those of a weakling, and directs him to matters of no importance.

Another intangible supernatural being is that which devours firewood. The Bella Coola say that no matter how well a fire may be provided with fuel when a person sits down to a meal, it is certain to be either out, or nearly so, when he has finished eating. The natural explanation does not satisfy

Lillie Dewolfe E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[774] of thought, of success and failure and of life itself, to powers of another sphere. Their ideas are not clearly crystallized on this subject, but in the following section an attempt has been made to give a fair picture, gleaned from many informants, of the supernatural parts of the human body.

THE SPIRIT

The most important part of the human body is the sumdmdz, spirit. This is small, but of great power, since it belongs to the world of the supernatural; in fact, the spirit of a man is not mortal, but sint. Everyone, man or woman, rich or poor, chief or slave, has one; without it, life would be impossible. When a child is born, his parents supply him with food and care, and Sqawsiw provides the even more necessary invisible elements, including the spirit. It resides in the back of the neck and resembles a thin bone shaped like a maple-leaf. Salmon have similar ones, but with them the bone is visible, [756] whereas only shamans can see it in human beings. The spirit in a new-born infant is weak and powerless, but it increases in strength with the body. If a man prospers in his ventures and has success in life, it is due, not to his own efforts, but to the activity of his spirit. When a man acquires wealth with little [556] labour, he knows that his spirit has been constantly trembling at the back of his neck; when he is unfortunate, that it has becomes inert or sluggish. It is the cause of dreams, which are [777] desired as means of foretelling the future. Some Bella Coola believe that in sleep it leaves the body and travels, unrestrained by any barrier, to the scene of the dreams; others, that it causes the images to appear. During waking hours the spirit [725] formulates every thought, no matter how trifling. When a man remembers that he left his fire with insufficient fuel and hurries home to rectify the omission, it is this element which has brought the need to his mind; when he thinks of a distant place, his spirit is responsible for the thought and some men even believe that it has travelled there. Sometimes an active one can give warning, as in the following instance. A few years ago a chief, when hunting, sat down to rest. While he 774

1:bk:Dorsey E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

sat a slide plunged down the mountain-side and swept away the ground where he would have been if he had not stopped. The Bella Coola know that such a fortunate escape is no accident, as foolish white men believe, but is the result of an active spirit. Sometimes it can convey only symbolic hints of what is to happen. An old Kimsquit man told how his lower eyelids once became sore and his stomach began to heave. This [827] [787] occurs with sobbing, so he knew that ill-fortune was before him and was not surprised at the death of his son. A thoughtful person pays great attention to indications such as these, knowing that his spirit is always striving to pierce the future and obtain information for him, however indefinite. The importance of the supernatural to the Bella Coola can be judged from the fact that they attribute every action and thought to an element of this nature.

Mentality, nil, though caused by the spirit, is somewhat 774
vaguely regarded as a separate entity. It comprises two parts, 828
one constantly urging to good deeds, particularly to activity in ritual matters, the other to evil. No one knows the appearance, if any, of human mentality. Some of the thoughtful older men hazard the opinion that every tree has mentality, whereas others say that it has a spirit. In former times especially, as one was falling, the cutters could occasionally see a dark object somewhat resembling an otter flash away and disappear. Not until then was the tree actually dead. Even the old people do not profess to know anything definite about mentality, which is important only as an attribute of the spirit. In indefinite 774 association with it, too, is breath, sinimis, provided by Ilquanim [761] quanim for everyone at birth. The word signifies more than [827] the material act of breathing, it denotes the actual physical state of being alive, a condition "lost" by Ilquanim to mortals. The connection of these two elements with the spirit is unexplained, though their exact relationship is indefinite.

If the spirit moves far from its proper position at the back of the neck, the owner falls ill; if it leaves him, his condition [153] [155]

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

that tally posts have mentality, and suggested that it might be these which attend the gathering of the supernatural beings at the winter solstice instead of an element from the human body itself.

One elderly Bella Coola, of philosophical temperament, described q̓wałnusta in terms far removed from the accounts of tally posts. According to him, every individual receives this supernatural possession at birth, and it remains with him, in close association with his body, throughout life. It stays in front of his face, invisible, yet having substance, and constantly shaking from side to side. If a man fails to receive a present at a potlatch, it is because his q̓wałnusta has ceased to move. When stationary it is not transparent, and not only hides its owner from the donor's sight, but acts as a barrier to his thoughts. The same man stated that this element can leave the body, can be seen by shamans, and that it is the one which ascends at the winter solstice to Nusmāt-a. At death it is believed to accompany the spirit and the life to the land above.

There seems no reason to doubt that the concept of tally posts is an ancient belief. Nor does the application of the term q̓wałnusta to another immaterial possession of quite another type destroy this probability. It must be remembered that within the last eighty years the Bella Coola have suffered not only from the tremendous upheaval caused by the coming of the white man, but have been reduced to a mere fraction of their former numerical strength by various epidemics. These factors have led to the partial forgetting of ancient beliefs, with consequent confusion. It is probable that the use of the same term for the tally post, intimately connected with an individual's life although situated in the land above, and for an invisible and intangible possession which goes in front of him, is due to this recent decay of ancient convictions. If this be true, it merely means that in former times the Bella Coola had yet another supernatural element to govern and influence their lives.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

426 hence repayment or non-repayment does not affect the stand-*556 ing of the debtor in the community. The giver expects no return, but should he come to financial straits he would have [558] no hesitation in asking aid from the Bella Bella chief. He expects, moreover, that the latter will contribute to the expenses of his funeral. This would be optional, as repayment of a non-ceremonial present concerns the donor and recipient alone, without effect on the status of either in the community.
In this instance, if the old man had died soon after his son, his debts would not have been paid, since there were surviving no immediate relatives. Sons or other near kinsmen always settle the debts of dead parents out of family pride, but it is considered most improper for the creditors to think about re-[558] payment. By giving they have shown their power, the question of return is the concern of the family of the deceased recipient.

Very rarely does the donor of a potlatch fail to return his investment presents except through oversight. In spite of every precaution, errors occur, and these are said to be caused either by a supernatural being, itself invisible, rising between [776] the donor and his guest, hiding the latter, or by Snuqwalnkaista stealing away his thoughts. Unless the donor wishes [578] to insult a guest, he will give him presents later on, and that ends the matter. But if he does not do so, the slighted man 426 may return the insult, and thus feuds are often generated that *556 may lead to war between tribes. About 1860 it is said 648 that a conflict between the people of Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet was caused in that way. In the autumn of 1921, a Bella Coola chief insisted on dancing at a Bella Bella potlatch, although it was commonly known he did not have the necessary goods for distribution to validate his dance. The hosts waxed sarcastic, taunts were answered by taunts, and only the presence of some white men prevented bloodshed. Relations between the two tribes are still strained as a result of this incident. The Bella Coola chief was subject to spells of [828] insanity, and danced during one of these. According to the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Bella Coola, the Bella Bella should have taken this into account, along with the man's generosity on previous occasions, and overlooked his remissness. 426 556 * [648] [828]

Cases have been known of a "stupid" man endeavouring to increase his prestige by giving many potlatches when unable to pay his debts. Such a one is laughed at for his stinginess, which is not the attribute of a chief, and is given only small presents. [558]

It must be clearly understood that debts publicly incurred, in other words investment presents received at any ceremony, must be publicly returned, if the debtor is to gain the public esteem granted to one who pays back with interest. But everyone cannot give a potlatch; hence any young man desirous of returning his obligations, and of rising in public favour, can do so at a potlatch given by somebody else. Guests are present from abroad, so his discharge of indebtedness is made known farther afield than if he had done so at a local gathering, and the donor has the additional satisfaction of being able to give to these strangers. Sometimes as many as ten young men will ask X for permission to pay their debts at his potlatch. Such is never refused, because it means more ceremonial, and greater interest, which indirectly increase X's prestige. A young man who has been taken to a foreign potlatch as an adherent of a guest always receives presents, and if he repays these with interest his name begins to become known, especially as his return payments are unexpected. It is thus that a man whose chiefly name (or names) has been dormant for generations, can begin to restore it. Thanks to presents he gives at X's potlatch, he will in return receive large gifts, until finally he is able to give a potlatch himself. After X has paid his own indebtedness the debts of others are settled. In each case the speaker announces the amount received on such and such an occasion and the amount returned. Thus all present are able to estimate the generosity of the payer, a chiefly attribute. When a young man plans to give his first potlatch it is customary for the older chiefs of his village to advise whether he has

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

boat caught fire, his goods were destroyed, and he, himself, 763 barely escaped. The Bella Coola regard coincidences of this 825 kind as confirmation of their beliefs.

As in the last instance, death does not always follow the hearing or seeing of an omen; it may simply presage some calamity. It is dangerous for a person to be addressed by a dog, although it is well known that dogs understand human speech and can talk if they desire. At the time of the writer's visit, it was a matter of general knowledge that a dog had spoken to a middle-aged Bella Coola woman a few years earlier. The animal was shot immediately, and the woman never revealed what it had said, but in spite of these pre- [158] cautions she became insane and has never fully recovered.

The stone man, Yuyulmyl, near Kimsquit, who figures so 763 prominently in Bella Coola mythology, is another death omen. [773]
In early times, all who passed his station used to call out to him, and it was thought that those whom he failed to answer would die within a year. In that case, the voice was welcome, [825] but the speech of an owl is still regarded with dread. If one of these birds utters the name of a dead person, the individual hearing it will soon die.

Besides these well-recognized omens, the Bella Coola be- 763
lieve that any peculiar visitation or hallucination is a probable 828 precursor of disaster. In many cases these fears are unjustified, but there are always sufficient accidents and misfortunes to corroborate their belief. An old Kimsquit man told of the manner in which his son had once come rushing into the house saying that he had seen a strange, black-faced creature. His father feared that it might have been Sxalarwax.

"Perhaps it was," continued the old man, "for my boy soon died."

Irrespective of the actual cause of death, about which the father is uncertain, he is convinced that he knew of its coming by his son's omen-apparition.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER IX

RELATIONS WITH THE SUPERNATURAL

Introductory—Sterile Apparitions—Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate—Supernatural Good Luck—Shamanism—Direct Revelations from the Supreme God—Power Localized in Certain Spots—Dreams

INTRODUCTORY

THE aspects of Bella Coola life thus far described have been principally of a nature which might be experienced by any member of the community. On the other hand, contact with supernatural beings is a privilege granted to individuals without respect to rank; even arduous appeal cannot assure it. The few to whom signal favours are granted acquire a position of importance totally different from that of chiefs. The Bella Coola are firmly convinced that supernatural beings abound in the mountains and forests of British Columbia, and that every activity of human life is governed by them. Not only do these creatures include monsters of the imagination, but birds, animals, and fish; even the activities of the human mind are considered to be beyond the scope of normal life. Ancient stories describing the actions of strange creatures and conversations between man and animals are accepted as truthful accounts, so that it seems obvious to the Bella Coola that his ancestors were more powerful than he is today. Never considering the possibility of errors in his stories, he accepts the alternative hypothesis that mankind has sadly degenerated from the golden age. Nevertheless, he assumes that the beings have not altered, and consequently hopes to encounter them on every occasion. Moreover, this firm background of belief makes it easy for him to recognize supernatural influence in events which a white man would consider to be natural. It is impossible to over-emphasize this concept.

787* [554] 787* 776 [828] [538] 981

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 Dances portraying supernatural beings, carried out with [535] full vigour until a few years ago, further fostered belief in [781] them among participants and uninitiated alike. Consequently, many of the young and middle-aged men claim to have seen visions similar to those of their elders. The incident already described (I, p. 30) of the stump which was thought to be a grizzly bear is a case in point. On another occasion a young man mentioned casually that a few evenings before he had seen a headless man walking along the road and that, wishing to view the monstrosity more clearly, he had tried unsuccessfully to strike a match. The reason was obvious to him; the power of the supernatural visitor prevented the match from lighting. The man, who was undoubtedly convinced of the apparition, may have seen something, perhaps a whorl of fog, somewhat resembling a headless body. A white man would have con- [154] sidered such a sight impossible and absurd, whereas the Bella Coola felt little surprise at the appearance of such a creature and promptly accepted it for what it seemed to be.

[828] Mental activities as well as optical illusions are likewise ascribed to supernatural agency. These include profound agitations of the mind, and even what a white man would consider a passing thought. For instance, one morning when about to start work, a certain man stated that he would have good fortune during the day, that a dream had foretold it. At the time he was moving to a new house and needed help to shift a heavy stove. During the course of the day a number of white men happened to pass by and stopped to speak to him; the stove was mentioned, they offered to move it for him, and did so easily and quickly.

"There you are," said the man, "I told you I was going to have good fortune today."

On another occasion the same man claimed to have felt that misfortune had happened to him and soon learnt that one of his sons had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The man affirmed that he had this premonition before being aware of its cause.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The explanation of these manifestations of the supernormal, 787 * for such they are considered to be, lies in the conviction that 811 every activity of the mind is due to supernatural causation, 828 the functioning of the spirit. In the round of daily life there are always good and bad incidents; the person who wakes 774 expecting to meet one or other before nightfall recognizes the fulfilment of his premonition in some small occurrence, and narrates it to his fellows as proof of what he had told them in the morning. In case of some major event, such as death or disaster, the Bella Coola assume that some previous indication must have been given. Looking back after the event, a man easily persuades himself that he "felt" a warning, and is more than ever convinced that his spirit, the cause of his thoughts, 774 has supernatural ability.

Conviction in the near presence of the supernatural has had 177 somewhat surprising results with regard to Christian Bella 787 * Coola. A man converted in middle life carries all the fervour and realism of the old religion with him to the new, and feels 781 thoroughly familiar with the atmosphere of the Old Testament. 797 Visitations, such as therein described, are similar to those experienced by his fathers and himself, and he scorns the white man who questions their literal accuracy. He continues to hear the voices of supernatural beings, and to interpret mental 828 pictures as visions, but he ascribes them to the beings of the white man's religion. The following is a rather striking illustration of this point:

A number of years ago a devout Christian, who may be 159 designated X, was a patient in the hospital at Bella Bella. In the same ward was a young Bella Bella lad whose sickness 177 refused to yield to treatment. X, becoming interested in his 787 * neighbour, began to ponder about his condition, until presently he felt convinced that the sufferer would be better by seven 781 o'clock the following morning, and told him so. A marked 797 improvement was noticeable by the time predicted, but the white doctor foolishly (according to X) gave his patient some

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

though they may be to the white man. It is hoped that the preceding illustrations, drawn from recent times, will explain the mental attitude of the Bella Coola better than incidents from folk-lore of the distant past. 787 *

Disregarding thoughts which, since they are caused by the spiritual elements of the human body, are ever present, relations with the supernatural may be divided into the following categories: [828] [774]

(1) Appearance of supernatural beings from which neither good nor bad results follow. Strictly speaking, every fleeting sight of a supernatural being belongs to this category, but it will be convenient to describe only experiences of a peculiar kind, such as the Bella Coola call ułun-abālawadjutlaix. Usually manifestations of the supernatural have certain effects; consequently, there are relatively few incidents of this kind recorded.

(2) Supernatural aid vouchsafed to a man or a woman in distress. There are many tales illustrating this, which are told and retold to the children. In most cases the assistance is given to one who has undeservedly, according to Bella Coola concepts, fallen into misfortune.

(3) Supernatural good luck. This may be obtained by anyone, and consists of the acquisition of a supernatural object to attract, not only fish and animals, as if it were a potent bait, but money and goods as well. [777] [224] [226]

(4) Acquisition of shamanistic power, with or without the ability to cure the sick. This may be received from one of two sources: [756]

(a) Ťłitcāplilān-a or some other supernatural being.

(b) Ghosts, which are likewise supernatural. [775]

(5) Obtaining prophetic powers direct from the supreme god. There are few instances of this, and none that is ascribed to a remote period. It is possible that all examples of this kind can be attributed to indirect Christian influence. [177]

(6) Obtaining power from a supernatural being localized in a particular spot. This usually takes the form of succour when [756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 like power, and will tell their son to try the same method. In
* 787 this way a descendant of shamans has a better chance to become one than anybody else. Another indication that a person is likely to become a shaman is to be wakened from sleep by a mouse. As he sits up, hastily, thinking that someone has called [825] him, all that he sees is the disappearing rodent. Mice have a rather peculiar position in the eyes of the Bella Coola, since they believe that these animals regard themselves as superior to mankind.

"The food of mortals is our food," say the mice.

His parents now tell the boy that he is likely to become a shaman, and that he must accordingly take great care of himself. If he is an adult, he will begin to observe ceremonial [785] chastity, and in any case will spend much time alone, avoiding the trivialities of life in the village, and will think little about mundane matters. At intervals he goes alone to the forest, especially to some spot beside a waterfall, the kind of place that supernatural beings frequent. Here he lies down, sometimes for several days, with evergreen boughs spread beneath and above him. These are clean and nullify the mortal odour so objectionable to supernatural beings, so that his chance of obtaining a visitation is increased. He does not know what may appear to him, but he carefully remembers his dreams[1] which, as his thoughts are centred on lofty subjects, are likewise about matters of importance. If his dream is sufficiently clear to warrant the term vision, the recipient should remain, fasting, for four days on the spot where it occurred, and should say nothing about it when he returns home. His strength increases with every vision, until at last, sometimes after a period of thirty years or more, he will obtain a real one and the power to cure a disease. Sometimes dreams come to him in the village, but they are more likely to occur in a secluded spot in the forest. It is impossible to obtain examples of these dreams
[178] since, for a long time, no one has been brave enough to seek [828] [1]The Bella Coola do not differentiate between mental images that appear in dreams and visions seen during waking hours.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 shaman from the dead once visited the land of ghosts and 775 learnt their needs. They informed him that food and clothing 787 thrown on the ground did not reach them, and that in order to do so it must be cast on the fire. Instead of journeying to the land of the dead some shamans receive their powers from ghosts who ascend to this earth, as the following account describes.

539 Within the lifetime of an elderly Bella Coola informant, a certain
* 756 woman, Sîkwalwhlûr by name, left her house one evening for a few 775 minutes. When she came back she was crazy. Her face was green, her 787 mouth and face distorted and twisted, she could only whistle when she tried to talk, and kept endeavouring to walk on her hands. Taking her [828] blankets, she went through the motions of washing them, but instead of using water, she dragged them to and fro through the ashes of the central fire, until, utterly exhausted, she lay down. By these symptoms it was recognised that a ghost had stricken her with madness, and several [755] shamans of the dead were called upon for help. For a long time their efforts were fruitless. Then one of them obtained some stained menstrual pads. While another conducted the frantic beating of sticks, the leading practitioner waved one of the pads through the smoke of the central fire and laid it, with hemlock bark and dyed cedar-bark, on the patient's face. After leaving it there a few moments, he took it off and, while the beating of sticks was stilled, threw it out the door. When this had been done four times the woman was restored to sanity. Later on she said she had seen the ghost of a certain Triowûl, a man recently deceased. Emerging from her trance she found herself in her house surrounded by numerous people and the shaman working over her. If he had not been able to cure her, she would have died; in fact, it was impossible to discover whether the Bella Coola regarded this woman as having been cured of an illness, or as having been restored from the dead.

Sîkwalwhlûr called for the singers to whom she sang four songs, relating what she had seen. They described how she stood by a fire in the land below, where the sun travelled from west to east, and where everything differed from this earth, though reminiscent of it. The singers learnt the songs, and it was to their music that the woman danced on later occasions. She was able ever afterwards not only to cure maladies caused by ghosts but to talk with them. For this purpose she was in the habit of lying down at night in the graveyard, looking down into the land of the dead which was open to her, and conversing with the inhabitants in a strange whistling language which the living could hear, but could not

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

159 in his sleep, and hopes that it will grant him specific super-
* 787 natural power. He realizes that he could increase the probability of obtaining this by ceremonial chastity, and believes [785] that it would come to him if he went alone to the woods and lay fasting for some time. Another means would be to con-[797] centrate his thoughts upon the desired end, but X is too good a Christian to do so; he is in the unhappy position of knowing too much of two religions to be able to practise either unreservedly. Such experiences are not likely to occur to any but a man of high-strung, imaginative temperament, to whom dreams and mental excitements appear especially vivid. X is intensely religious, so that it is easy for him to interpret every phenomenon in terms of the supernatural. It will be noted that most of the dreams just described took place when he was sick, precisely the time when hallucinations are to be expected.
They were more coherent than those of most Bella Coola, though the difference is one of degree rather than of kind.

* 787 Most dreams are comparatively simple, and the information received in them is intelligible. They come to all, irrespective of rank or prerogative. Nevertheless, it is believed [828] that an inheritable tendency runs in some families; this does not mean that all members of such a group dream constantly, [821] but they are more likely to do so than others. Those occurring at the winter solstice are more carefully observed than at other [773] times, since it is then that the supernatural beings decide events for the coming year and a man's spirit may be able to inform [777] him of what has been decided. Consequently, as soon as Alqaxtáin enters Nacwáta, wise men separate from their wives [785] and concentrate on dreaming, hoping to learn what is in store for them. For instance, if a man sees himself seated before a large pile of goods, he knows that he will have the good fortune to do this during the coming year; on the other hand, if he foresees ill luck, it means that he will be unfortunate. Another [821] time when dreams are especially desired is before the summer [224] solstice when hunters in particular observe ceremonial chas-[785] tity. This purification not only increases the likelihood of such

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 *787 hand, as if it had been a blow from a feather, and wrenched it from his opponent. Another of the brothers likewise struck at him with a pole, but again Qwinas seized it from his grasp. Then he stretched out one hand, caught the holder of the stick by the neck, and squeezed until the man's head parted from his body. In the same manner Qwinas killed two more of the brothers, allowing only one of them to escape. His bear friends had been in the vicinity, but help from them was not required.

Qwinas finished the construction of his olachen-weirs and then went back to his aunt's house. The brother who had escaped had already brought tidings of what had occurred, and the old woman, fearful of the consequences, angrily asked Qwinas why he had done such a thing. He quickly quieted her by reminding her that it was she who had led him to think of revenge by telling him of the reason of his father's murder.

Qwinas remained quietly at home for the rest of that summer and the ensuing winter, but early in the spring he began to build an enormous salmon-weir. The fame of his strength had spread far and near among the coastal people so that many of them came to assist him. The weir was rapidly finished and was a great success. With the wealth of salmon obtained, Qwinas was able to give numerous potlatches and took for himself the name Łáliákdja. In course of time he married the daughter of ułyuyut.

Qwinas was a great inventor. The next winter he made a net for olachen, which he used with great success in the spring. It was the first time that this had ever been done and the pattern he used has since been copied by the Kimsquit people. The following winter his aunt, acting on his instructions, made the first small salmon-net. Not only are the invention of these two useful articles ascribed to Qwinas, but also the first use of the bow and arrow, as well as other valuable appliances. After a long life he died, but he is still remembered for his achievements.[11]

A NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITY

[828] A few Bella Coola believe that supernatural experiences of the foregoing type tend to occur in certain families, although not with sufficient frequency to be called an inheritable characteristic. A middle-aged man who held this belief gave the following account of a personal encounter.

His father had obtained power from a black bear, and once when hunting he himself saw a track of which three footprints were those of a [124] [11]The above differs from the usual tales of this category in that the participants are well known. In consequence their descendants take a family pride in it and tend to add it to the ancestral myth of the first Smooan, perhaps improperly. Probably it is a tale that members of a certain family have sought to ascribe to their own ancestors.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

154 who has been "cured" of an illness, recovers; the man whose
771 death has been "caused" by magic, dies. An average white
789 man would consider such statements to be erroneous, but they not only figure in stories and beliefs, but some of them have been actually observed by the writer. The explanation lies in the susceptibility of the Bella Coola to suggestion. The conviction that he is to die so weakens a man that death often results; belief that he is to recover, aids a sick person to throw off the malady. This sentiment, intelligible in case of disease, is equally applicable in other matters. The child who has been [868] endowed with carpentry skill grows up with the conviction to assist his labours. Moreover, his relatives and friends are also aware of it, and he receives every opportunity to practise, so that the outcome desired is often the consequence of the act. 789 Though the Bella Coola do not appreciate that psychological • 828 and sociological factors may be the real cause of the result, they realize the importance of the power of thought. For [771] example, if a group of people is unanimous in wishing some end, or expects some event to happen, it is believed that their thoughts are strong enough to bring about its occurrence. The following examples illustrate this point:

It is said that when the white man first came to British Columbia, a tribe of Indians was living in a secluded valley, far to the south. As more and more settlers arrived, the occupants were driven from their homes and forced into the barren [787] mountains. One night, Alquntám came in a vision to one of the natives, saying:

"I see what you desire; you want the white men to withdraw. You, yourself, are helpless. But if all your fellows wish the same, the white men will depart."

The man told all his friends and they agreed to concentrate the next night on their wish to expel the white man. A few failed to do so, and nothing happened. The second night there was the same lack of unanimity. The desire to drive away the intruders grew stronger in course of time, until one night this was the centre of the thoughts of all; next morning the white men had vanished. It is possible that in this particular case there was a belief that Alqunăm granted the wish when convinced that all had the same desire, but this element is often entirely lacking.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Belief in the power of thought is a concept which the investigator constantly meets in Bella Coola at the present day. For example, in 1921 a government official working in the valley, purchased a representation of a merganser which had been used in a ceremonial.[9] Although this should have been destroyed after use, no difficulty would have been raised if the transaction had remained a secret. Unfortunately, the buyer allowed the object to be seen by several Bella Coola and by some Carriers. This caused indignation throughout the community and news of it reached the Bella Bella, who concluded that the vendor would suffer disaster for allowing a secret object to be seen by the despised Indians of the interior. Within a year, his wife died. The Bella Bella believed that his sin had brought its own punishment, but the Bella Coola, who knew the details of the sale and did not consider the exposure of the article to have been the fault of the seller, attributed it to the power of the thoughts of the Bella Bella. They all expected that he would be punished; therefore he was punished; the expectation was sufficient to effect its own fulfilment. This incident was too fresh in the minds of several men to allow them to sell ceremonial objects to the writer.

The most common form taken by this conviction is with regard to death; if it is believed that a man will die, he is almost certain to do so. In June, 1922, a woman died in Bella Coola and her father claimed that she had been murdered by a certain man either with material poison or by magical means. He took no direct steps in revenge but stated emphatically that the man whom he suspected would die within a year. The threatened man knew of this, and more than once said that he [9] The artifact, now in the National Museum of Canada, consists of a cloth and wood representation of a merganser canoe such as was used by Hamats in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

754 would probably fall a victim. He became ill in May, 1923, 961 and, though treated by a white doctor, grew steadily worse 789 until he died in the latter part of June, three weeks after the 828 year had elapsed. All the Bella Coola firmly believe that this [622] was due to the power of thought. The father of the woman was a powerful chief whose thoughts were accordingly potent, and some consider that his concentrated desires and expectations were enough to kill the accused, while others believe that his expressed statements convinced others of the result, and that it was their combined thought that caused the death. It usually requires the thoughts of more than one individual to lead to this effect. The doctor who attended this man stated that his patient had shown symptoms of melancholy and resignation during his last sickness; it seems clear that the expectation of death must have lessened his chance of recovery.

771 A prominent theme in Bella Coola folk-lore is the belief 954 that a person cannot long survive who has made himself un-828 popular. It is sometimes stated that a magical means was [538] employed to remove him, and this was no doubt often the case; a person who learns that a "medicine" had been employed to kill him is in no fit mental condition to counteract the power of suggestion, particularly if he knows that others are aware of what has been done. His death is regarded as proof of the efficacy of the means employed and the belief of others grows stronger. As already stated, this conviction still survives. When this ethnological investigation was being conducted, a [648] point under discussion was whether or not the Kimsquit people should be allowed to live in Bella Coola. One chief took the lead in objecting and everyone expected that, having thus roused the ire of would-be immigrants, he would die. He did so soon afterwards, and it is universally believed that it was caused by the concentration of the hostile thoughts of the Kimsquit. Sim-[784] ilarly, the potency of taboos is increased by the fact that since time immemorial the thoughts of everyone have been opposed to any infraction. Consequently, an offender is liable to punishment both for breaking an injunction and because he has gone contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations. 771 754

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To understand Bella Coola medicines it is, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practise them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those effecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or causative. 828 [784] [755]

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible. 424 755 757 [614] [465] [614] [425]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 For Head-ache

Tie around the forehead a piece of dyed cedar-bark, undyed cedar-bark, or other similar material. No herbal remedy is known.

For Eye Trouble

Moisten the finger with saliva and rub the eyes with it.

For Baldness (two means)

(1) Boil cottonwood buds in water, causing the gum to exude. Skim this from the surface, mix with fresh olachen grease or oil obtained from sockeye salmon, and rub on the scalp.

(2) Rub on the scalp oil from olachen, dog-fish, or any kind of salmon. The best is grease from the liver (?) of a dog-fish, obtained by hanging the organ before a fire and collecting the drops which exude.

For Skin Irritation

Rub dog-fish liver oil on the rash or itching part.

755 For Excessive Dreaming and Nightmares (two means) 828

(1) Burn dried salmon beneath the bed of the person afflicted.

(2) Lie in a canoe which has been chiselled out to the right thickness but has not been widened and hardened by smoke. A mat is laid across for this purpose and the smoke directed beneath, thoroughly fumigating anyone lying within. An informant was so treated as a young man when he was greatly troubled by nightmares in which he used to see a huge head which so terrified him that he would leave his bed to rush around the house shrieking and tearing his hair. This medicine cured his trouble.

757 For Canker

Pound up a snail and rub on the sore spot within the mouth.

1:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

that the proximity of such intensely human articles is enough to counteract and render powerless anything of a superhuman nature. Likewise, when a certain woman came in contact with the War-Party of the Tides and began to exhibit symptoms of insanity, she was cured by drinking water in which other women had squeezed out their menstrual pads. Another defence is the burning of dried salmon, fumigation from which is particularly effective for one who suffers from nightmares. Other remedies already mentioned are to cut the right leg and smear a bullet with the resultant blood in order to kill a cuang, and to lacerate the inside of the mouth and spit to withstand a capsizing mountain.

The medicine most commonly taken is false hellebore, the use of which was learnt by some ancient shaman. At dusk a hunter should eat a small twig of it, raw; it draws from his stomach everything injurious, particularly women's hairs, which are abhorred by animals, and ensures him success on the morrow. If he takes too much of it, he becomes ill and must swallow the antidote, mountain goat grease or marrow. He should also carry twigs of the plant with him, ready either to swallow or throw in the direction of any dreaded supernatural being whom he may encounter. Eagle down and dried salmon roe are sometimes similarly used.

The powers of a person who has obtained supernatural ability, whether or not he is a shaman, can be destroyed by similar means. For example, a lad treated so that he understands the speech of ravens, will lose his ability if he eats food cooked or prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has lost her husband within the last year, or if he passes through the hole in the floor used by an adolescent girl. The last Bella Coola with this skill was deadened to the meaning of the birds' crooking by tying near his sister one night for warmth, since her mere proximity was enough to nullify his power. This aspect of medicine merges with taboos. So, too, the power of an object can be destroyed by washing; an instance of this is Ayamlim enters and confers on Sacsac matters with Sacsacklaix, his assistant in affairs connected with his functions as leader of the supernatural Sacsac.[1] This being acts as announcer and intermediary with Ayamlim, but himself lacks the power of initiating matters. The two discuss whether or not it is advisable to allow mortal Sacsac to perform certain dances of the type known as Sacsac (II, p. 118), and if so, they transmit the necessary power to the earthly dancer who has the proper prerogative, thus enabling him to give a graphic representation of what is done in the upper land.

This is the manner of the Sacsac dances. Each portrays a performance given by one of the supernatural beings in the house above, or some other aspect of his activities. Each earthly dancer has as patron a supernatural being, usually the one who carries out the dance of which his own is a model, and between patron and protégé there exists a relationship by means of which the latter receives the power necessary to perform. To do so, the uninitiated believe that he must receive a pus, which can be translated as "call," from his associate above. Moreover, not only is each patron a supernatural being, but each is guided by Ayamlim in the performance of the Sacsac rites in the land above, which indirectly increases the prestige of the protégé.

---

[1] The differences of belief of individual Bella Coola, dependent upon family traditions, is nowhere shown with greater clearness than in the meeting of the leaders of the supernatural dances. It is clear that the Bella Coola have no uniformity of belief, even in what might be regarded as fundamental concepts. One informant, well versed in Sacsac matters, asserted that there are five supernatural leaders, Ayamlim and his assistants, Sacsacklaix, Sacsacqlaix, Sacsacklaix, and Sacsacklaix. Others were equally emphatic that Ayamlim is the Sacsac name of the supreme deity, and that Sacsacklaix, Sacsacklaix, and Sacsacklaix, are merely other designations for the same deity with regard to different functions. The belief has been inferred during the monograph, for designating the supreme deity as Ayamlim, one name by which he is known with respect to the Sacsac powers. These two opinions are not so basically different as appears at first sight. A man is considered as having two, or more, personalities with respect to different class as which he is called by different names. Since the supreme deity is regarded as a magician, who functions in diverse manners, it is not difficult to understand how there are sometimes ascribed to different individuals, and sometimes to the one under different names.

their faces. In spite of what he may have seen, the lad cannot rid himself of the supernatural fears with which he has been involved from childhood, and the experience is mortifying to a degree. It may be that he has seen some of the whistles, and thereby knows that the strange sounds are made by men, not by supernatural beings. In this case he is shown their mechanism in detail, and warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells others of his knowledge. Fear impels him to silence, and at the same time he realizes that what he has discovered has placed him in a superior position to that of his former associates. He feels, too, that he has been admitted into the ranks of the society in which his father, grandfather, and ancestors have distinguished themselves, and that it would be desecration to make light of what they have held sacred. Finally, an initiate does not at first grasp the fact that all the cries are deceptions, and by the time that this is apparent to him he has become so thoroughly a part of the organization that he has no thought of betraying his associates, upsetting a vital part of the complicated fabric of Bella Coola life, and exposing himself to ruin and death. A logical white man might think these considerations insufficient, but the existence of the society proves that the varied motives operate so strongly that a young man does keep silence. Some informants state that hypnotism was formerly used to ensure obedience.

The Sisiutl are always ready to deal with an emergency such as sometimes occurs in spite of every precaution. It is remembered that about one hundred and fifty years ago during a dance at the village of Nuqulmate, a figure, representing one of the supernatural beings, lost the misfortune to drop his mask, the vestige by which it was sisiutl having worn through. The house was crowded with uninitiated to whom the deception at once became apparent. For a moment there was wild confusion, but the senior Sisiutl rose to the occasion and closed the door, allowing no uninitiated person to leave. Then a Sisiutl was sent out with a whistle which he sounded as if the supernatural being of which it was the voice was growing

[illegible]

[illegible] 575*
[illegible] 576*
[illegible] 34
[illegible] 228

they are prohibitive; he must not sleep with his wife for four days.

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to frenzy for the rest of the commercial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him, believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every dancer dance, where his brown madness helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kitnaqun or Tal'a visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and screeches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Screecher always serves goods to unexpected screeched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period enrices him to frenzy and he screeches them, irrespective of the time of year.

It might be mentioned that some Screecher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his process. [illegible]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the four which dancer dances 575*
[illegible] 576*
[illegible] 34
[illegible] 181
[illegible] 555

cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Screech, and Breaker dances. Unlike with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Screech and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Screechers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces, of having as theme for their songs the land

[illegible] 302
[illegible] 555
[illegible] 264

[The Breaker Dance]

X is one of the few kukusiut having the prerogative of supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy and at on both qatlem and nuluxam he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making great effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their usual prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favorite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either in imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the uninitiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the kukusiut make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of other qatlem or the preliminaries of nuluxam, both of which follow the usual pattern.

When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on nuluxam evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked singers, of Sisnultymulsk Alqumim, and of the four supernatural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the kukusiut blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fluent Sisnultymulsk makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the kukusiut, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most houses contain a number of stones which have been used in boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Kukusiut who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Ła'ełimut: Kwakiutl name of a Nuxalk man.
Łała'ełimut: Kwakiutl name of a Bella Coola man.
[824] łaqal: Inner bark of cedar.
łaxałmut, "A Stripping Off": The giving, on demand, by a marriage dancer of his clothing to a herald.
'Łexwmqałała: Supernatural name of Raven.
[828] łemeis, "Frenzied": Term applied to Cannibals and other destructive łaxałmut when in a state of madness.
łpexw: Occasional exclusion of all but the singers from a house where a dance is performing.
łqwexwmałała: Kitamqat man mentioned in an ancient story.
łxwcatmen: Kwakiutl name, probably of Kwakiutl origin.

M

Ma'ełus: Female dancer mentioned in a Raven story.
Mełkulus: Kwakiutl name of a Kitamqat man.
[601] mama, mamin, mamen: Mother, term used by children.
Mamaqa: Celebrated Xenaxa hunter.
[825] mam-alpa: Butterfly.
mam-alka: Measuring worm.
mam-a: Fly, insect.
[824] ma'mamin: Swamp gooseberry.
[601] mia: 1—Father, common term in indirect address.
2—Occasional designation for the supreme deity.
mi-ełimut: Storyteller.
[614] mimmimuk: Elderly male relatives of same ancestral family.
Mimmy[m]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nałkuz in the beginning of time.
2—Form of the name Dadamy[m] when used by a male child.
Mimmy[m] ma-a: Form of the name Dadamy[m] when used by a female child.
Mimmimkmuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
Mimpamuk: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[804] mi-łqi: Measure of distance equal to the breadth of one thumb plus one finger.
[825] mi-ną': Toad.
minqaqa: Supernatural giant toad.
miskin, Salmon eggs.
mu-mała: Old male sea-lion.
mu-mimkin: Water weasel.
Mqamuxw: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Mucumkim, "Long Neck": One of the supernatural names of Great Blue Heron. muqmuqi: Co-husband in a polyandrous household.
[824] mu'mmi-i: One of the parsleys.
muqłał: Berry, black in colour.
Mumamkimuk: Generic term for the four supernatural Carpenters. mumimkin: Spruce.
Mu'ułu: One of the first men to settle at Nałkuz in the beginning of time.
Mułkuz: Land of salmon.
[824] Mu'ulu: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
mułu-a: Stick carried by hunters when penetrating into the mountains.
[824] mułu[m]: Red huckleberry.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Nuxuxuyuxuw: Women endowed supernaturally by Ana'Sinalcain and serving as patron (?) to a hactat dancer.

[719] nuxulitsi: Omen of death.

Nuxutcumdmum, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tsinqulitsa's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuxuxmdsin: 1—Man dwelling in Kimsquit's house.
2—Hactat name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuxuyim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuxuxmuxu: Hactat name assumed by a Dzaxe woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuxuyaxmin: Hactat with right to display a puppet-person. The difference, if any, between this and yaitsum is obscure.

Nu'uxmdsamuxu, "The Widower": One of Kwaxa's names as chief.

[535] nuxlaxcilal'an: Synonym for ginaxum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuqlaxcilalan, "Shoulderly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqlaxcum: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqulalaxa: Medicine brewed in a shell.

Nuqlaymin, "Place of Much Spawn": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqnqamin: Hocqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqlilqualaxa: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[305] nuqlaxcum'al'an'ulc: One year.

[528] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogatives.

nuqlal, "Empty House": House in which a hactat dance is taking place.

nuqlalqat: The throwing of grease on a fire to burn, both literally and figuratively, a chief.

[821] Nuqlaly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqulitsu: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqumsum: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for hactatum and other important hactat rites.

[777] nuq'nuxulitsu: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqsmdsalin: Ducal name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqualin: Site of an ancient town on Johnson Pass.

Nuqulalu: The upper heavens.

nuqlaxu: Women with thick pubic hair.

Nuqumdsalaxa: A Dzaxe ancestress.

Nuqlaqumdsamin, "Where Nuqumdsin Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[828] nuqlaqum'anqu: Contracted body.

Nuqlaqum'an, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Dzaxe in the beginning of time.

nuqlaqum: Cane-cutter.

Nuqlaxa: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqlali.

[535] nuqlalaqum: Children's dance which serves as training for hactat rites and to provide entertainment.

[169]

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

#142 [534] [103] [823] [101] [825] [227] [585] [425] [828] [824] [262] [825] [264]

[illegible]: Synonym for gamo'o, the large cone-shaped sound whistle.
[illegible]: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
[illegible]: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
[illegible]: "Thorny River"; River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Nalbeno-cosmy.
[illegible]: Stone supernaturally born from another at sea level.
[illegible]: Grassy village.
[illegible], "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Earlier name of a Stam man.
[illegible]: Name of a female ancestress.
[illegible], "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
[illegible]: Light.
[illegible]: Earlier name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
[illegible]: Ritual name of a Kimsquit man.
[illegible]: "Grub-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Stam in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
[illegible], "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of Indians after departure of a Cannibal.
[illegible]: Cross-piece which holds upper mouth of shaman's net.
[illegible]: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[illegible]: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for southern children. This is combined with an exchange of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is now secret.
[illegible]: Mountain goat Stam.
[illegible]: Person who wanders away from home to disappearance.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Tal'ai in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Level of salmon.

[illegible]: Kimsquit name for c'ish, eulachon.
[illegible]: Known but mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Grass with edible roots growing on tide flats.
[illegible]: Valley pre-emptied by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—The factor prerequisite of something.
2—Bad, adjective.
[illegible]: Earlier name of a Sand man.
[illegible], "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[illegible], "The One that Changes Itself": Supposed name of spring salmon.
[illegible]: Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

 192*

Kimsquit: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.
Kwaxilaxil: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Dzoo repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.
ol'ncite: Intangible further prerogative of initiating voices. [424] oldjidzkwate: Song sung by a Sacrium dancer on recovery from apparent death.
ollitte: Regular beatings given to a male child. [861]
Opitlum, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805] Papakwate: Rain after storm, unfamiliarmyphical. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821] Papakwate ol Ziet, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] repudiate: Term of repudiation applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial duties. [626] repudi: Outright removal of a prerogative or marriage. [425] retate: Departure to a new locality. [601] rit, rusatin, ritat: Father's brother or mother's brother. [501] rital: Public. [778] rigatate: Dangerous power such as is present at various powdered places.
Sikkatate: One of the names of the supreme god.
Sitilkq'i: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.
ziet, tsatin, ziet: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being "Learned."
2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for power, the large sound whistle. [825]
4—Killer whale.
5—Song.
6—Earlier name of one of the first men to settle on Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Sisiutl: Part of a peculiar repository.
Skaxaxilis: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior. [538] sumatin: Wordless chorus.
Tsatlin, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
Tsisil: Celebrated Tsilhqotin chief living in the last century.
ulcilitate: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a dependent person. [928]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]
Xpaxoo w: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.
zinte tsaxtin: Place where healing power is purified.
Zinzinkwate: Synonym for Sikkatate, the supernatural being connected with sound cloth.
zinzinkwq: Earlier dance or object used in the land claim which serves as pertain to social, economic, for the man's prestige as well.
zinzinkwate: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public ceremony of a forthcoming marriage. [574] zinzuk: Unwanted marriage. [848] zipatin: To perform the services of a herald to a woman, especially the proper direction of all chiefly class. The word zinzin may be connected with this.

A: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[192] [illegible]: Supposed good luck.
[192] [illegible]: Fog.
[192] [illegible]: Pack-rat.
[192] [illegible]: Mind or mentality.
[192] [illegible]: Place of lucky finds, and as a point where whales drift ashore.
[illegible]: Cannibal monsty returned from the land above.
Ilillelo'a: One of the first women to settle at Xalla in the beginning of time.
[192] [illegible]: Mountain.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Salmon, generic form.
[illegible]: (Probably) vision of an animal, orthair.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[179] [illegible]: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by women.
[illegible]: Women mentioned in an ancient story.
[192] [illegible]: Bella Coola chief.
[illegible]: Darkness, anthropomorphized.
[192] [illegible]: Anger.
[illegible]: Sun.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Xlyaklaal in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—Full name of a Lemequit man.
4—Short name of a Lemequit man.
[illegible]: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[127] [illegible]: Moon.
[illegible]: "Sunset": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Cross placed with ancestors spears.
[375] [illegible]: 1—Factors intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the winter.
[illegible]: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
[illegible]: Moon's name of a local woman.
[illegible]: Property, invisible to all but the owner, given by Nintpilite'a to the one [illegible].
[illegible]: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[illegible]: The ceremonial enough acquired by a child through the repurchase of [illegible].
[illegible]: Property given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[illegible]: Western dock (plant).
[illegible]: Sacrifices.
[illegible]: Distribution of company tasks prior to a potlatch.
[illegible]: "Food Supply": Synonym for ut'ulum, ancestral hunting-ground.
[illegible]: Pumpkin.
[illegible]: Black huckleberry.
[illegible]: Eye-balls of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

xnā'ā: A place of petrified power, i.e., a locality where a supernatural being has been rendered incapable of moving. [778] xnāā'ā: xlnaxta, "Petrified Name": Designation brought from above in the beginning of time.

xnē'ā: 1—Mussel. [825]
2—Freshwater mussel.

xnaxnanak: One of the thrushes.

xnapānāx: An animal, especially a bear, showing a kindly disposition towards man.

Xnāhāk: Ānāx-ānā man mentioned in an ancient story.

xnāxā'k': 1—Gum.
2—Name of son made by Raven in the beginning of time.

xnāy: Slave.

Xnaqhāhila: One of the first men to settle at Ānāla in the beginning of time.

xnāyam: Visionary receiving power direct from the supreme god.

xnāxnāwqa: Worm or larva living under the ocean.

Xnāxlāhnaw'a: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.

Xnāxla: Supernatural being who holds earth in position.

Xnāxnāw'a: Supernatural woman who restores those who suffer misfortune in the performance of kaxlax rites.

Xnāxlā'ha: Kaxlax name of a Bella Coola woman; it was obtained at Tā'ā'a in the beginning of time.

xnāxq: 1—Mythical monster.
2—Man living at Kimsquit in early times.

xnāqax dī xnq'ālāx: Posts of the sun, the barriers which cause it to retrace its course at the solstices. [821] xnāqax ne xnālā: Variety of xnāxq living above tree line.

Xnāyānlāxāxta: Stealer of thoughts, an invisible barrier within the door which prevents a man from carrying out a potlatch by robbing him of his good intentions. The concept is anthropomorphized as a supernatural being. [828]

Xne-ālāhāy: Island south-west of Bella Bella.

Xne'ālāla: Ālqantem: Deer son of the supreme god.

Xne'xnāyānla, "On the Point": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Xnāqāqa: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

xne'ālpāna: Ceremonial collar of hemlock bark, dyed cedar-bark, and undyed cedar-bark such as is given to Pīnāqāhāw'a. The word may refer to the throwing of this on the fire.

xnāqāx'ā: Unidentified berry. [824] xnāxlānāla: Top used by one of the sons of the supreme god.

Xnāxlānāla: Supernatural being resident above who has the power of causing things to rust up and come to him.

xnāxlānāy: Part of house behind fire.

xnāxlāla: Unidentified plant. [824] xnāxlānā: Piece of wood, rolled hard and smooth in a lookhole.

Xnāxnānānāk: Chief of supernatural singers who accompany Nāxāyam.

xnāxnānā: Twin.

Xnāqāqāla: 1—Cannibalistic supernatural woman, formerly resident in the supreme god's house.
2—Old woman resident in Ānāqam's house.

Xnāxnā-lāx: Locality containing repository of name received from Death.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

shapalíla': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
ska'cuum: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
snap': That part of a house on either side of the central fire. [579] Sxúmus: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being.
2—Sleep, intangible hacket prerogative. [585]
sxúxwum: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding.
Sxpumkúlwai, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] sx-pit: Shadow.
sxpyems: Hammer, archaic. [412]
sxúus: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601] Sxúmulay: Shaman's witch with power of life at one end and death at the other.
sxúus: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
sxip: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283]
skála: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
skaúm: Chequer-work under-back matting. [285] skaúk: Caribou.
skmis: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Skmúsis: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] skuum or skmuumáis: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
skmuuskúum: Body.
skmuuskúum: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Skwu-wakúnte-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Skwu-wakúnum: Professional female berry-picker. [825] skúa: Mountain goat grease. [824] skúlqua: Canoe.
Skúsal, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Skúla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
skwúx: Grouse. [825] Skwúskúsis: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] skyaqwum: Red rock paint.
slúa: Singer's house.
slwúk: Tree. [829]
slúa-qum: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
snáis: 1—Memorial post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near graves to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Snaw: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
snawm: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
snúwulis: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sóq', "Salmon-Dripping-through-the-Rock": A supernatural being.
sokúsis: Black raspberry. [824] sokwu: Grass.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The ornaments of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned outward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The ranks of the deceased are buried. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, blankets, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the column. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by as many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be.

764 [365] [324] [144] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they shower four small trees and wump through the shells, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, showing new trees every day. Meanwhile they cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is buried. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning smirch their cheeks with shells or stones.

765 783 [775] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to comb or cut whence for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or chickens. Widows and widowers cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person.

[362] [326] [323]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. At this assembly he stages a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was "the same as giving away the house of the deceased."

765 556

Religion and Superstition.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to 773 171

* * *

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEA Bellacoola NEA

By laying their hands on the nape of a person they are able to tell whether his soul is present or whether it has left the body. If the soul should become weak they are able to restore it to its former vigour. If a person swoons it is believed that his soul has flown away without breaking its shell. The shaman knows its hovering wings, which give a sound like those of a mosquito. He may catch and replace it in the nape of its owner. If the soul leaves the body without breaking its shell the owner becomes crazy.

The art of shamanism is bestowed by Sun. It is impossible to obtain it by means of fasting and praying, as is the case among the neighbouring tribes, but it is a free gift from the deity. A person who is to become a shaman will fall sick, and, during his illness, Sun will give him a song which must be kept a deep secret. After this he is able to cure diseases. If a person falsely pretends to have received the gift of shamanism, and tries to seek out diseases from a patient, he will fall sick himself.

When asked more closely about the curious difference between this method of obtaining the power and that of the neighbouring tribes my informant said: "When an Ats'ika'i'ang wishes to become a shaman he may go to the mountains where the deity of their shamans resides (probably Hi'tsas) who will initiate him. So Bilqula can obtain the art in such a way."

Sickness is caused by a disease entering the body or by witchcraft (see p. 417). The shaman is able to extract the disease by sucking. A peculiar method of witchcraft, somewhat similar to the 'ch'a' of the Kwakiutl (see Sixth Report of the Committee, p. 112), was described to me as follows: The person who wants to bewitch his enemy endeavours to obtain some of his old clothing, portions soaked by perspiration being considered especially effective. After it is obtained a wolf is killed, and the clothing is put into its mouth, which is then tied up. Then the wolf is placed in a box. This procedure is called yuck. Sometimes the clothing or some hair is enclosed in the bone of a wolf or of a dead person. No shaman can counteract these charms.

If a person has been murdered, and a string is tied firmly around the neck of the corpse, the murderer's neck will become diseased and he will be unable to breathe and will die. If sand is strewn in the corpse's eyes and the life closed over it the murderer will die. If a person has been killed with a knife or arrow, or another weapon, to which some of his blood adheres, the latter is brought into contact with a wolf's head, dog's hair, or anything else that is bad, and then thrown into the fire or put into a frog's or snake's mouth; then the murderer will die.

I will have a few current beliefs —

Sneezing indicates that people are talking about me.

Slight ringing of the ears indicates rain, loud ringing good weather.

Twitching of the muscles of the left side of the body is unlucky; of the right side lucky. Twitching of the skin under the eyes indicates that one will cry.

If a dog dreams and howls in its sleep its owner will die.

The breaking of a box without an apparent cause is unlucky.

Wars.

When a war party was expected the warriors did not paint their faces, but they put on headbands of white cedar-bark and adorned their

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

accordingly created four supernatural Carpenters. They in 993 turn made a number of workers, Alquathutail nanuqumamuly. 996
These beings, endowed with enormous power by Alquntám, chiselled from wood a number of human beings, the forefathers of mankind. Some men state that this was done by the four Carpenters, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that they were merely supervisors. No explanation is given of the means used by Alquntám to give life to the beings thus created. The workers made not only human bodies, but constructed their mentality, including the speech. Nuxmálc contains a large number of rooms, in each of which a different set of Indians, with a different language, was manufactured; thus is explained [829] the diversity of tongues among the people of British Columbia. The Carpenters did not confine their attention to men and women. Supernatural beings, animals, birds, trees, flowers, fish, mountains, rivers, perhaps even moon and stars, all were created almost simultaneously by them under the direction of Alquntám in Nuxmálc. The sun alone was not made in this way. Alquntám chose the proper plumage or fur for each bird 993 and animal, which the Carpenters painted and carved accord- 996 ing to his instructions. As they provided men with different 825 languages, so they furnished the birds and beasts with their speech, which men can no longer understand. Each was given the necessary tools for existence on the earth below; sharp incisors to beaver, strong talons to eagle, a penetrating eye to heron, and so on. The Bella Coola do not regard birds and animals as being of a lower order than themselves, for all were created by the same power, at the same time; in many respects they consider that they belong to a higher plane than human beings. It would be too great a digression to include at this point a number of myths describing the creation, but these will be found in vol. I, chap. vi.

Mythology does not record in detail the sending down to 993 this earth of trees and plants or of the forefathers of all other Indian tribes; but the manner in which the first Bella Coola arrived is clearly stated. Around the walls of Nuxmálc were

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Sasq have been heard as recently as 1924 according to popular belief. In January of that year a number of young Bella Coola were returning home in a motor-boat from Ocean Falls. They camped for the night on Burke Channel, and were alarmed to hear a crashing of bushes and a beating on tree-trunks. Thoroughly frightened, they directed the beams of several electric torches in the direction of the sounds without avail and at last started the engine of their motor-boat, the noise of which frightened the Sasq away. 539 776

An animal somewhat similar to the Sasq is the Ałółwic. The Bella Coola state that long, long ago, there lived as human beings near Port John on Evans Arm, King Island. They were a strange people, with peculiar rites including the worship of fire. Their neighbours, the Bella Bella, from whom they differed entirely, determined to destroy the Ałółwic. A massacre took place, and only a few survivors escaped to an island in one of the lakes in the interior of King Island. Here, in course of generations, they grew hairy and lost their human characteristics; it is said that a few paintings made by them are still visible there. Not many years ago some Bella Coola saw what may have been the last surviving Ałółwic. Two hairy creatures were observed fishing from a skin boat on Burke Channel. As soon as they realized that they were observed they dashed ashore, broke up the framework of their canoe, and plunged into the forest carrying its skin covering. Nothing more seems to be known concerning them, nor do they appear ever to have granted supernatural assistance to anyone. 776 829

Another supernatural creature is the Ałkałł'. It somewhat resembles a cow, although its legs are shorter and its body, which is white and hairless, is heavier. In spite of its awkward build, this animal can move so rapidly as to catch birds and animals with its tongue, which can be shot forth to a tremendous length. Various incidents are related concerning Ałkałł'. One of its characteristics is that it causes gales. The country where one lives is invariably denuded of underbrush and even pebbles; everything movable is blown away, leaving only trees 776

[821] [778]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter con- 211 nected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride 424 to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not 999 affect his daily life. 825

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, sk̓ómstd, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, nsiatl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the [996] original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nuhwíkta, the posts which stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number [992] of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form.
The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly [829] common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. According to some accounts it was these posts which supported [992] the first sky until it fell.

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant 424 past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven 999 pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The 825 matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly hun-orous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said:

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He responded how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians [648] from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Raven, perhaps made conceited by this power, did not always use it for good purposes. He learnt many new inventions which he taught to the Bella Coola, but sometimes he indulged in adventures of an obscene nature. In fact, he was often too "smart." The Bella Coola relate many tales concerning his exploits. These are all mere stories, such as can be told by anyone, and they fall into two classes. One comprises humorous anecdotes, describing how Raven tried to show off, to outwit other birds and animals, and his consequent discomfiture. These belong to the realm of mythology and are recorded in vol. II, chap. v. In addition, there are stories describing the inventions and boons obtained by Raven; these are given in detail here as the only satisfactory means of illustrating the attitude of the Bella Coola towards Raven.

The first Raven, to whom Ẑipuxtów granted such power, is not regarded as a bird, but essentially as a superman, with the kindly characteristics of a human being, and the weakness of a conceited individual who is always trying to display his prowess. The ordinary word used for a raven is qwac, but this first Raven is properly referred to by his titles as chief, Nemskile; Ẑdzaxtmdzots, "The Light-Bringer"; Kitsdzawsmx, "The Wise One"; Ne'cwathamnaix, "The Widower";* Xaxpaxnaw sdzîdî cyem, "The Unknower of Light";* Xsa-dzwstle, Xsai-dîs, and Xsai. The Bella Coola do not explain what happened to this first Nemskile; he appears to have dropped out of existence, and his power has not been transmitted to his descendants, the ravens of today. They are regarded as birds, with but the slightest trace of their ancestor's greatness. The Bella Coola know of the beliefs of the Kitkatla concerning Raven, and say that in the north he is esteemed only a little less than the supreme deity himself. But in Bella Coola the exploits of Raven are always considered to be due to the power given him by Ẑipuxtów, whose assistant he was, although he delighted to show his own prowess by outwitting his maker.

*Because he is supposed to have widowed divers for several of the first settlers.
*Owing to the manner in which Raven is supposed to have unveiled the sun.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 ago the tide came further up the rivers than at present and did 823 not recede so far. This statement was made by an intelligent old man who said that the change had taken place during his own life-time.

773 One of Raven's most important alterations to Ālqantăm's 833 intentions was with regard to the sexual act.

In the beginning of time, the organs of women were on the forehead, those of men on the palm of the hand, and intercourse was effected by a man rubbing his hand across a woman's brow. Raven feared that children would not result from this practice and accordingly altered the organs of both sexes to their present positions. In order to teach mankind the sexual act he then chose a woman and held intercourse with her, telling her that if the practice were carried out secretly and vigorously a child would be born. And nine months later the woman gave birth to an infant. Raven told the first inhabitants of the world that he wished them to have issue; they consequently held intercourse frequently and begat many children until their descendants filled the Bella Coola valley.

The attitude of the Bella Coola towards this story is identical with their beliefs concerning Raven as the cause of death.

"Yes," they say, as they repeat the above story in answer to a question, "Raven taught our ancestors how to have children."

One side of their nature implicitly believes any story handed 773 down from the distant past, but few today are sufficiently naive [183] actually to credit it. The more sophisticated frankly disbelieve, or pretend to do so. Doubt also exists with regard to [129] Raven as originator of linguistic differences. The Bella Coola state that Ālqantăm intended only one language for the whole world, but Raven thought that this would lead to trouble and used his power to teach the ancestors of every tribe their special speech.

Many inventions and beliefs are attributed to Raven without any accompanying myth. It is said that almost all geo-
[103] graphical names are those bestowed by him on places reached in his travels. It was Raven who taught men how to bait [226] hooks on long lines to catch black cod; it was Raven who first

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER III

SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

Ancestral Family—The Village Community—The Family—Kinship Terms—Slaves

As in other communities, the social, religious, and economic aspects of Bella Coola life are interdependent, but there is an added complexity in the influence of mythological concepts. This not only complicates investigation in the field, but it also renders a logical description of their customs difficult. Some reference to practices recorded in detail in later chapters is unavoidable. 128 182

In many communities, ethnologists have been able to begin with the social organization of the people. Among the Bella Coola, this is impossible, since their religious beliefs colour every aspect of their life, and these must be understood by anyone who wishes to comprehend their culture as a whole. In this chapter, too, it is necessary to commence with a description of that aspect of mythology which serves as the cohesive bond to one of the social units, the ancestral family.

Ancestral Family

As recorded in the last chapter, it is believed that in the beginning of time Alquntăm caused the first men and women to be created in his house above and sent them down to populate the earth. They came in groups of two, three, four, or more, brothers and sisters, or more rarely man and wife, to different parts of the Bella Coola valley. They brought with them tools, houses, clothing, even sustenance in the shape of fish and animals. More important, from the point of view of social organization, they brought with them names and ceremonial prerogatives. In fact, the Bella Coola believe that their culture was created by Alquntăm in the distant past, and has not been the result of slow growth. It is true that there 773 [829]

1/McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

773 have been many changes. Raven, the culture hero, taught 829 the early settlers many useful arts, and they were themselves so powerful that they were able to create ceremonial and other prerogatives in a manner impossible to their descendants. Moreover, the people realize that they have been influenced by neighbouring tribes since that time, but in spite of these additions, they believe that their life is patterned on that of their earliest forbears.

[181] As a group, the Bella Coola are philosophers. They demand a reason for everything, though once a reason has been given, and accepted, they think no more about the matter. The elaboration of Bella Coola mythology may be due in part to their desire to explain their social organization; but without question these myths, now accepted as facts, have had a great influence on the lives of the people. In fact the social structure of the tribe has tended to conform to the myths.

621 It is believed that each group of first people formed a village 773 community, and pre-empted hunting-grounds in the vicinity. These usually consisted of small valleys opening from the main [361] Bella Coola River, tracts which could thus be easily defined.
[226] Each group also took possession of a suitable part of the river for a salmon-weir, or, if located on the coast, a convenient place for an ocean fish-trap. In course of time the first people married, of necessity with members of other villages. According [591] to mythology, and equally according to modern practice, the women usually moved to the villages of their husbands. When 773 a child was born, it naturally grew up to share in the hunting-grounds of its father's village. Moreover, the father was able to bestow on his child various ceremonial dances; the concepts of some he had brought with him from above, others he had formulated on this earth. It is assumed that all the first people were mighty chiefs, able to initiate rites in a way that few modern men have been able to equal. But the mothers of these children, the first born on this earth, did not surrender the privileges of their own villages at marriage. Consequently, their children were of almost as much interest to the brothers

b:McDerath B-5 (502-504)948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

the Germans it would have been moral and proper according to Bella Coola ethics, but to take land was unheard of.

Since land is only valued for hunting or collecting purposes, it is not divided into small areas. Any man can build his house as will near the village. It is said that at Kitlobe the crab-apple trees are the property of different unrelated families, themselves members of different tribes, but this is unknown in Bella Coola. It may be mentioned that the Bella Coola somewhat naively assume that all other coastal tribes have unrelated families similar to their own, although they recognize that some of them also have a clan system which has no counterpart in their social organization. Since the concentration of the tribe on a small reserve and the beginning of agriculture, a system of individual ownership of cultivated land has sprung up. It is realized that if a man clears and cultivates a field, the produce is his own, and he can will this land to whomsoever he pleases. Likewise a man who rings a tree to kill it for firewood is the sole owner. The Bella Coola regard uncultivated land in the reserve as being at the disposal of anyone, a concept which appears not to have been taught them by any white administrator. Its origin seems rather to lie in the old belief that any unpeopled land, far removed from a village, can be used by anyone. It is recognized that the reserve cannot be considered as a ca'xlem belonging to any unrelated group, hence it is free to all. One corner of it, however, includes the lower part of a side-valley formerly used by the people of Tsmoil. An old man, whose unrelated family lived in that village for generations, has set his bear-traps in this corner of the reserve for a number of years without interference from other hunters, who go far afield with their traps. Even within the limits of the reserve it is felt that this man has the prime right to that area for the use of himself and his family.

Theoretically an unrelated family may die out. Several instances were received of old men who, believing themselves to be the sole survivors of their family, bequeathed their names

Schwerdtfeger, R.: Bella Coola Ethnology
NEH Bella Coola NES

owners to their dog, and had distributed presents to validate the bestowal. Consequently, the animal is a chief (see Plate 11) and can do as he likes. When it dies it will be mourned as a chief. Moreover, a number of people have returned the presents which they received at the time the dog was made a chief, and this money is kept by the women and her husband, to be used when they perform the rite of mourning for the dog at death.

When this is possible, in the present degenerate days, it is not difficult to understand how, formerly, a great chief felt himself above the restrictions that kindred lesser men. The last great Bella Coola chief was Pielic, who died between 1850 and 1860. His influence and power were so great that he was a virtual ruler, during anything. If he requested a young man to take his food box home and the youth was slow to obey, Pielic had no hesitation in killing him on the spot. Such great power, though unusual, is intelligible to the Bella Coola, since Pielic gave far more potlatches than any of his contemporaries. Other chiefs have been known to attempt a similar arbitrary use of power, but have failed, since their prestige was not great enough to justify it. The fame of a mighty chief spreads up and down the coast, and protects him and the members of his family from being ambushed and slain in any sporadic foray. During an actual fight, however, a chief had to take his chances with the rest, but the comparative immunity was a great advantage.

The Bella Coola recognize the fundamental differences between their own concepts about chieftainship and those of other coastal tribes with whom they come in contact. This point was mentioned in the course of conversation by several men. The most powerful chief known to them was Tsilson, who, they say, was virtual monarch of the Kitkatla. None of his subjects could go hunting without his permission, and he had rights to a certain share of their booty. At any ceremony presents had first to be given to him, and if he were slighted in this respect, he would kill the offender. It is believed that all the Kitkatla chiefs were powerful, but Tsakis was the greatest of all. It is said that one of his prerogatives was to exercise jus primae noctis whenever a Kitkatla was married. Without question, some of this chief's powers have become exaggerated in transmission, some the less they show that the Bella Coola realize the great importance of the northern chiefs. Concerning their nearer neighbours, the Bella Bella, the Bella Coola understand the way in which the members of a family combine to help their chief in the giving of presents. They say that the Bella Bella consider the Bella Coola practice of each one endeavouring to make himself a chief to be foolish in the extreme. Such is also said to be the opinion among the Kwakiutl, who support their conviction that in Bella Coola all are chiefs, from the fact that flowing mists under the moon of all, whereas in Fort Rupert, their home, such occurs only beneath the moon of chiefs.

[19] [20] [21] [22] [23] [24] [25] [26] [27] [28] [29] [30] [31] [32] [33] [34] [35] [36] [37] [38] [39] [40] [41] [42] [43] [44] [45] [46] [47] [48] [49] [50] [51] [52] [53] [54] [55] [56] [57] [58] [59] [60] [61] [62] [63] [64] [65] [66] [67] [68] [69] [70]

Corresponding to the extreme paucity of functions possessed by Bella Coola chiefs, their prerogatives are likewise scanty. Indeed, they take their titleheld seats only during certain rites of the secret society connected with chiefs, as potlatches, and at ceremonial meals. These last occur whenever a deer or seal is killed, the latter is considered a great delicacy.[1] Anyone can kill a seal, but it would be unbecoming for a Bella Coola to share its flesh with his immediate family only. The animal is cleaned, the hole made by bullet or spear carefully plugged, and the carcass boiled whole in a large box. Meanwhile a herald (t.p. tsq) summons the chiefs to the house where the successful hunter lives. If the meal is to consist mainly of one small seal, only a few chiefs are invited, those of greatest influence through their possession of "young" seats. When several seals have been killed, the number invited is correspondingly larger, but no woman may partake unless she marks

[1] This is said to have been a personal prerogative, not shared by all chiefs, and requiring validation by valuable presents.

[2] Such seats of the city described in this paragraph were in the present time, in fact, the ceremonies of and seats for chiefs which had disappeared towards the close of the last century.

S-96 Growth 8-5 (1921-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

THE PROFESSION OF CARPENTER

As with singers, there are many carpenters who ply their trade without the advantage of an ancestral prerogative. They, also, may be expert and receive credit for their skill, but they can never achieve quite the distinction that comes to a man who has been made a carpenter by the distribution of presents. The latter may be as clumsy with tools that no one would ever trust him to make a canoe, or even a mask; but he is, socially, a carpenter, whereas a skilled artisan lacking a prerogative is admired for his ability but has no foundation of social esteem. In transmitting a professional carpenter's name, however, an effort is always made to give it to a youth with a bent in that direction. [553]

The most esteemed carpenters are those who can make canoes, a trade which requires no special prerogative. In the beginning of time, Tsalémut was the canoe-maker par excellence; he material many of the first people, and no one can have a professional prerogative as carpenter unless this supernatural being appears in his ancestral myth. The Bella Coola ascribe the skill of the Bella Bella in carpentry to the fact that Tsalémut married a Bella Bella woman in the early period of the world and that many of that tribe are his descendants. In the old days, before the coming of the white men, carpenters were always respected as esteemed members of the community. Chiefs always came for them, and they received abundant food as every ceremonial. Name the less, they were not wealthy, and only in recent years, since the Bella Coola have realized the value put upon good craftsmanship by the white men, has it become customary to give valuable presents to carpenters. Ceremonially, they have considerable influence, since the carpenter who makes a mask usually decides who shall wear it and takes charge of the fitting and adjustment. He is also held responsible for any accident such as its falling when in use or for mechanical defects. [554] [124] [777] [332]

1:McDermith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

as at that time it was all semi-darkness, faintly illuminated by what resembled pale moonlight. He remembered that he had seen the sun in Sqamsim's house, enclosed in a kind of a sack, and he determined to steal it. So he again assumed the form of a raven and flew back aloft. Without allowing himself to be seen, he changed himself into a grain of dust and placed himself in a cup from which Sqamsim's daughter, Sqamsa, was about to drink. Noticing the speck of dirt, she blew it away. Then he changed to a hemlock needle, floating on the surface of the liquid, but she lifted it off. Undiscouraged, Raven became wood which she drank down, enabling him to enter her body. Sqamsa was greatly surprised to find herself pregnant, and so was her father. In course of time a boy was born, really Raven, though she knew it not. He grew with phenomenal rapidity, and within a few weeks was crawling around on the floor and, like a spoilt child, crying for playthings. Whatever his mother or grandmother gave him, he threw aside after a few minutes and cried the more; he was a fractious child. Looking up, Raven pretended to notice for the first time the sun, dimly glimmering from within its container as it hung from the roof of his grandfather's house. He cried and cried, almost choking himself; nothing would satisfy him, so at last his indulgent grandfather gave him the shining object though he was careful to seal the floor with soft bark. The happy child rolled the dimly glowing ball around on the soft covering for some time, but when the door was opened, he crawled outside with it, leave the container against the door-post, assumed raven form once more, and flew away, croaking derisively. Thus human beings received the boon of sunlight. Raven flew back to earth and again became Kitsilas.

SECOND CRAZIE MYTH OF *Tsalalí

Long, long ago, there were no people on this earth; they were all in Nuxalk-a where different languages were made. Then Sqamsim gave life to the occupants of his house and sent them down to earth. A man, unbeliever, stretched from the land above to this world, and down this crawled five brothers, Xemsem, Tsyalt'mut, Pauplala, Wistlas, and Nakilla. Pauplala, who was to part on night, brought with him an chicken and a hammer for driving stakes used for blankets nets, and Xemsem and Tsyalt'mut brought a painted mat which they used as ceremonial gatherings. About the same time four sisters came to earth as Stars, far to the east. Their names were Wistlas, who was without legs; Tsaxilala; Skamlqamin-a; and Nachmulchlala. Pauplala exerted his power of thought to make them come to Bella Coola. The first

*Related by Captain Schooner.

#534 #532 before he came to this world. It was a large pole and stood across the sidewalk from the house, not being pierced by the doorway. At the base was a grizzly bear, with paws wrapped around it as if desirous of climbing after the food which could be seen higher up. Immediately above the bear was an eagle's nest with four fledglings standing amid their broken eggshells and crowing their necks eagerly upwards to greet the mother eagle flying back with a salmon. At the top of the pole was a bird, Tsaxamalu, representing the container in which the sun was enclosed; it was this that Raven broke to release light to mortals. The name of the pole was Si-ikhal.*

[531] The names contained in this myth are still in use. Kimilkw was the inventor of it; her usual song deals with Imaxa a seal, since the salmon enter Bella Coola River in hopes of reaching this place, salmon are used in the decorations of her house. The name Dzilxoxoq[a] varies, it becomes Ikhoxoq[a] when applied to a youth, and Ikhoxoq[a] as a for a girl.

FOURTH INDIAN MYTH OF Sisiutl[b]

#534 Long, long ago there was in a mysterious place far to the east and far above this world, a very large house, Nakalkhaxis, in which dwelt together all people, Bella Coola, Bella Bella, Carriers, and the sun. In it there lived too, all kinds of birds, including the thrush who taught each to sing. [124] The chief of the house, Sikhoa by name, lived there too and gave to each tribe its special language. One day he decided to visit the earth, and dived from his house downwards, becoming the sun. In this guise he came to earth on Mount Nayu, near Ocus, where he became a man and built for himself a house which was a copy of Nakalkhaxis, and to which he gave the same name. Sikhoa became prosperous and gave many potlatches.

FRAGMENT OF A Sisiutl MYTH[b]

In the beginning of time, Ayamalus, in guise of the sun, came down to earth a number of brothers with their sun sister. Their names have been forgotten except that of the eldest son, Tsimkamalu, who had brought with him a beaver as provender. He released the animal, which made [#24 #55] *He is commonly the sun; there is no connection between this sun-pole and the adventures of Sisiutl. The person using this name has the right to use these designs as a part of his myth, exactly as the right to sustain the adventures of his ancestor belongs to him.

[a] Phonetically written, without correctness.

[b] Related by Jackson Sleeny.

Schoolcraft, H. R. (1822-1824)[illegible]
NEA Bulletin NEA

their craft and set out on foot along the overland path to the head of South Bonnick Aun. 534

Midway along this trail the travellers saw a house, called Tishmaiki because it could lengthen itself at will. From this supernatural sight each of the five became a shaman. This house was a replica of the sun above to which sacrifice was made and, like it, contained many rooms, in each of which lived an individual speaking a different language. Ai-mainu failed to understand them and in his amazement covered the speakers, who fled to different parts of the room where each recovered and perpetuated his own language. This is why the various coastal tribes have their own tongues; if Ai-mainu had been able to understand them in Tishmaiki there would be no diversity of speech now. [524]

Various forces were taking place in the room within the house. There was a constant fire from the large whistle and a small ceremonial which accompanied of their own accord and were continually measured by Eshu. Only at this place and at Pachiki Ad Eshu appears to the four peoples; hence only the descendants of Ai-mainu and of the Pachiki people have the right to portray him in their dances. Ind'Mainu (II, p. 6) stood near the door, when as he the called out, the sacred whistle became silent as if in fear. [524] [525]

Continuing their journey the travellers reached Tiki-ia, at the head of South Bonnick Aun, where a military man, Nazumdi, was living. At this place Tishmaiki-yadim gave birth to Raven, who was born as a boy with the legs of a raven. Ai-mainu named him ulpiskwanaqiliwa. After a short sojourn at Tiki-ia they ascended the river, and presently Ai-mainu saw a female grizzly bear, whom he also invited to join the party as his sister. The bear accepted and he endeavored to change the creature to a woman. He had his success with the paws and face, that is why these parts of a bear are similar to those of man at the present day, but the bear's hairy hide dulled his efforts and in disgust he told it to run away. Before banishing it, he bade the animal always show a friendly disposition to human beings, wherefore grizzly bears at Tiki-ia have never been known to attack a person. The party proceeded up the river to Mount Sagi, where Ai-mainu found a repository (II, p. 6) through the discovery of which he became a Conshal with the name Ismaiki'ia and so ought to medicine. From this point they returned to Tiki-ia, where they settled permanently. [525]

Many of the names which occur in this myth are still in use. Mrs. Schoolcraft's designation as chief in Tishmaiki-yadim, a name that can be used by either men or women, in the forms ana the nilla yaim is 551

THREE ORIGIN MYTHS OF Tlel-ol[*]

Long, long ago, when the first people came to earth it was very different from now. There were no trees on the mountains, all were bare and had the rock and forms than at present. There was no sun, since it was contained in a mountain, a light container, within Ilgumtor's house. Raven desired to get the sun for this world, so he went to the house and asked Ilgumtor for it. The supreme being refused and allowed Raven only to play with it on the floor. Raven, not only to be satisfied with this, waited his opportunity to open the door and throw out the sun, breaking the container as he did so. In this way it was obtained for mankind.

Since this time Ilgumtor sent down to the head of Rivers Inlet a man, Kwoyiltlemem, and a woman, Nuyiltqamlas. At this time the only clothing worn was made of yellow cedar-bark and animal skins. The couple began children, who in turn married and had offspring, but Kwoyiltlemem did not grow old. Near the settlement there was a lake, on the shore of which his grandchildren often played, in spite of constant danger from a tqamsit which lived in it, and which had, in fact, caused to several victims. This tqamsit was a creature as big as a house, which could rise at will to the water at will and was able to suck in its victims through its mouth-door. Kwoyiltlemem realized that Ilgumtor had given him power to slay this evil monster. Accordingly, he boldly entered the water and succeeded in passing into the interior of the beast through an opening in the side, even he would have perished if he had read the door-door, which was likewise the mouth. Inside was a chief, whose name was Tqamsit, like that of his house, he wore a huge hat with animals running around the brim. Kwoyiltlemem asked Tqamsit whence he had obtained all the many wonderful things hanging on the wall.

"If you are brave," the chief replied, "you will be able to get rid only my possessions, but my house and my canoe as well."

So it transpired. Kwoyiltlemem consented to come close to Tqamsit's house and smashed some wonderful paintings on its walls, then summoned the people to come and see them. First came he did this, using the house for his pedestal, then he left.

He set out for the north shore of North Bentinck Arm where two sides from to land. As he travelled a crow walked along the road before him, carrying a copper in each hand and calling out the road he should follow. On the site selected he built a house, Tsimmshill, so large that the front door was invisible from the back-room. Within there lived the members of the different second tribes: Port Rupert Indians, Rivers Inlet people, Bella Bella, Kitamaat, and Bella Coola, each group of which said to special cups of whistle. Everybodies remained in this house until he had given four potlatches. Then he removed to Ape'i, near Tal'is River on South Bentinck Arm. The house still stands there, but it has become an island around which the clouds were whenever a hostile raiding-party is approaching, so as to conceal from them their objective.

*Related by Robert Dawn.

S.W.Cornish R.5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

From their long residence in this house Tal'is people understand the language of their Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and other coastal neighbours better than do the Bella Coola.

[illegible] OF Tal'is[illegible]

Among the first people sent down to earth were four who landed at the river Tsaiq, on the mainland opposite Fort Rupert. Their names were Hiskwamlaiq, a man who became the leader of the group; Nayd'a-laiq, a woman; Sneskwalim, a man; and another woman, Sneqwaqlaiq'a. They met a man, which helped them by pointing out the proper road to follow and by telling evil things which barred their path. With this assistance they were able to reach Tal'is, where they settled and where Hiskwamlaiq plucked a number of twigs from the branches of a spruce tree near the water. These twigs became the people over whom he was chief.

[illegible] OF Nalal[illegible]

In the beginning of time there came down to Mount Saaiq, near the mouth of the Dean River, two brothers, Sewaw and Sinaqal, their sister Kalaw, and their brother Qaqa[illegible]. Sewaw came as an eagle, but at once assumed human form; apparently the clans had always been human. They moved down, and formed a settlement at Nalal, near the mouth of the Dean River. Sewaw had brought with him as a present from Alqaw'ala, some chickens, called by their supposed name, Alqaw'ala'a, which he threw into the water. They increased rapidly and became the ancestors of all the chickens on Kimsquit. Thus provided with food, the brothers prospered so that they were able to give many potlatches. In course of time Kalaw was married to Nalaiq, a chief who had come to earth on the upper Dean River.

In one of their potlatches Sinaqal performed a Sa'yalaw dance, as Alqaw'ala had instructed him to do before leaving Nawait'a. Valuable [illegible] variant version, related to Mike Orland.

---

[illegible] another version see Boas, p. [illegible]. It was impossible to obtain this myth from any of the descendants of Nalaiq; it is unlikely that the clans is more than an outline.

1:McDowalth K-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

ORIGIN MYTH OF Ackha[a]

In the beginning of time Algumtin sent down to Ackha, Salmon House on the Dean River, Nuhkhla, his younger brother Tsaqlos, and their sister Swalkinalis, "Box," so named from a supernatural box in the land above. Tsaqlos brought a cariboo with him, and released it on earth.[b] With these people came as herald, The Wasp of Heaven, who later summed human form and guided them. Tsaqlos at once moved inland to the country of the Carrier Indians, where he remained,[c] taking the adopted name Sqlqo.

Nuhkhla, unprovided with a house or clothing, was so lonely and unhappy that for four days he lay hungry, inert and dependent, alone with his sister. Algumtin had promised to provide for his welfare, and, four days after Nuhkhla's landing, sent down the four supernatural carpenters to help him. Tsilaimat at once charmed his drooping spirits by building him a house, which was a replica of Nuxwatz a tsulil. Nuhkhla asked the third carpenter, Mistakhlaxal, to provide him with food, and the latter, obedient to Algumtin's instructions, whittled a small-headed salmon from maple wood and put it into the river. The fish came to life, swam, and jumped for a short time, but soon died. The carpenter tried several times with the same result. Then Raven appeared and gave him the bone which every small-headed salmon has in the back of its neck. Mistakhlaxal put this bone in one of his wooden models, and when he had thrown it in the river it swam strongly and survived. This fish multiplied so rapidly that Nuhkhla and his sister were able to support themselves on this kind of salmon, which have been plentiful in the Dean River ever since.

After a time Nuhkhla decided to visit the people dwelling on the ocean. He asked Mistakhlaxal for a canoe, and the carpenter made him one in the form of an enormous mosquito, that travelled without visible motive power. At that time the Dean River disappeared beneath a huge boulder a short distance above the sea, but the craft shattered the rock and opened a channel.[d]

At the mouth of the Dean River Nuhkhla met Kimsquit and married his sister Sylaxa, using at this ceremony a wooden marriage song given him by Algumtin. They had many children and ever since that time there have been intermarriages and friendly relations between the people of Salmon House and Kimsquit.

---

[a]Related by Jim Pollard, for another version of this myth see Boas, p. 66.

[b]The footprints can still be seen in the rocks near Salmon House.

[c]The obvious fact that the Carriers must already have been in the land from ancient times the Bella Coola. They do not elsewhere on the subject, but it seems reply that they too were sent down from above at the same time.

[d]The canyon on this river marks the site of the observation.

1:16:Swanton E-1 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Bellabella. NES

Other people had come down to earth at the same time as Xaxa-a, and among them a man and his wife who had landed at the mouth of Gee Bay. They had two daughters who, walking one day at the head of the bay, were surprised to find a house. They looked in and saw a woman, so returned, and laughed heavily to find her made of rotten wood. They kicked over the figure and the head fell into the fire and was burnt. Then they seated themselves in her place, worked diligently at the blanket and ate a large amount of the food. Towards dusk they put the figure back in place and left themselves.

Soon Xaxa-a returned. He endowed the figure, called her a good wife, and thanked her for weaving so diligently and for having eaten so much of the food. Then he saw that she had burnt her hand, and chided her, saying that she must take better care of herself. At this the two girls who were hiding burst out laughing and showed themselves. They suggested to Xaxa-a that he choose one of them for his wife; he agreed, selected the elder and married her. He built a house on a hilltop where they lived and to which he called people from far and near where he gave a potlatch.

Sound Origin Myths

As already stated, many sound names are believed to have come down from above with the first Bella Coola, or to have been created by them on this earth. In such cases, the sound origin myth is the same as the ancestral myth. Theoretically, names of the same type can also be received through visions in which a beholder is given his new designation by some supernatural being, or taken it from the apparition. In either case, of course, it must be duly validated by the giving of presents. Only three myths were obtained which deal solely with the acquisition of a sound prerogative. No doubt this is chiefly to be explained by the fact that most sound rites have been derived from the Bella Bella.

THE ORIGIN OF THE Sound NAME, Spearpoint-repellent[*]

About 1840, a party of Kwakiutl Indians[] spared the winter in Bella Coola. Early in the spring one of them broke his leg on []Related by Jackson Mountain.

[*]We were impossible to identify this tribe. According to the Bella Coola they are also in the Cowichan, but have adopted the use of stone-points, further down

L.McDermott R-1 (1912-1924) 1948
NBS McDermott MSS

*534 that he was unable to return home. A young Bella Coola Lag woman charitably took the injured man into her house, but 434 though she tended him with care, the injury did not heal properly, and he was crippled for life. He used to work around the house at light chores, but was unable to perform any hard work, and was virtually adopted into the family, though, lacking land in Bella Coola, he could never acquire any real status there. After remaining for more than five years the cripple became ill, and realized that he was about to die. In gratitude to the woman who had sheltered him, he asked her to use his sacred name, Spaxpaxsi-mqalwat, for one of her children, if she ever had any. Soon afterwards, the stranger died. The woman's family paid for his burial, and it was recognized that the name, with myth attached, belonged to them. In later years it was duly validated with presents at a potlatch, for the benefit of her son from whom this account was obtained.

The myth is as follows:

*534 Long, long ago, a number of the sons of chiefs were playing on the shore of Owen Lake, not far from a village. One of them, happening to look upwards, was surprised to see drifting down from a great height a spaxpax, one of the long feathers which grow on the upper leg of an eagle.
They idly wondered who would get it, and passed close together, ready to struggle, lay-like, for the prize, but it eluded their upreached hands, and fell on the head of one of the boys. Then, to the amazement of all, he was lifted from the ground, as if the feather had been a magnet drawing him aloft. One of his friends seized his ankles and tried to pull him down, but in vain; moreover, he found that he could not release his grasp. A third had grasped the feet of the would-be rescuer, but he, too, was lifted from the ground. One after another tried to pull down his friends, but none could do so, until finally all the lads were drawn aloft by the feather, each holding the legs of the one above him. Nothing was ever heard of their fate.

A few years later the father of the boy on whom the feather had fallen gave a potlatch, at which he used this event as a sacred theme for one of his surviving children. A mask representing the son was used in the belief that this supernatural being alone could have caused such an event, and the name acquired through intermarriage with the coastal people of the Skeena River. This house is said to be far to the north of Owen Lake, but, as no Bella Coola has visited there, this reliability can be placed on this account.

[534]

57/ Confidently believing that he has descended from ancestors
[58] who came to this earth in the beginning of time, a Bella Coola wishes to have his children firmly established in the path of his forbears. This can be accomplished only with the aid of a suitable mother. It follows that marriage is not primarily a matter of affection, but of the ancestral eligibility of the contracting parties.

CHOICE OF MATE

56 Since the initiative for marriage is taken by the man in 58/ almost all cases, it will be convenient and proper to describe the factors which enter into the search for a wife, remembering that the concerns govern the decision of the woman and her relatives. The choice of the woman who is to be the mother of the children who will carry on the traditions of the ancestral family is a matter of too great importance to be entrusted to any young person. Accordingly, while their son is yet a child, his parents often discuss who would be a suitable wife for him. They view the matter from a strictly business standpoint.
58/ Proud of their own ancient lineage, they would not demean themselves by allowing their son to marry a girl who could not trace her ancestry back to the first people, or with one whose forbears had disgraced themselves by marriage with slaves. Instead, it is a matter of pride for parents to have as daughter-in-law the child of a powerful chief. Nor can they choose a
58/2 woman too closely related to their son. Marriage with a sister, an aunt, a niece, or any first cousin is strictly prohibited. No reason for these laws could be obtained; the Bella Coola consider that it would be "indecent" or unclean so to marry, but have theorized no further about the matter. An adopted child is regarded in the same light as an own child. The Bella Coola
[57] know, and are amused by, the regulation of marriage according 58/ to totem among the northern tribes, but practise nothing of [70] this same nature themselves. In fact, marriages usually take place among those who are descended from one ancestor and who have, accordingly, the same crest, though the significance dancers on it. One earlier philosophic old man suggested that 764 in this way the soul could easily return to Nyambi-a. It is possible that this means of disposal was carried out in former times, but no informant had actually seen it practised. The 764 Bulu Coulu state that cremation is carried out by the Kibiko* 829 and the Cavinas. On the morning after a burning, young men of the former tribe rush to the spot and smear their faces with the semi-charred bones, amid much shouting. The Cavinas are said to stand with their bodies inclined over the burning corpse and to smear on their faces any grease resulted from it.

The accuracy of these statements is very doubtful, and can have no bearing on the reported practice of cremation among the Bulu Coulu.

The bodies of rich or poor, chiefs, commoners, or slaves, all 766 are buried in a similar manner though with differences in the complexity of ritual. Nor is any different method practised for criminals, murdered people, or those committing suicide.
It is believed that in case of self-destruction the body cannot 762 separate into its elements and reach Nyambi-a; that part 775 which becomes the ghost is able to go to the land below, but neither spirit nor life can second. According to one man, who says, however, have been affected by Christian influence, this is because Mpambe decrees the length of life and any willful shortening is insulting to him. Suicide is rare among the Bulu Coulu and four cases only were heard of. One woman killed herself in shame at having accidentally set fire to a village, another because her husband was unduly jealous, and two men through bladder stricture.

On the whole, Bulu Coulu methods for disposal of the dead 777 have altered but little since the coming of the white man. The 764 change from sub-aerial exposure to interment was probably not due to foreign influence although the introduction of metal shovels has facilitated the digging of graves and probably hastened the movement. A change in posture has, however, taken place. In former times, a corpse was always buried

*Or one or present, or been within the memory of elderly people.

Libr McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB: Bellacoola NEB

539 775 hurry back. After so short a visit as they thought polite, they asked to be ferried back across the river and retraced their steps to the cave where they had slept the previous night. It was dusk by this time and they lay down to sleep. During the night the cave retained an itself once more, and in the morning they were delighted to find themselves in the mountains above the Dean River.

This was the first time that anyone had penetrated to the land of ghosts, and the friends of the four brothers were intensely interested in the account of their experiences. It was October at the time, but they explained that it was late winter in the land below. No one knows why or how the four brothers had received the power to pass into the land of ghosts, although it is assumed that Sqaxtiw must have granted them the boon.

A Kitlake Story of a Descent to the Land of Ghosts

179 539 775 The following story was related by an elderly man who had heard it about ten years previously from three Christian Kitlake who had been his fellow-passengers on a steamship between Vancouver and Bella Coola. It is not a Bella Coola story, although it has been circulated among members of the tribe as an interesting tale. The facts recorded in it do not agree entirely with their beliefs, but that is a matter of no [829] consequence to the Bella Coola who, having their own knowledge, consider it quite natural that the other tribes should have other concepts.

539 775 About one year before the story was told, a Kitlake woman had died, leaving her husband and one grown-up daughter to mourn her. The husband refused to be comforted, and used to fall into a paroxysm of weeping whenever he saw any of his wife's clothing or goods. About a week after her funeral he took her clothing to the cemetery intending to burn it, but instead sat down on the ground to weep. Presently he noticed a passage beside him, down which he crawled until he came to a flat, rich land more prosperous than this world, where he wandered along aimlessly till he heard the sound of singing and hid himself behind a clump of bushes. There seemed to be five or six groups of people in different sections of the country, and the song was taken up in succession by each group. When he had remained in his hiding-place for some time, two people in new, white clothes passed so close to him that he could hear the rustling of their garments. He recognized one of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

*575 203 sively when the villages in which the dances are taking place are adjacent or separated by such a short distance that envoys cannot meet or return.

*575 177 829 [848] A word may be said about the attitude of the Bella Coola to the dances of other coastal tribes. They know that the Bella Bella, Rivers Inlet, Kwakiutl, and Kitkatla people have hamat'sa societies, but until recently their members were considered to be uninitiated, as Bella Coola were when they visited foreign tribes.* A few years ago the Bella Coola, Bella Bella, and Rivers Inlet people decided that their rites were sufficiently akin to permit membership in one tribe to carry with it membership in the others:

"We have now one repository," they say.

This development is due to ease of communication and diminution of population in the three tribes. None the less, the Bella Coola recognize differences between their own rites and those of their neighbours. They say that no other tribe [171] has repositories; also that in the other tribes the hamat'sa society is more intimately connected with the chiefs, in fact, that in Bella Bella and Fort Rupert the Cannibals are the chiefs, whereas in Bella Coola even a poor man, uninfluential in every other respect, can be one.

*575 177 [796] Theorization is out of place in a descriptive monograph such as this, but the writer gives it as his personal opinion that the Bella Coola have adopted much, if not all, of the hamat'sa ceremonial from other coastal tribes, though they have profoundly altered it in respect to certain ancient beliefs connected with localized guardian spirits and the patrons of ancestral families. He further believes that it will be found that this Bella Coola technique has in its turn affected the Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet Indians. There seems little doubt that the [171] Bella Coola are correct in saying that the society is more important among them than among their neighbours, and the [796] writer finds that dances and rituals of different types have certainly been adapted to the hamat'sa pattern of the Bella Coola.

* Except a few individuals who had inherited foreign prerogatives.

2: McDowell K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEh Bellacoola NEh

CHAPTER VI

THE MAN HIMSELF

Physique — Character

Physique

142 IN central British Columbia there are two types of Indian; 144 one represented by the Carriers and Chilkotin of the interior, the other, by the coastal peoples. The first are relatively slight of build with graceful carriage, and thin, rather delicate-featured faces. The younger people, particularly, are lithe and handsome, resembling bronze statues. On the other hand, individuals of the second type are characterized by stocky, heavy physique, with thick-set, powerful bodies, muscular arms and legs; their faces have wide mouths and prominent cheek-bones and noses (see Plate 13). Undoubtedly the Bella Coola belong with these latter.[1] No measurements were taken to substantiate this statement, but the general affinities of the tribe are obvious. Stature, build, physiognomy, and especially that intangible impression of heaviness, unite to demonstrate even to one with slight knowledge of British Columbia Indians that he is dealing with a people who are predominantly of the coastal type. Of course there are individuals of the interior type, but they are decidedly in the minority (see Plates 14 and 15). The Bella Coola claim that they can [824] distinguish a coastal man from one of the interior people, and that every coastal tribe has its own peculiarities sufficiently marked to be recognizable on sight. Probably no white observer can make this fine distinction, though the difference between the two main types is clearly apparent.

142 Judged by white standards the Bella Coola are far from 145 prepossessing in appearance. Even the children are plain and stolid, with little if any of the grace and appeal of childhood.

[1] Cf. Boas, p. 36.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien-a, whence its captain leaps to Nasqalrnaista to await the coming of Alqustém. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nalusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noákynum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [785] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [620] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Noákynum, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noákynum is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river 575
796 the kusiut dances begin.
[184] It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village,
[424] as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [551] slight variations, if any. In Tsimsit the kusiut who has the prerogative of seeing Noákynum is a certain Qaxelán-i,[19] in Kimsquit, Alxkiwnasam,[20] and in Slskiatl, Xemtsum. Although,

[115] [19]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qaxelán-i, who intimated
[426] that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578] claimed to the bestowing of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[20]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEó Bellacoola NEó

775 small particles of food on a fire; these become large when they 782 reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Ănukăldimut kuskso," "This is to make straight your road, beloved one."

[756] The needs and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, realized that food placed on the ground does not reach the [372] land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire sink through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made [753] with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach-aches and other ailments.

782 Other instances, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient feature is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a [789] large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religion proper, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. I, chap. xi).

THE OBSERVANCE OF CEREMONIAL CHASTITY

●831 In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have 785 yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to occur. This is by the practice of sxetsts, ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is necessary to understand the attitude of the Bella Coola to the sexual act itself. Although it is a normal part of life (for no one would voluntarily abstain from all contact) yet the union of man and woman does not lack import, since its very humanness distinguishes those who practise it in the eyes of supernatural beings, both anthropomorphic and zoomorphic. Those who indulge excessively become so over-charged with this characteristic that their undertakings are certain to fail, whereas those who remain continent for a considerable period are so freed from the contagion of mankind that they become almost supernatural themselves and always succeed in their ventures. If, after a period of restraint, a man holds intercourse, this essentially human act adds typical human strength to that accumulated by chastity. Chastity alone gives power; but chastity consummated by intercourse at the proper period increases that power enormously. This somewhat complicated [184] belief is accepted without question by every Bella Coola, playing an important part in their lives, even in their present degraded condition. The following story illustrates the point rather clearly:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

A party of Kingcome Inlet people had been present at a ceremonial at Smith Inlet. While returning home, one canoe, containing a chief, his wife, and eighteen or twenty commoners, was caught by an unexpected south wind and driven on the rocky islet, Iwa-ahddip, where the lighthouse now stands. The occupants managed to reach shore and to save their canoe. The islet was barren, but they made a rude shelter of boughs in which they lived while the storm continued. Every day the chief sent out the young men to hunt seals, and every day they returned empty-handed. The little food they had with them on landing was now exhausted and they were starving. One night, when they were almost famished, the chief said to his wife:

"The youths have done their best. Now that death is before us I want to create a kindly feeling. I am going out, probably to die during the night, and I want you to allow each young man to sleep with you. [187] It is a strange request but our condition is unusual, and the story of your shame will never be known, because we shall soon all be dead."

The wife acquiesced. The chief then told one of the young commoners to lie with her, and afterwards to tell a comrade to do likewise,

McIlwraith R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NBS Reflecmode NBS

539 who, in turn, would pass on the request so that it might reach each 831 member of the party. Not only is it contrary to custom for a commoner 785 to hold intercourse with a chief's wife, but it is unknown for a man to [187] ask another to sleep with his wife, so the youth was surprised and rather [222] frightened. However, he acceded to the request, passed on the instructions, and washed. As he was bathing, a seal appeared in the surf beside him, and he was able to kill it easily. Each in turn behaved in the same manner, washed, and then killed a seal. Next morning, when the chief returned he was delighted that all had turned out in accordance with his hopes. At the same time the wind dropped so that the party was able to return home.

831 The power which had brought the seals within reach of the 785 men had been engendered in their own bodies by these ritual acts after a rather lengthy period of continence. The Bella Coola believe that such a procedure always increases their strength and ability, therefore giving them a better chance to gain favour from supernatural beings, and to take advantage of opportunities offered. Hunters in particular are careful with [224] regard to their marital life since animals know their acts and [825] thoughts, and hide from one who has not made himself "clean"
[789] by continence, its termination, and bathing. Sestste consists of these three elements, but since continence is the most prominent feature, the term may be translated as "ceremonial chastity."

In its simplest form this comprises merely the three elements already mentioned. The longer the continence, the greater the power engendered by its termination. A man who has practised abstinence for a year has such strength within himself that almost any good fortune may occur, and cases are known in which it has been carried out for even longer periods. More often, an individual practises ceremonial chas-
[184] tity in accordance with a family tradition. One old man gave 224 the following recipe and was most emphatic that it always 785 brought success in hunting and fishing; he added that on the two occasions he had tried it, he had brought back a phenomenal number of skins.

A person planning to set out on an expedition for any pur-

224 985 [824] 278 [189] ebbs, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

985 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there • 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 985 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, e-m, which has a coarse implication, but nalijut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only men to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The Sacrée dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Hpamtsin is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the more force engendered in a man's body by lengthy absti-

U-NN Dewolfe E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

once was enough to kill an enemy, as if his spirit had been driven from his body by a sudden start. Even in recent times it is said that individuals who have observed ceremonial chastity have been able to perform miraculous feats. A few years ago a Bella Bella man lost two sons and was trying to get enough money to buy a tombstone for them. With this in view, he observed chastity for almost a year. Then he went seal hunting, and had killed a large number of the animals when, standing up in his boat, the sail blew against him so that he was thrown overboard. But he was so strong that he simply walked on the surface of the water and re-entered his boat, none the worse for his mishap. The men who cited this instance stated that a number of Bella Bella had seen the occurrence and could vouch for it.

Ceremonial chastity is not a matter about which the Bella Coola are willing to talk. It concerns both their religious and family life, in neither of which are strangers welcome. But when an investigator becomes on friendly terms, and gains some understanding of the inner lives of the people, he begins to realize its importance. Ceremonial chastity is not only potent in itself, but it is also the favourite means by which a man can cleanse himself of the impurities of human existence so that he finds favour with the supernatural.

NBS Bellacoola NBS

blankets" for the child. The advantages to the donors were that they had an opportunity of showing their dignity, and it would always be a mark of pride for the child to be able to boast of the way in which she had been "held." 556 608 858

Ceremonial marriage clearly demonstrates two strong Bella Coola characteristics; namely, the desire publicly to enter into financial undertakings to demonstrate the wealth of the contracting party, and the desire to increase the prestige of children by means of this wealth expended indirectly on their behalf.

EXTRA-MARITAL RELATIONS

Although the Bella Coola do not regard marriage primarily as a means of regulating relations between the sexes, yet the connection between the two is sufficiently close to warrant description in this chapter. A man considers intercourse as one of the normal phenomena of life: by marrying he has exclusive rights to his wife, but few moral restraints deter him from anyone else to whom he can gain access without infringing the prerogatives of some other husband. Moreover, sexual intercourse is not regarded solely as a gratification of desires; it has a significance which can be described, not inaptly, as holy. As already explained, two favourite methods of obtaining success in any undertaking are by preserving lengthy continence or by observing ceremonial chastity. If a young unmarried man or widower should wish to make use of this latter means, he is compelled to have relations with a woman to whom he has no just claims. This is universally recognized, nor is there the slightest odium attached to the man. The only essential is that he neither violate another's wife, nor force a young girl against her will. 581 831 837

At the present time there is great laxity in Bella Coola, a condition which makes it difficult to judge the state of affairs in former times. Every effort was made to obtain satisfactory evidence, and the following was verified and re-verified with the older men. [128]

A wife, properly married with full ceremony, was usually 837 839

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 *796 [781] X's, where he is soothed by the four times repeated frenzied beating of sticks and his call received whence it came.

During the rest of the ceremonial season X becomes mad at intervals and displays his insanity by rushing to every house and throwing dirt and sand. His kukuxtat escort is always with him, and the procedure is identical with that already [424] recorded. X makes no recompense for the damage inflicted, so it is probable that his fellows do not regard his dance as an unmitigated pleasure, but nothing can be done to deter him from exercising his prerogative.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CHARMER

*575 Although the Bella Coola are probably as moral as members *796 of any other tribe, they enjoy humour of an obscene nature, 796 and a dance which never fails to provide entertainment is that of the Supernatural Charmer. The patron of this is Sximsximult, [522] a beautiful, unmarried, feminine being who is also termed [881] Alipuin i and Nuxkmálaic. She is thought to disregard the efforts of her supernatural relatives to restrain her, and comes to this earth where she bestows her favours not only on human beings, but on animals. Her protégé at Kimsquit is a young [537] man, Lálaiak, at Bella Coola, a young woman, Kuxláxmi; [562] like all other kwiat names these can be used either by men or [424] women. It is said that Lálaiak's prerogative is derived from the experience of an ancestor in past ages, whereas that of Kuxláxmi was initiated three generations ago by a very powerful chief. The ritual in each case is identical, so the dancer [538] can be referred to as X. Each has the prerogative of singing [532] not only of Sximsximult, but also of the being known as Wiwinmuk. Many masks are required at the nakuam of either of these beings, so it is customary for X to perform with respect to Sximsximult one year, and to Wiwinmuk at the next or a subsequent ceremonial season, though the actual songs always refer to both patrons.

*796 When X wishes to dance he consults the marshals, obtains *575 their consent, and then makes final arrangements on, normally,

575 each wearing the mask of a man and each with the clothing
796 and distinctive marks of a particular tribe: Tsimshian, Haida, [532] Bella Bella, Rivers Inlet, China Hat, Kitimat, Fort Rupert, Smith Inlet, Cowichan, and as many more as X has wished, not forgetting Bella Coola itself. On at least one occasion representations of a white man and of a Chinaman were used.
Sometimes instead of one, there are two of each tribe. Each figure pretends to be pursuing Szimszimdt and keeps up a running fire of complaints:

"She left me for a worthless man; oh! how unhappy I am,"
says one, and another adds:

"Alas, I enjoyed her only once."

Each uses his own imagination in making comments, frequently drawing on personal experiences with faithless women. Ano'kwulsais explains everything, and the heralds echo the remarks. Szimszimdt looks around for a handsome young Sacial woman and says to her:

"How many men have known you?"

The heralds repeat the question and tell the woman not to be bashful, but to speak the truth. It is considered excessively [522] [531] funny for her to answer a number in the hundreds, even more than the tale of Szimszimdt's lovers. This is a time when obscene remarks are allowed and, indeed, expected. A short distance behind the hurrying procession of those who have loved Szimszimdt and are still allured by her, comes a super-[532] natural being disguised under the mask of an old man. He is her father, who keeps giving her good advice and begging her to forsake her evil ways, but she pays no attention to him.
575 Finally, just as she is about to leave, there enters an old, old 796 man with white hair and a wrinkled face; he totters in leaning heavily upon a stick and calling to the woman to wait for him.
522 She heeds him not, but goes out of the house while he staggers feebly around the fire, voicing his complaints and his appeals.
Ano'kwulsais explains that he is Sinpatsu, who fell under the spell of Szimszimdt long ago in his youth, and for whom her beauty had such a fatal attraction that he has followed her

[The Dance of the Supernatural Lover]

her house while the singers compose a new song. The theme is of her person, the young male being, K'uat-tsal'a, "The Big One." It describes how he came from above and went far and near over the earth in lustful pursuit of women, how each woman fell in love with her suitor so that she followed him in all his wanderings, how Loon befriended him, and how he exchanged his blanket for a covering of abalone shells. [575] [796] [533] [796]

On nootsalaqp when the hadzaxiu or usual go to the house, they bring back not only wood for masks but also the mask of a large cedar tree, at which the carpenters work during the two succeeding days. On nakwem a parade occurs of the supernatural beings similar to that in the dance of the Supernatural Charmer, but the masked figures represent women, not men, of the different coastal tribes. K'uat-tsal'a leads the procession and pays no more attention to his mistresses than did Sainuxtsalt to her would-be lovers. There is the same humor for local remarks, of which K'uat-tsal'a takes full advantage when he calls the attention of the young men to his following, and asks them how many mistresses each has had. [534] [531] [525]

In the evening the uninitiated are called to X's house where the first object they see is the tree-trunk, converted by the carpenters into an enormous bird. Wooden wings and a loon's head have been provided and the whole is painted in imitation of a loon's plumage. K'uat-tsal'a is in evidence, wearing a bird disguise. Presently a matting enclosure in one of the rear corners of the house is thrown open, and the uninitiated see the throng of his mistresses who rush forth, almost coming to blows in their eagerness to reach their suitor. Ax'ithwulaxis stands on one side and explains the significance. After the mock combat has lasted for a few minutes, a Cannibal begins to growl and the uninitiated hurry out. The ceremonial then concludes in the usual manner. [535]

This dance differs from all other hamat rites in one respect, since the call can come to X several times during a single ceremonial season. Of course there is no compulsion; she uses her own discretion as to whether she dance more than once, [424]

Swanton, R. B. (1902-1924) ms
MS Bellacoola MS4

directions. Then the joyful owner was able to draw back her 424 crystal and the sick woman at once recovered. 575 *

Another prerogative of the same nature is kuhilis. As the 796 * kukusiut are gathering and before the main ceremonial of the evening, the man or woman with this prerogative can display 787 it if he so desires. He stands up, stamps, then bends down and begins to beat with a stick on the floor; the singers, who know what is to take place, quickly join in. This serves to concentrate the performer's power, consisting of the ability to scratch the external genital organs. The sticks continue to sound as the performer moves about the house, acting in accordance with his right, and at the same time rolling his eyes and licking his lips. Choosing either man or woman as he desires, he calls out his name, and the person addressed must come forward to take his hands. The power is thus transmitted and the one so chosen begins to scratch, with the same accompaniment of rolling eyes and licking lips.

"It is sweet," he cries.

The power is then returned to the owner, who later passes it to another victim, until the marshals decide it is time to proceed to the main rites of the evening. The use of this pre- [522] rogative is a source of never-ending amusement to the kukusiut.
The only explanation given of this somewhat peculiar ability [776] is that it is practised by the supernatural beings in the land above. Like every other kusiut rite, it can be performed only by a person who owns a name in which it is embodied.

Sis'nuts, the third of these prerogatives, is to imitate the 424 action of holding sexual intercourse. Like the last, its use is 575 * limited to the house in which a dance is taking place, and can 796 * be carried out only while the audience is waiting for the main ceremony. The performer, man or woman, stands up with a 787 rope pressed close across his stomach, held with hands clenched at the hips. It is said that in this position nothing can pass 831 ● behind him. The singers and other kukusiut begin to beat 522 time to concentrate the actor's power as he stamps around in a crouching posture, crying hoip and shaking his hips. Pre-

Z: 36: Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424 sonstly he begins to grunt, and calls the name of either a man
*575 or a woman. The person so designated must take the per-
*796 former's hands, thus assimilating his power, and in his turn 787 begins to shake and grunt, amid the laughter of all. Presently *831 the "gift" is returned, and later passed to another recipient.
522 Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her [776] hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some time the owner draws his power to himself and the main ceremony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform sis'mots.

The Death of a Kusiut

*575 A detailed description of kusiut dances and ritual has now 766 been given, but certain special features still remain. One of *796 these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member 787 of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cannibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the patron of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done.
From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The marshals discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kusiut, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kukusiut sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cannibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kukusiut are still waiting and watching for his return.

Then she sat down to the meal with her husband, the courses being exactly as she had described it to her visitor. After they had finished eating, Sinaz's wife told him of the day's happenings, how a woman, giving her name, had visited the camp and had asked a great many questions about him, including whether or not he observed ceremonial chastity, and other personal matters. 539*

"What did you tell her?" Sinaz asked his wife.

"Oh, I answered her truthfully," she replied.

"You should never have done that!" Sinaz burst out in anger. "It was none of her business. Don't you know that you should never discuss a hunter's observance of ceremonial chastity? You have behaved very badly." [715 731]

Sinaz had reason for his wrath, because no wife should ever discuss this matter, as in so doing she weakens or destroys her husband's power.

A few days afterward the evil woman again visited Sinaz's camp, carrying concealed beneath her blanket a wooden club used for killing salmon. Sinaz's wife did not see the approach of her hypocritical friend, who struck her on the head with the weapon and killed her. The murderess dragged her victim's body a short distance from the camp; with her copper knife she removed the skin and drew it over her own body, endeavoring in every way to make it fit. But the wife of Sinaz had been larger than the bad woman, who tried to remedy the difference in size by tying the excess in wrinkles around her hips. The greatest difficulty was about the eyes, where the skin hung in folds which the impostor sewed neatly to make less noticeable. When all was done the murderess scraped a hole in the soft ground and buried the body of her victim.

While awaiting the return of Sinaz the impostor busied herself in carrying out all the small household occupations, just as she had been told about them. Towards dusk Sinaz came back. He noticed that his wife looked peculiar and uneasy, but said nothing about it; they sat down together to the meal but the woman kept her eyes lowered, lest the loose skin about them might betray her. Sinaz wondered at that and also at her voice, which did not sound normal. At night the masquerader went first to bed, as a wife always does when her husband is observing ceremonial chastity. Sinaz followed shortly. In a few minutes an owl hooted:

"Sinaz's wife has tied up a fold of skin round her hips."

Neither man nor woman spoke. Even at that distant period it was well known that the voice of a dead person passes into an owl, though only rarely can one communicate with the living. It was, in fact, the slain wife speaking from above the spot where her body lay. The murderess feared that Sinaz would put his arm around her waist, but she was saved because his observance of ceremonial chastity prevented him from doing so. [775 825] group. The moral code is not concerned with animals. The life of the Bella Coola would be unbearable to most white people, yet they find it far from unpleasant. They sigh at present conditions, but there is much to amuse them notwithstanding. If several people are talking together, one is sure to hear bursts of laughter every few minutes. It takes little to interest them; a story they have heard a hundred times, the troubles of a neighbour with his wife, the eccentricity of a white man, the stupidity of the investigator, any of these is enough to cause a hearty laugh. When collecting information, it was constantly necessary to joke with them; the most feeble witticism was enough, but they lost interest in the work unless kept smiling. Their sense of humour is not refined; jests about sexual matters are common and are enjoyed alike by men, women, and children. It is not that their tastes are perverted, but rather that they have no reticence in discussing this topic, so they find it easy to see the ludicrous aspects of a subject which is ever near the surface in their minds. They have no hesitation in poking fun at their friends; a successful practical joke, such as hiding the writer's tobacco, is enough to fill them with amusement. If the victim shows temporary resentment, the glee of his friends is complete, and shrieks of laughter usually terminate the trick.

Unless the white man who comes to live among the Bella Coola is unusually broad-minded, he is at first repelled by the dirt and untidiness prevailing everywhere; even the people themselves seem unnatural. He finds it difficult to realize the sincerity of their religious beliefs, and the manner in which these influence their daily lives is hard to grasp. The potlatch system appears so grotesque that it seems to reflect a psychology diametrically opposed to his own. The force of public opinion on personal conduct is almost incomprehensible. Gradually, however, he begins to understand the reasons underlying Bella Coola life. The potlatch becomes intelligible when regarded as a means of achieving fame; constant attention to supernatural beings is natural considering the firm conviction

[String Figures]

524 Insert right hand from distal side into the loop hooked down by right index finger, releasing this finger in the process.

With tips of right thumb and index finger grasp left radial index finger string and left ulnar thumb string, taking care that the grasping fingers pass to the distal side of the (crossight) left ulnar index finger-radial thumb string.

FIG. 6. "A Salmon Trap."

Draw these two strings out to the right, allowing the original right hand loop to slip over them.

This completed figure represents a salmon-trap,[1] the opening pointing towards the left (Figure 6).

11. A WATER HOLE.

Opening A with middle fingers.

Bring middle fingers together, tip to tip; transfer right middle finger loop to left middle finger, and left middle finger loop to right middle finger, passing it over the loop just transferred.

Extend.

Insert left thumb into left middle finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, keeping it distal to the loop already held.

Insert left thumb into left little finger loop from proximal side and transfer this loop to the thumb, keeping it distal to the two loops already held.

Insert left little finger into left thumb loops from proximal side, passing to radial side of the two proximal ulnar thumb strings, and to ulnar side of distal ulnar thumb string; hook this string down with little finger through thumb loops.

Insert left index finger into left thumb loops from distal side, passing to ulnar side of the two distal radial thumb strings, and to radial side of proximal radial thumb strings; turn index finger up away from manipulator, taking up this string on the dorsal aspect of the tip of the index finger.

Release left thumb.

Release right thumb and little finger.

Extend.

[825] This completed figure (Figure 5) shows the bird ready to dive in search

[831] [1] Some informants state that this figure represents the female genital organs.

524 wrapping radial thumb string around tips of index fingers, and allowing original index finger loops to slip off.

Release thumbs.

There is now a St. Andrew's Cross in the centre of the figure. With each thumb take up the upper arm of the cross nearest to it from the proximal side.

Release index fingers.

Transfer loop hooked down by ring and little fingers of each hand to little fingers of each hand, without showing direction of loop.

FIG. 9. "A Rabbit."

Insert index fingers into little finger loops from distal side, hand them towards manipulator to proximal side of radial little finger strings, ulnar thumb strings, and radial thumb strings; then bend them up and away from manipulator to distal side of radial thumb string, and to proximal side of the straight string which crosses the figure forming a loop between ulnar thumb string and radial little finger string of each hand. Hook this string on index fingers and return, taking it up on the dorsal aspect of index fingers.

Release thumbs.

[525] The loops just released represent the ears of the rabbit. With thumbs press the ears through little finger loops and elevate with middle fingers, thereby making the figure appear more life-like (Figure 9).

VI. THE LONG PENIS OF RAVEN

524 Bella Coola opening.

● 831 Insert middle, ring and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

With thumbs take up radial index finger strings from proximal side and return through thumb loops, allowing original thumb loops to slip off.

Insert middle fingers into thumb loops from proximal side and take up on the backs of middle fingers the strings passing across the palmar aspect of thumbs, returning thence to normal position.

With hook of left middle finger grip right middle finger loop and release right middle finger.

Smithsonian E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

With hook of right middle finger grip left middle finger loop and lift this loop from left middle finger. 524 831

Release thumbs and extend.

Pass thumbs to proximal side of index finger loops into hooked down middle finger loops from distal side and pick up radial middle finger strings.

Release index fingers but do not extend.

The long pendant loops represent the penis. Lift the figure and bend the head so that both loops can be taken into the mouth, where they can be moistened so that they will hang close together.

Gently separate the middle fingers which are hooking down loops; this causes the penis to become erect (Figure 10). It is difficult to prevent the loops from falling apart, as they always do unless well moistened.

FIG. 10. "The Long Penis of Raven."

The two lozenges which appear in the central base of the figure represent Raven's testicles.

This figure is also called, more simply, the penis.

VII. A BUTTERFLY

Position I.

With thumbs take up ulnar little finger strings from distal side. 524

With middle fingers take up palmar strings as in Opening A.

Pass thumbs to proximal side of index finger loops and take up radial little finger string from proximal side.

With little fingers hook down ulnar middle finger strings, allowing original little finger string to slip off.

Pass hooks of ring fingers into loops hooked down by little fingers from proximal side.

With ring fingers hook down proximal ulnar thumb strings, returning through loops hooked down by little fingers.

Release little fingers.

With little fingers hook down the loop hooked down by the ring fingers.

Release ring fingers.

Release middle fingers.

Pass index fingers into thumb loops from distal side, then bend upwards towards manipulator to radial side of proximal radial thumb string and to ulnar side of distal radial thumb string, then bend down and upwards away from manipulator, and keeping to distal side of both ulnar

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NEA

524 Two loops now pass around ulnar little finger string, radial little finger string, and ulnar middle finger string of each hand, with the "apex" of each loop at the angle formed by the crossing of radial middle finger string and ulnar thumb string. In each case the open aspect of the loop is parallel to the palmar aspect of the hand. With the mouth, or the help of an assistant, insert a thin stick, about six inches in length, between the right middle and ring fingers from the dorsal aspect of the hand, through the loop nearest the right hand, then through the other loop, and out between the middle and ring fingers of the left hand. The stick should project an equal distance behind the dorsal aspect of each hand.

Release middle fingers.

Gently extend.

FIG. 13. "A Tug-of-War with a Stick."

The two loops tighten on the stick (Figure 13), and as the hands are separated the two "boys," that is, the loops extending from the radial thumb string to ulnar little finger string, are seen tugging at the stick. Continue separating the hands, and the winner draws the stick from his opponent's grasp and carries it away either to the right or to the left.

X. A MAN AND A WOMAN

524 831 Form the string into a double loop, so that each string or loop normally single is now double; such a string or loop will be described as single throughout. The figure can be done equally well with a string of half the ordinary length.

Bella Coola opening.

Insert middle, ring, and little fingers into index finger loops from proximal side and hook down radial index finger strings.

Pass left index finger to ulnar side of right ulnar index finger string and hook down right ulnar index finger string.

Release right index finger, but do not draw tight.

Pass right index finger to ulnar side of left ulnar index finger strings and hook down the two left ulnar index finger strings, but do not draw tight.

Each index finger is now hooking down two strings.

Pass index fingers to palmar side of ulnar thumb string, and by bending index fingers outwards, take up this string on the dorsal aspect of each, allowing the two strings hooked down by index fingers to slip off.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Extend.

Insert middle fingers into index finger loops from proximal side. 524

Pass middle fingers to proximal side of radial thumb strings, and index fingers to distal side of radial thumb strings, holding this string between the tips of these fingers; bend index and middle fingers up and away from manipulator, taking up radial thumb strings on dorsal aspect of the tips of index fingers, and allowing the original loops to slip off. 831

Release middle fingers.

Release thumbs.

This shows a man and a woman standing up, facing one another (Figure 14). By pressing radial ring finger strings, with thumbs, away from manipulator, the figures can be made to come together in an embrace.

FIG. 14. "A Man and a Woman."

XI. Kwoi-yaix[1] 524

Bella Coola opening.

*Pass thumbs proximal to index finger loops and take up ulnar index finger string on their backs.

Release index fingers.

Hook down distal ulnar thumb strings with middle, ring, and little fingers.

Pass index fingers into thumb loops from distal side, to radial side of distal ulnar thumb string, and to the ulnar side of proximal ulnar thumb string, thence to distal side of proximal radial thumb string; bend index fingers down and up, away from manipulator, taking up this string on their dorsal aspects.

Release thumbs.

Pass thumbs into the loop hooked down by middle, ring, and little fingers of each hand from the distal side, and transfer this loop to the thumbs.*

Extend with backs of hands towards manipulator.

FIG. 15. "Kwoi-yaix."

[1]This is archaic Bella Coola, the meaning of which has been forgotten.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[825] Sukskl: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
sxsle-ol'xtsus-kus: One of the river sculpins.
sxsskmls: To gather cedar-bark.
Sximsna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sxtal: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
[101] Sxthsto, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
Sxtskmg: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Sxwult: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Sxwstks: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Sxwky: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
sxwlitsmdimut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
sxwlsts: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
sxw'xmu: Mud.
sxwists: Person or object which is taboo.
Sxwisxwus: Evil supernatural being.
Sxwlitsmu, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon.
sxkkmem pli mus: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
sxpkists: Sorcerer's box.
Sxu-lutsmtu-u: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxpin: Female lover, especially a paramour.
sxpiuu: Male lover.
Sxpkr-ti: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sxpm: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sxstsis: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sxstsmdjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sxstsmsi: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sxsk: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sxlsjitstu-u: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxim: Cedar-bark cord.
Sximsna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Sximsimuk: Immoral supernatural woman.
sxlil': Afterbirth.
Sxlystsu-u: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sxmis: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
2—Man who performs woman's work.
[761] sxmmtmots kkl': Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sxl'kul, South Wind: A supernatural being.
[805] Sxlkl, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
sxlu-ul': Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
sxlumuk: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Xemqo-ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtum: Kuxlat name of a Sisklat man.
Xemxemtlatla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Sisaak name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtum: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Sisklat in the beginning of time.
[533] xetla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs in war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xetilbs: One of the first men to settle at Xetulab in the beginning of time.
Xeltcu: Kuxlat name of a Kimoquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] xgus: Marten.
[412] xii: Stone axe.
xnlnd: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximmmlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximmmslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
[821] gnqnnts-i, plural, gnqnntsksi: Little girl.
[517] Xinqnus: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xnaix: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xnimdu-a, "Right Foot": Stuxx repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xqsis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
nsmtnuts: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
sklatum: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
sklal: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
[586] Sklimuls: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
sklu-imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
[825] Xmaxts: Locality below Nuxqalz.
gnqmatsl: Minnows.
[601] gnus: Woman, or wife in indirect address (ki gnuslaix: My wife).
[614] gnustum: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[423] gnusdum or nuqnusdum: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
Xnulk: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
sulkt: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xulxwcum: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] sulkjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[891] Xumtsk: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xumxumqs: Ancestral name of a Stuxx man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xnqnstm: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xqnulk: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 it in. He seizes as it swims ashore and throws it back once more. This is repeated four times and causes the animal to 231 have no fear of water.

In former times great attention was paid to the training of young dogs.

MEDICINES PERTAINING TO LOVE, MARRIAGE, AND CHILDBIRTH

832 To Cause Love

This medicine is applied by women to men, and by men to women.

Obtain a hair of the person whose love is sought, place with it one of the wooer's, and tie the two in a strip of birch-bark together with a morsel of octopus skin. This causes intense desire between the two. This medicine is usually personally applied by amorous youths.

A similar usage is to wear the two hairs next the stomach, hidden by a belt. Men, especially, do this to cause love on the part of girls whom they admire. An old Bella Coola mentioned that he had once had occasion to investigate the box of a Kimsquit man within which he found the tip of a land otter's tail, split, and containing two small tufts of hair, one the owner's, the other, his wife's. This ensured lasting devotion between the two.

To Cause Love for Oneself

A few years ago a certain Kälotl of Kimsquit used the following medicine to attract two sisters:

He made two figures, one representing a male, and the other a female. To each he tied birch-bark, octopus-skin, a few of his own hairs, and some obtained from the girls. Each figure was provided with sexual organs, and he placed them in position for sexual intercourse. This caused the two girls to desire Kälotl so madly that they almost became demented in their infatuation. Their mother, Kwa·tsua, suspected that Kälotl had been using something of the kind and searched his

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

box during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kälotl had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Kwa·tsua placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kälotl tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Kwa·tsua washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kälotl to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 832

This medicine can be made only by a skilful carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 833

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 886 825

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 842 789

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(a) "The Beautifier." This is one of the appellations of the infant's patron, the otter, so-called because people adorn themselves whenever an Otter dance is given. 533*

(b) Recorded as song VII D 16a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song was composed for, and used during the kusiut season of 1923-4 at the initiation of Lilitwumlaix, a female infant distantly related to Ḷomānakwala. [776]

(c) A reference to Otter, the neophyte's patron. The significance is that chiefs have an opportunity to display, "open," their generosity by lavish giving at every Otter dance. [556]

(d) The elaborate ritual of an Otter dance dispels grief. It was impossible to obtain individual translations for these two subdivisions.

(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The theme changes, and is henceforth of the usual mourning pattern.

(f) Referring to the dead Ḷomānakwala.

(g) "The Loftiest." This is one of the many designations for Nusḳalst, one of the dead man's crests.

(h) A reference to the expanding house described in the dead man's origin myth. [773]

(i) One of Ḷomānakwala's names.

(j) This is another name for Nusḳalst. The meaning of the whole part is: Ḷomānakwala sits down within the expansible house on Mount Nusḳalst. There is the added implication that he seats himself as does his supernatural namesake in the land above.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an intensely musical people. Singing in unison is an essential feature of every ceremonial rite, [796] x but, when alone, an individual seldom bursts into melody from sheer joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, shorter and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not attempt to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with [825] love, others are sung jocularly at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. II, chap. V, and appendix B.

Love Songs

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccompanied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the maker of a popular one will teach it to his friends who will serenade the 533* 832● 424

[See cat. 116, pp. 543 to 567 - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*533
[832]
[424]

woman, he taking the leading part. Such songs are not private property. Women, likewise, compose songs about men, though these are usually of a mocking nature and are sung only by a group of girls when on a picnic or fern-gathering expedition.

Man's Love Song(a)

Källäpnoälte	oltaseyo·ngwte	maxmillämmste	shäkwnnsdjinu
If you went(b)	to Song[w],	I would become a star,	I would capture you.

Källäpnoälte	oltusulstudux	suslot·lämmste	shäkwnnsdjinu
If you went	to the ocean,	I would become a bull-head(?)	I would capture you.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This is said to be an ancient Bella Coola love song.

(b) The vertical lines indicate merely the end of a word group, not a clear subdivision as in ceremonial songs in which the services of an announcer are required.

Man's Love Song(a)

Källäpnualtuq'	oläkoluhmpao	sewäskwaqwaiyials
If you should go	to the land	of the bull-head,

almäkwanmste	shämokmtcinu	shäislixudjinu
I would change myself to a kingfisher,	I would dive down,	I would eat you.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 33a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The singer composed this song about 1900.

Man's Love Song(a)

Saiyulsumldinitsqwsokoks	aiyel·a	naiyel·a
?	aiyel·a(b)	naiyel·a(c)

Sänusukkomänläl·atsl	aldjudjudjx	aiyel·a	naiyel·a
?	her	aiyel·a	naiyel·a

W'ar·äyr·aqoyualeis	naiyel·a
?	naiyel·a

2;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

sk̓ᵊpalkw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Ska-tsxem: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
sqaq": That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Sxitema: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [513]
2—Sleep, intangible kusiut prerogative.
sxiusnam: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Ṣtqwastustkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] st-pil: Shadow. stiqwmas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
stekes: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
sliamaiks: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other. [601] stihu: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stiḳ: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283]
shiks: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
shesu: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] siłaxlt: Caribou.
sihms: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832]
Sihmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sihmss or sihmsstuałas: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sihmstaliktsta: Body.
sihmsstuałasam: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sikwaxwakimaw-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sikwaxwakanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] siks: Mountain goat grease. [824] sikalya: Castor.
Sikkul, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Sikla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
sisma: Octopus. [825] Sisaklas: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
siqmasma: Red rock paint. [386]
sisla: Singer's baton.
siułk: Text.
sile-pass: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823] stsin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stsas: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
stutsum: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
stutsaik: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sulmlt: Black raspberry. [824]
sulstu: Ocean.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 ago the tide came further up the rivers than at present and did 823 not recede so far. This statement was made by an intelligent old man who said that the change had taken place during his own life-time.

773 One of Raven's most important alterations to Ālquntäm's 833 intentions was with regard to the sexual act.

In the beginning of time, the organs of women were on the forehead, those of men on the palm of the hand, and intercourse was effected by a man rubbing his hand across a woman's brow. Raven feared that children would not result from this practice and accordingly altered the organs of both sexes to their present positions. In order to teach mankind the sexual act he then chose a woman and held intercourse with her, telling her that if the practice were carried out secretly and vigorously a child would be born. And nine months later the woman gave birth to an infant. Raven told the first inhabitants of the world that he wished them to have issue; they consequently held intercourse frequently and begat many children until their descendants filled the Bella Coola valley.

The attitude of the Bella Coola towards this story is identical with their beliefs concerning Raven as the cause of death. "Yes," they say, as they repeat the above story in answer to a question, "Raven taught our ancestors how to have children."

773 One side of their nature implicitly believes any story handed [183] down from the distant past, but few today are sufficiently naïve actually to credit it. The more sophisticated frankly disbelieve, or pretend to do so. Doubt also exists with regard to [829] Raven as originator of linguistic differences. The Bella Coola state that Ālquntäm intended only one language for the whole world, but Raven thought that this would lead to trouble and used his power to teach the ancestors of every tribe their special speech.

Many inventions and beliefs are attributed to Raven without any accompanying myth. It is said that almost all geo-
[103] graphical names are those bestowed by him on places reached in his travels. It was Raven who taught men how to bait [226] hooks on long lines to catch black cod; it was Raven who first

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 785 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals [278] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the [783] river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, e·m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tiful, of which they planned to collect a supply. In the course of their journey Dudusongʷ saw a man who, when he drew near, turned into a piece of hanging moss. A little later he again saw a figure, but on approaching it became a tree. Dudusongʷ and his wife walked on and presently the former once more beheld a man; this time the apparition changed to a fir tree. It was evident to Dudusongʷ that a supernatural being had manifested itself to him, and he told his wife that they must return. On reaching home he related his experience and gave a shaman's dance. 539 756* 787

From this experience he had received the power of curing. He could see disease when it was invisible to all others, and could summon it to himself, where it was harmless, thus restoring the patient to health. He made for himself a rattle, shaped like a bird; this had the ability of dancing of its own accord, and would catch people's hair in its opening and closing beak. The sick were brought to Dudusongʷ from all over the valley. One day he travelled by canoe down to Sinxl where he found many of the villagers seriously ill. His arrival was quite fortuitous, for he was unaware of the epidemic that was raging. The inhabitants sought his help, so he landed and cured them. He entered the house of a woman who claimed to be ill, and took the sickness upon himself, but no sooner had he left than he fell down stricken. He demanded to be taken home in his canoe, but he only lived two days after his return. The woman had been in pain from her menses; it was this that he had taken upon himself and caused his death. 539 756* [761] [783] [841]

In consequence of the danger attached to the vocation, many people try to avoid becoming shamans, though if Ťitcäplilän-a should appear to a man when ill, he cannot escape the power. The usual method of prevention is for a man to hold intercourse with his wife from below, so that her flesh, impure through its liability to menses, can form a barrier to the coming of supernatural power. One who wishes to escape always sleeps on the left of his wife, whereas if he is seeking shaman's power he sleeps on the right. Another method of avoidance is to use the hole in the floor which serves as exit and entrance to the house of a girl secluded following adolescence. 756* [787] [833] [513]

Since the power of a shaman is obtained by a personal experience, and lacks both form and substance, it cannot be transmitted and disappears at the owner's death. As has been

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

box during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kälotl had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Kwa·tsua placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kälotl tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Kwa·tsua washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kälotl to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 832

This medicine can be made only by a skilful carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 833

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 886 825

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 842 789

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789
shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841 unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [773] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction [825]
and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881
in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581 regard the married state as the normal condition of man. 589 Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those [732] crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581
and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous [462]
small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most important feature is that it governs the status of the child. [858]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to force his attentions on a slave woman if she objected, 836
although her refusal would be most unusual on account of his [567] prestige. There were no professional prostitutes; a man [548] usually gave a small present to a girl from whom he had received favours, and she was expected to give him a little, dainty basket filled with undyed cedar-bark to use as a sponge. Such relations appear always to have been of common occurrence. Today, as formerly, a man's morality is considered to 836 be his own affair; laxity may lower his prestige, but no law is 522 broken, and his neighbours laugh and chaff him about it. In fact, sexual matters are discussed with the greatest freedom, and a person who has been caught is mocked mercilessly. When visiting a foreign tribe, a man sometimes lives with a [648] woman and, on parting, composes and sings a song describing her charms. One man did this after living with a Kitlobe woman, and on his return to Bella Coola found that some of his fellows had learnt it in some unexplained manner; they used to sing it to him, much to their amusement, in part to his own, and somewhat to the annoyance of his wife. This perhaps illustrates rather clearly the attitude of the Bella Coola to an infraction of morality—where no marriage rite has been broken; it is amusing rather than disgusting. There 836 are no times when the moral code ceases to function. At potlatches, and also at kusiut dances, there appears always to [834] have been a certain amount of laxity, although this was strictly prohibited within the house where the ceremony was taking place. Such behaviour is due to the excitement and stimulus of a large gathering, not to anything connected with the rites themselves.

Perverted sexual desires, like other matters connected with 839 the relations of the sexes, are regarded as concerning the individual alone. Sodomy appears to be unknown. Intercourse 836
by pre-adolescents is held to be disgusting, but carries with it no social ostracism. Incestuous union, however, is mildly anti- 835 social; it exposes the offender to secret contempt, but does not interfere with his attainment of whatever position his wealth 556

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Sqlan'li, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [626] [302] [834] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänelp or walilikwätsälätsälats, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqus or a ssiutl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qokän·i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wikwanutl, who was also called O'miätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Tcepinäil when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qokän·i.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qothm he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

Alquntäm enters Nusqulxwaista at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noäkxnum seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaien·a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noäkxnum empties a large number of olachen into the river.[11] X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut.

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noäkxnum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noäkxnum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Imältwidjutqwlsan, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

[11] Noäkxnum is accordingly often called Nuälulxnum.

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 *796 On the following evening, nebusam, when the uninitiated have been called in, they see Ālquntām standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, wearing a large mask and a blanket decorated with tufts of dyed cedar-bark. Ānoºlikwolsaix moves to and fro as she gives her customary explanations, which are echoed by the heralds. The masked representation of Sno'olxults Ālquntām rushes back and forth behind the fire, waving his arms to and fro as if he had an uncontrollable impulse to scratch someone. The four masked Holders move with him, as if to restrain him from dashing among the uninitiated.

"See!" says Ānoºlikwolsaix. "That is what they do in the land above."

After gazing upon these wonders for some time, the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut perform a dramatic act. As many as possible crowd around Sno'olxults Ālquntām, pressing with their hands against the back of his neck, the seat of [826] the spirit, calling hoip, in an effort to soothe him. This is done four times, without avail; he remains as wild as ever. Then one of the marshals removes the mask, and the same methods are used to try to soothe the wearer. But still they are of no avail. The mask is replaced, and Sno'olxults Ālquntām rushes forth, with the four Holders in close attendance, and followed by a large number of kukusiut. Starting at the lowest house, he enters each in turn, dashing around the fire and startling the uninitiated in the same manner that X had done, but not actually scratching anyone. Non-members cower in terror at this invasion of their houses by a supernatural being. On the return to X's home, Sno'olxults Ālquntām is pacified by the frenzied beating of sticks. The masks [532] are burnt in due course, after which the kukusiut assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house to sing one of his songs and thus further the return of his call to the land above. Sometimes X himself wears the mask of Sno'olxults Ālquntām, more [834] often it is entrusted to another kusiut, but the wearer must obey one prohibition; he must not sleep with his wife for four days. 575* 796*

[The Scratch Dance]

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to frenzy for the rest of the ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every kusiut dance, where his latent madness helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kimsquit or Täl·io visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Scratcher always saves goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year. [834] [828]

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his prowess. [551]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the fear which kusiut dances cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kukusiut with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land 575* 796* 424 [781] [554] [302] [533] [264]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

* 575 The singers have also composed a song for each of the ănuyex
* 796 and these too must be practised, while the men dance or remain 533 still as they think fit. Since no uninitiated are present the affair is purely a rehearsal. The words of each of these songs is of the manner in which the patron helped X to survive his ordeal. By this time it is late and the kukusiut disperse after the usual meal and admonitions of the marshals.

* 575 The next day, qothm, the carpenters assemble early in the
* 796 morning to start work. Since X is entitled to portray any of 532 the supernatural beings who are companions of his patron in the land above, it follows that there is wide variation in his choice of masks to be manufactured. The principal supernatural beings are always shown, and any animals, since all are supernatural, can likewise be displayed. As usual, a few kukusiut are invited at midday to share the meal provided for the carpenters. The number of masks to be provided is often so great that two days or more are necessary for their completion, in which case no ceremony takes place on the night [533] which would normally be qothm; the kukusiut merely gather and again practise their songs.

* 575 But the day after is qothm. At dusk the kukusiut are called
* 796 in for a final rehearsal of the songs, and then a summons is sent [515] to the uninitiated, who have been washing and beautifying [532] themselves in eager anticipation. In Kimsquit it is customary [184] to hang some of the masks on a sloping pole behind the fire and the sight of these amazes the non-members. First the singers
[781] beat out the song of one of the women mourners and she dances in time to it, while the heralds near the door keep up a steady
[535] stream of remarks, encouraging the woman to perform yet [834] more strenuously and to have no modesty about shaking her breasts. Then another of the women dances, followed in succession by the third and fourth if that is the number who sang the mourning songs. Next the ănuyex perform, each in succession accompanying the song composed for him. Now comes the central feature of the evening, the performance of X himself. As the singers strike up the shaman's song which he is cases though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a kusiut. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their fears are always so strong that they never cease to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 796* 182 571 [781]

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whatever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial import is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the kukusiut relax somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, novices, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry.

[262] [562] [264]

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the coastal tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi-

575* 796* 577 273 834

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 tively that such is not the case among the Bella Coola. At *796 the present time both drunkenness and vice are rampant, but 577 neither of these practices is apparent on the nights when dances
273 are taking place. The writer was present at many kusiut dances, in each case attended by practically every resident, [834] and during them he saw only two drunken men. With regard to these, the sentiment of the influential members of the society was one of regret that the marshals could no longer exercise their prerogatives and punish the offenders. As several Bella Coola expressed it:

"Our dances are sacred and ceremonial, a drunken man spoils them."

As a rule they do not regard drunkenness as a serious vice, if a vice at all, hence this attitude was illuminating. It is more
*575 difficult to speak with certainty about morality; no breaches *796 of it could have occurred at the ceremonies witnessed, nor was 577 there any evidence that the excitement led to any licentious
834 actions. On the whole, the dances are desirable since they provide a source of tremendous interest and importance. Vice flourishes with lassitude and boredom; anything that stimulates the people reduces it, and when the Bella Coola are engaged in ceremonial rites, the sentiment of the seniors of the community is strongly opposed to anything that interferes with the solemnity of the occasion.

There is no reason to suppose that these factors were not present in former times, more potent than now when belief in the supernatural powers of the kukusiut has passed away. The whole question of sexual morality at kusiut dances was investigated with considerable care.

One point emphasized by all Bella Coola was that no kusiut was allowed to have relations with an uninitiated person, whether his wife or not, during the period that his face was blackened and he was wearing a ceremonial collar. The reason for this prohibition seems to have been one not of morality, but of the necessity for preserving the dignity and secrecy of [688] the kusiut society. An offender was punished by being struck

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

by a marshal with a billet of firewood; such a blow was never repeated and might or might not cause death. The woman with whom the member had misdemeaned himself was either initiated at once or killed if her relatives could not provide a name and prerogative. 575* 796* 577 834

Restrictions between members of the society were less severe. Particularly during the long nights of lsuxtämem and nusiutälsap, when only kukusiut were present and when men and women, often scantily clad, were closely associated, there seems to have been a certain amount of immorality. It was by no means a time of licence, nor was laxity encouraged by the marshals; intercourse between members of the society did not conflict with kusiut regulations, and was accordingly a matter that concerned the individuals alone. [688]

Relations between the actual dancers and members of the other sex were formerly governed by strict rules, rigidly enforced by the marshals. After the coming of a call, a man could hold intercourse with a kusiut, provided that he did so in his own home, but in no other. But after nebusam, when he left his house, continence was demanded until the end of the season and the burning of the enclosure-platform. The only exception to this rule was that if a second dancer received a call in the same house, the restrictions placed on the first were raised while the call was actually upon the second; that is, between lsuxtämem and nebusam. After that both were subject to strict continence, unless a third call came to the same dwelling. The Bella Coola of today offer no explanation for this law, save that disregard of it was displeasing to the supernatural beings. An offender in this case was likewise punished by being struck once by a marshal. [688]

The religious aspects of the dances, as exemplified by the attitude of the Bella Coola to the masked figures and other phenomena, was described in the early part of this chapter, but additional observations may now be made. The writer realizes that the reader must find it difficult to understand how the uninitiated can be deluded into thinking that masked 575* 796* 781

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [152] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [756] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the ƐlaxŌ'ʟa dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [292] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'ä'ʟpsta (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of BaxbakuälanuXsi'waē of the Kwakiutl. Some ƐlaxŌ'ʟa do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and [266] devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The ƐlaxŌ'ʟa has to observe a number of regulations.
[525] For four years after his initiation he must not [834] gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
MASK OF THE S'Ä'ʟPSTA.
Bi'kula.
Cat. No. 19909, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The Ō'ʟEx (the laugher) and the dä'tia (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'ʟEx "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The dä'tia carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ō'ʟEx and the dä'tia, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the kū'siut, for instance, when 688 the ƐlaxŌ'ʟa gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [692] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-688 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 754 to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-756 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

597 736 Ignorant of his ancestral names, and lacking the means to validate them even if someone should tell them to him, owning no hunting-grounds, the unfortunate infant is little better than a slave. This is almost unthinkable except in the extremely rare contingency of a child being left without relatives.

Although public opinion does not impel kindly treatment to orphans left without kindred, yet many Bella Coola have charitable dispositions and it is not unknown for a family to adopt and tend an infant without reason or hope of reward. One old man mentioned how his mother and a Chilkotin child had been born on the same day when a party of the latter had been encamped near Nusqalst. A few days later they left for the interior, abandoning the infant. The grandfather of the old man chanced to pass their camp while the ashes of their fire were still warm and found the baby, whom he brought back, to be a brother to his own daughter. His wife suckled the two, giving each a breast, and treating the foundling as her own. When the boy grew into manhood, he went back to his own people, but never forgot his adopted parents. Forty years later he visited Bella Coola, bringing with him his own wife and family. The old man who related this incident recalled the manner in which the Chilkotin had instructed his children to regard him as their brother.

597 [768] Children are not the only persons to be adopted. On the death of an adult his relatives may "adopt to replace" someone who has a striking facial resemblance to the deceased. Thus, some time after the death of his sister, a certain man was in Bella Bella and saw a Bella Bella woman who closely resembled her. He desired to adopt her, and since he was a man of importance, his wish was granted. To legalize the transaction [431] he distributed valuable presents among the Bella Bella. A person so adopted does not usually change his abode, nor does [601] he lose membership in his own family; instead, he becomes a [835] member of two, with full rights to names and prerogatives in both, is addressed with the same kinship terms as if related by blood, and is likewise considered a member of the family as far as incest rules are concerned.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

595 556 two, but only one of great importance could hope to aspire to more, while the case of Potles was considered to be unique and highly desirable.

595 578 A chief's wives always lived in the same house, and it is said that disputes were frequent. Potles endeavoured to prevent jealousy by providing each woman with a special bedroom and sleeping for a single night with each in order. One informant had two wives when a young man, and he found that the only way to avoid constant bickering was by sleeping in one bed, between them. The evidence seems clear that plurality of wives was usually the cause of considerable friction, though this never deterred a man from taking a second wife if he could. The only special rule of incest in [835] [582] this regard was that two sisters could not be married at the same time.

595 183 626 In answer to questions about polyandry, two men told of a licentious woman who had two feeble-minded husbands between whom she used to sleep. The whole affair was considered disgusting, but public opinion did not ostracize the offenders since a person's marital affairs were considered to concern the individual only. It was accordingly assumed that 595 556 the institution of true polyandry did not exist, when, unexpectedly, information was volunteered about its occurrence in the families of influential men. A very powerful chief, if his only child was a daughter, quite frequently married her simultaneously to the sons of other chiefs. She was thus considered most fortunate, since only a wealthy man could provide for a daughter in this way, and expend the large quantities of goods necessary to ensure her proper marriage in each case. The husbands were never brothers, and seldom related, since the ambitious parent wished to ally his daughter with different ancestral families for the benefit of any resultant children. The joint wife was accustomed to live for a number of months in the home of one of her husbands, with her other husbands forming part of his household. She would then move to the house of another, who assumed the leadership of the group,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to force his attentions on a slave woman if she objected, 836
although her refusal would be most unusual on account of his [567] prestige. There were no professional prostitutes; a man [548] usually gave a small present to a girl from whom he had received favours, and she was expected to give him a little, dainty basket filled with undyed cedar-bark to use as a sponge. Such relations appear always to have been of common occurrence. Today, as formerly, a man's morality is considered to 836
be his own affair; laxity may lower his prestige, but no law is 522
broken, and his neighbours laugh and chaff him about it. In fact, sexual matters are discussed with the greatest freedom, and a person who has been caught is mocked mercilessly. When visiting a foreign tribe, a man sometimes lives with a [648]
woman and, on parting, composes and sings a song describing her charms. One man did this after living with a Kitlobe woman, and on his return to Bella Coola found that some of his fellows had learnt it in some unexplained manner; they used to sing it to him, much to their amusement, in part to his own, and somewhat to the annoyance of his wife. This perhaps illustrates rather clearly the attitude of the Bella Coola to an infraction of morality—where no marriage rite has been broken; it is amusing rather than disgusting. There 836 are no times when the moral code ceases to function. At pot-
latches, and also at kusiut dances, there appears always to [834] have been a certain amount of laxity, although this was strictly prohibited within the house where the ceremony was taking place. Such behaviour is due to the excitement and stimulus of a large gathering, not to anything connected with the rites themselves.

Perverted sexual desires, like other matters connected with 839
the relations of the sexes, are regarded as concerning the individual alone. Sodomy appears to be unknown. Intercourse 836
by pre-adolescents is held to be disgusting, but carries with it no social ostracism. Incestuous union, however, is mildly anti- 835 social; it exposes the offender to secret contempt, but does not interfere with his attainment of whatever position his wealth 556

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

835 and influence may have won for him. One or two instances 556 are known of contact between parent and child, a matter in which it is the duty of no one to interfere; if a person thus flouts public opinion, it is his own affair.

In view of the firmness of the marriage bond and the ab-648 sence of professional prostitutes, it is difficult to explain the 167 wholesale exodus of Bella Coola women to Victoria in the last century. In some peculiar manner this came to be regarded as socially proper. The daughters both of chiefs and commoners trooped off for a varying period of months or years [164] and those who returned brought back venereal diseases which appear to have been unknown before that date. Few of them bore children afterwards, a factor of prime importance in estimating the reasons for the decline of the Bella Coola. The motives which led the women to the city seem to have been: (1) the desire for wealth; (2) the influence of strong liquor; (3) the lure of a strange environment; (4) the attraction of the white men, on account of their higher culture.

It is fortunate for the Bella Coola that this fatal custom has ceased to be considered estimable, although the harm already done may be irremediable.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pose should remain continent for several nights to increase his 224 generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the 785 rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty [801] in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power [836] in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know [184] this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect [825] of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals [783] has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[24] is to observe contin- [824] ence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately [278] afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[25] as poi- [211]

[24]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.
[25]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium,
[301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
●836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-
883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first
discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

than the presents just given by X's relatives, though occasionally they may exceed them. Y's father, or a herald, or an eloquent friend on his behalf, speaks to the following effect: 583 584

"Be bold. Henceforth you will have to work a very long time for us. We will let you know when we need your services."

The significance of this speech lies in the fact that X, and to a certain extent his relatives, are expected to perform almost menial tasks for Y's father during the period of engagement, which has now been duly ratified. X's father and his followers now leave Y's house. It is immaterial whether or not X and Y themselves have been present. It is important that this formal acknowledgment of the engagement should take place during the day; otherwise any children resulting from the marriage could be shamed by having it said to them: "Your parents were not married in the open light of day." [858]

For a varying length of time X now acts almost as a servant to Y's father. He does not live with her family, but he cuts wood, draws water, and performs other menial tasks. Whenever a member of X's family gives a ceremony, he takes care to give lavish presents to Y's relatives. If it is impossible to hold a sacred rite, X's father is at least expected to invite Y's family to a ceremonial feast, and also to share with them any game that he may kill. Meanwhile, X and Y are not subject to any restrictions as to seeing each other. In theory if they should cohabit it would "spoil" the engagement, but in most cases when this occurs, as it often does, the matter is simply hushed up. [836]

Children whose parents were long engaged are said to be "heavy"; their entry into life having been prepared with careful thought and due ceremony, so that their limbs are clear to travel with success to the position of chief. When such a child is born, the relatives are eager to call their fellow-villagers to confer a name soon after birth, and the infant starts life with this advantage. There is no specific length of time for engagements; if X and Y are the children of influential chiefs, the 584 [858] [553]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

837 faithful and cases of rape were either unknown or very rare.
[839] The daughters of chiefs, too, were guarded with great care and 622 any effort to seduce one of them would be punished by her 836 father. The parents of a girl used to watch her carefully, and the opportunity for immorality was not great in the days when everyone went to bed at sundown except on the occasion of a ceremonial dance. As one informant described it:

"The daughters of chiefs used to be looked after as if they were in boxes, cherished and guarded by their parents and relatives. No one would dream of molesting them. And a chief's daughter used to be proud and look after herself. Nowadays, girls don't care, and everything has become degraded."

[586] If the daughter of a chief did demean herself, the parents lost interest in her, as one who was spoilt. It was always assumed that a girl of rank was a virgin at marriage, and if it was discovered that she had been living an immoral life, her husband in many cases returned her in disgrace to her parents who, equally shamed, were expected to send back to him the goods he had expended for their daughter. Loss of virtue was 622 judged only from indirect information. If the daughter of a 848 chief was found pregnant before marriage, she was almost ostracized by her family. No ceremonial marriage could be arranged for her, and the child could not be cleansed from the stigma of illegitimacy.

836 On the other hand, it appears certain that there was a good 567 deal of intercourse in the old days between chiefs and slave women, or even between slaves and the daughters of chiefs.
[431] In the latter case the woman was often cast aside by her relatives though they sometimes yielded to the inevitable and tried to wash away the disgrace with gifts. At the same time, public opinion was unfavourable to a man who consorted with many women, or to a woman who allowed herself to be at the disposal of many men. Any regular union of masters with their slave women for the deliberate purpose of having children was unknown. A girl's consent was always necessary, given either personally or through an intermediary. Even a chief hesitated

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to force his attentions on a slave woman if she objected, 836
although her refusal would be most unusual on account of his [567] prestige. There were no professional prostitutes; a man [548] usually gave a small present to a girl from whom he had received favours, and she was expected to give him a little, dainty basket filled with undyed cedar-bark to use as a sponge. Such relations appear always to have been of common occurrence. Today, as formerly, a man's morality is considered to 836
be his own affair; laxity may lower his prestige, but no law is 522
broken, and his neighbours laugh and chaff him about it. In fact, sexual matters are discussed with the greatest freedom, and a person who has been caught is mocked mercilessly. When visiting a foreign tribe, a man sometimes lives with a [648]
woman and, on parting, composes and sings a song describing her charms. One man did this after living with a Kitlobe woman, and on his return to Bella Coola found that some of his fellows had learnt it in some unexplained manner; they used to sing it to him, much to their amusement, in part to his own, and somewhat to the annoyance of his wife. This perhaps illustrates rather clearly the attitude of the Bella Coola to an infraction of morality—where no marriage rite has been broken; it is amusing rather than disgusting. There 836 are no times when the moral code ceases to function. At pot-
latches, and also at kusiut dances, there appears always to [834] have been a certain amount of laxity, although this was strictly prohibited within the house where the ceremony was taking place. Such behaviour is due to the excitement and stimulus of a large gathering, not to anything connected with the rites themselves.

Perverted sexual desires, like other matters connected with 839
the relations of the sexes, are regarded as concerning the individual alone. Sodomy appears to be unknown. Intercourse 836
by pre-adolescents is held to be disgusting, but carries with it no social ostracism. Incestuous union, however, is mildly anti- 835 social; it exposes the offender to secret contempt, but does not interfere with his attainment of whatever position his wealth 556

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sary to understand the attitude of the Bella Coola to the sexual act itself. Although it is a normal part of life (for no one would voluntarily abstain from all contact) yet the union of man and woman does not lack import, since its very humanness distinguishes those who practise it in the eyes of supernatural beings, both anthropomorphic and zoomorphic. Those who indulge excessively become so over-charged with this characteristic that their undertakings are certain to fail, whereas those who remain continent for a considerable period are so freed from the contagion of mankind that they become almost supernatural themselves and always succeed in their ventures. If, after a period of restraint, a man holds intercourse, this essentially human act adds typical human strength to that accumulated by chastity. Chastity alone gives power; but chastity consummated by intercourse at the proper period increases that power enormously. This somewhat complicated belief is accepted without question by every Bella Coola, playing an important part in their lives, even in their present degraded condition. The following story illustrates the point rather clearly:

831 785 [184] 539 831 785

A party of Kingcome Inlet people had been present at a ceremonial at Smith Inlet. While returning home, one canoe, containing a chief, his wife, and eighteen or twenty commoners, was caught by an unexpected south wind and driven on the rocky islet, Sno·aldděy, where the lighthouse now stands. The occupants managed to reach shore and to save their canoe. The islet was barren, but they made a rude shelter of boughs in which they lived while the storm continued. Every day the chief sent out the young men to hunt seals, and every day they returned empty-handed. The little food they had with them on landing was now exhausted and they were starving. One night, when they were almost famished, the chief said to his wife:

"The youths have done their best. Now that death is before us I want to create a kindly feeling. I am going out, probably to die during the night, and I want you to allow each young man to sleep with you. It is a strange request but our condition is unusual, and the story of your shame will never be known, because we shall soon all be dead."

[837]

The wife acquiesced. The chief then told one of the young commoners to lie with her, and afterwards to tell a comrade to do likewise,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 who, in turn, would pass on the request so that it might reach each
831 member of the party. Not only is it contrary to custom for a commoner 785 to hold intercourse with a chief's wife, but it is unknown for a man to ask another to sleep with his wife, so the youth was surprised and rather [837] frightened. However, he acceded to the request, passed on the instructions, and washed. As he was bathing, a seal appeared in the surf beside [622] him, and he was able to kill it easily. Each in turn behaved in the same manner, washed, and then killed a seal. Next morning, when the chief returned he was delighted that all had turned out in accordance with his hopes. At the same time the wind dropped so that the party was able to return home.

831 The power which had brought the seals within reach of the 785 men had been engendered in their own bodies by these ritual acts after a rather lengthy period of continence. The Bella Coola believe that such a procedure always increases their strength and ability, therefore giving them a better chance to gain favour from supernatural beings, and to take advantage of opportunities offered. Hunters in particular are careful with [224] regard to their marital life since animals know their acts and [825] thoughts, and hide from one who has not made himself "clean"
[783] by continence, its termination, and bathing. Sxetsta consists of these three elements, but since continence is the most prominent feature, the term may be translated as "ceremonial chastity."

In its simplest form this comprises merely the three elements already mentioned. The longer the continence, the greater the power engendered by its termination. A man who has practised abstinence for a year has such strength within himself that almost any good fortune may occur, and cases are known in which it has been carried out for even longer periods. More often, an individual practises ceremonial chas-[184] tity in accordance with a family tradition. One old man gave the following recipe and was most emphatic that it always 224 brought success in hunting and fishing; he added that on the 785 two occasions he had tried it, he had brought back a phenomenal number of skins.

A person planning to set out on an expedition for any pur-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 785 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals [278] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the [783] river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, s-m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[567] friends, a further cause for their preferential treatment. A [727] Bella Coola who had been enslaved and ransomed had to [783] undergo a cleansing ceremony to remove the taint of slavery before he could take part in the ceremonies of the community. It was impossible to learn the details of this rite.

[624] A master had complete power over a slave, unaffected by the force of public opinion, since the affairs of a slave, being without relatives, were of no consequence to anyone. Accordingly, the lot of a slave depended on the character of his master, and on his own ability and industry. An industrious slave was valued; such an one would not be traded or sold except through dire necessity, and in course of years he became, as far as actual treatment was concerned, one of the [424] family. Many masters gave their slaves kusiat[44] dance pre- [431] rogatives, expending large sums for the purpose. In such a case the slave might become an influential member of the community, though the fact that he was not free was never forgotten. On the other hand, a master had not the slightest compunction about beating a lazy slave, and could kill him if he so desired. None of the present Bella Coola has heard of such a case; it was considered more sensible to sell or give away an unsatisfactory slave. It was accepted as a matter of course that a master should provide his slaves with food and clothing, since anything produced or obtained by one belonged to him. A slave-owner had full rights to his female slaves, [837] and unquestionably exercised them. The only restraints were the jealousy of his own wife, or wives, and the feeling that it was undignified for a free man to demean himself. It was impossible to learn with even approximate accuracy to what extent intercourse took place between masters and slaves. Probably not a great deal, though there was considerable freedom of relations between slave women and the young men of the community, unrestrained by the pride of chieftainship. When a slave had been faithful for a number of years and had [582] become almost a member of the family, his master would try [44] Dance privileges (I, p. 180) were more rarely given.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

593 slave, and this is believed to have occurred on one occasion 567 to the daughter of a chief.

432 Once, many hundred years ago, the daughter of a Bella Coola chief L48 was married to the son of Taxlexwam, a Bella Bella chief, living at Qoqoyd. At the marriage, in Bella Coola, valuable presents were given by both families, and the girl went to live in Bella Bella with her husband. Some ten years later, Taxlexwam gave a large potlatch to which he had invited guests from all parts of the coast. As in duty bound, his daughter-in-law's relatives gave a certain amount of goods to rebuy her. They were not wealthy, so that the contribution was of small value. Taxlexwam had expected a larger present, and now found himself unable even to repay his debts to those who had assembled. He did not immediately show his resentment, but soon afterwards sold his daughter-in-law as slave to a Kitkatla chief. The Bella Coola were justly indignant, but could not make up their minds what to do in such an unprecedented case. The girl ultimately escaped and made her way home after lengthy wanderings (II, p. 505).

•837 A husband demands faithfulness on the part of his wife, though he himself is often rather lax. Illicit intercourse is regarded, not as a deadly sin, but as an infringement of the husband's prerogatives. But if a woman should bear a child at a time when it was impossible for the husband to have been the father, due to absence, he would probably accept it as his [586] own and do no more than administer a beating, though some jealous men would divorce a wife for this. Bella Coola sentiment on such matters varies with the individual; it is universally considered to be a matter that concerns the husband [184] alone and he can do as he thinks fit. The daughters of chiefs are usually faithful to their husbands, whereas those of poorer persons, unrestrained by the valuables expended at their mar-[L82] riages, are more lax. If the husband should catch an adulterer, he can, if bold, slay him on the spot and the exaction of blood revenge would be uncalled for. Usually a fight ends the matter, though the offender's family may give presents to the aggrieved husband, and his wife's relatives may also make donations to atone for their daughter's failings. A husband does not share his wife with anyone, and a question as to the lending of a wife

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to a guest was regarded as amusing. In recent years, however, 837 some husbands have made a practice of renting their wives to [48] white men. This is not considered creditable, but the Bella 548 Coola do not strongly condemn breaches of the moral code, [183] which are regarded as the affair of the husband alone. There is said to be a Bella Bella custom by which a wife takes as recognized paramour one of the friends of her husband who is thought not only to know of this but to receive the presents which the lover gives his wife. The two continue to be friends and often hunt together; in fact, their mutual interest in the woman is a bond between them. No trace of this practice [171] could be found in Bella Coola.

POLYGAMY

It has thus far been assumed that the Bella Coola are 595 monogamous, an assumption correct only since the period of 556 white dominance. Previous to that time it was quite common [177] for wealthy men to have three, four, or more wives. Potlas, the important chief so often mentioned, had nine, ten, or eleven, the exact number is not known. A man wishing to take a second wife could do so in the manner already described, although the period of engagement was usually much shorter, and working for his parents-in-law was not expected. The reason for this was obvious to the Bella Coola. None but a chief of importance could afford more than a single wife, and such an one could not be expected to demean himself by working for anyone else. Besides, parents were glad to have their daughters married to a great chief, so willingly omitted the customary period of servitude. Few attained the distinction of having several wives. As far as could be learnt, [162] the number of the sexes seems always to have been about equal, in itself a check to polygyny in a community where practically every adult had a wife. A number of males were always slain in war, and it is to be assumed that polygyny was made possible only through the surplus of women thus caused. The great majority of men had a single wife, some chiefs had ceremony, they can part at discretion without anyone being affected. 586

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

When a wife runs away and seeks refuge with another man, her husband sometimes tries to kill his rival, but frequently both families endeavour to heal the breach amicably. Some of her relatives, particularly those who played an influential part in the marriage, first ask the husband whether or not he is willing to take her back. If the answer is in the affirmative, they next try to persuade her to return. Every argument is used, in many cases combined with threats against her seducer, and the intermediaries often succeed. But she must never go back without presents, "to dry with fire the water that has entered the marriage." Her husband invites all his fellow-villagers to his house to a ceremony which is said "to uproot the house [of trouble]." The singers are in attendance and sing in succession many kusiut songs, followed by susook songs, and to each the owner of the song dances, but since the supernatural beings are not present, the affair is of a non-sacred nature. The goods received from the family of the erring wife are distributed and the matter is at an end. Those who persuaded the wife to return are especially rewarded. 837 [796] [431]

If the faithless wife should refuse to return, or if she should bear a child to her lover, reconciliation is not possible. Then it is incumbent on the woman's relatives to return to the husband as much goods as he has expended, with additions if they wish to uphold their own reputation. If the husband is clearly to blame, or if he is the deserting partner, his wife's family are not required to return the gifts they have received. There is no judicial tribunal of any kind, the force of public opinion alone impels restitution if the offender wishes to maintain his reputation in the community. Acting on this principle, the relatives of a deserted wife sometimes restore to her husband's family the presents they have received, thereby demonstrating their nobility and at the same time shaming the offender. 586 837 [626]

Formerly there was an elaborate ceremony to shame the [796] [626]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

586
626
837
796

husband or wife who destroyed a marriage by deserting his, or her, partner for a lover. One informant, aged about seventy, twice took part in this rite when a young man, but probably did not know the full details of it. He stated that it followed a divorce of two persons who had been married with full ceremony, whereas another, slightly younger informant, who remembered having seen the ceremony once when a mere lad, believed that it was only in the families of commoners. It appears certain that the rite has not been practised since about 1880, consequently there is an element of doubt as to the actual details, and even as to whether it was an affair of chiefs or commoners. It is probable that it was among the former.

When a woman deserted her husband one of the leading chiefs would take this opportunity of giving a ceremony of the type known as łłaiyäkam.[10] After consulting with his fellows to ensure that no one had any objections, and rarely including the deserted husband, he summoned the singers to his house. He would tell them his plans, and they would prepare the songs for the occasion. Five or six were always composed, with an effort to include as many foul remarks and allusions as possible, particularly with regard to the organs of the woman and her lover.

The singers spent about a week composing the songs, and meanwhile the chief who was giving the ceremony prepared food and made other necessary arrangements. When these were ready, the donor invited to his house all the members of the sisaok and kusiut societies for a rehearsal. The singers sang over the airs for the instruction of the guests. They were always worded as if it were the deserted husband speaking in foul terms of his ex-wife. The theme of one was:

"My wife has pudenda like those of a black bear."

The guests joined in the singing and also supplied foul themes by calling out observations about the organs of women in general, and of the deserting wife in particular. The singers

[10] The relation of this to the a'alk dance of the same name is obscure, cf. I, p. 279.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tried to incorporate as many of these as possible, so that the rite soon became a chorus of obscenities. The songs were sung and resung until all present were familiar with them, then the donor of the rite distributed food and all departed. 586 626 837 796

The following afternoon everyone, including those uninitiated into either society, were invited to the donor's house. Probably the only absentees from the village were the deserting wife and her lover, while guests from neighbouring settlements were often in attendance. On this occasion, for the first time, the deserted husband used to take the leading part. When the singers struck up the tune of the first song, he used to appear, supported by four or five assistants. His face was blackened with soot, he wore a lynx-skin belt, and above his head was fashioned some insulting object, usually a representation of the female organs made of wood, cedar-bark and berries, as realistic as possible. As the singers sang, aided by those who had learnt the songs on the previous day, the husband danced, moving his body so that the ornament on top of his head was shaken suggestively. Meanwhile the spectators kept calling out filthy epithets of any kind on his ex-wife and her lover. Sometimes the dancer was able to insert some obscene remarks into the display. On one occasion, for example, he pulled some lynx fur from his belt and threw it in the face of a Täl·io man who happened to be present, and who had once seduced a married woman and accordingly been the butt of a similar rite, with the remark: [302] [292]

"All Täl·io women have hairy pudenda like that."

The guests were invited to suggest foul nick-names for the man with whom the dancer's wife had eloped. One of these was adopted by general agreement of opinion, and the man was commonly called by it henceforth. Two names so created were: [551]

Skulsos, "The One Whose Face is Wrinkled like a Woman's Organs," and, Emoisaik, "The One Who Cohabited Publicly."

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

586 One very old man is still, 1923, commonly called by this 626 last designation, much to his annoyance.

When the songs had been sung, each accompanied by the ● 837 dancing of the deserted husband, the donor of the ceremony
796 distributed food and the guests departed. The only advantage [556] to the giver of the rite was that it enabled him to show his wealth in an apparently disinterested fashion by gifts of food. Usually he was a friend of the aggrieved husband.

When a husband deserted his wife, the other women of the village used to perform an exactly similar ceremony. The same type of songs were composed, and during their singing the deserted wife used to dance, wearing above her head [292] representations of a penis and testicles. By means of hidden strings she was able to cause the former to become erect.

On other occasions the ceremony was varied by an announcer asking the offended party about the appearance of the deserter. There followed a minute and highly coloured description about the unpleasantness of his genital organs, a description which was swiftly incorporated into the songs.

It can be taken as a matter of course that the above description is little more than an outline of the Bella Coola ceremony of shaming. In spite of its deficiencies, it is important, as evidence of the former sentiment with regard to divorce. Obscene though the ceremony must have been, both in acting and in the free use of personalities, it must have been a powerful deterrent to divorce.[11] Indeed it would be difficult to imagine a stronger one in a community where a man's position is judged by public opinion and where his greatest aversion is to public ridicule. It is unfortunate that we shall probably never know whether the rite was associated with chiefs or commoners.

CEREMONIAL MARRIAGE

588
556 Since marriage gains much of its importance from the complicated business transactions between the two families, with [848] [11] A similar rite was occasionally carried out for unmarried mothers.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

blankets" for the child. The advantages to the donors were that they had an opportunity of showing their dignity, and it would always be a mark of pride for the child to be able to boast of the way in which she had been "held." 556 608 858

Ceremonial marriage clearly demonstrates two strong Bella Coola characteristics; namely, the desire publicly to enter into financial undertakings to demonstrate the wealth of the contracting party, and the desire to increase the prestige of children by means of this wealth expended indirectly on their behalf.

EXTRA-MARITAL RELATIONS

Although the Bella Coola do not regard marriage primarily as a means of regulating relations between the sexes, yet the connection between the two is sufficiently close to warrant description in this chapter. A man considers intercourse as one of the normal phenomena of life: by marrying he has exclusive rights to his wife, but few moral restraints deter him from anyone else to whom he can gain access without infringing the prerogatives of some other husband. Moreover, sexual intercourse is not regarded solely as a gratification of desires; it has a significance which can be described, not inaptly, as holy. As already explained, two favourite methods of obtaining success in any undertaking are by preserving lengthy continence or by observing ceremonial chastity. If a young unmarried man or widower should wish to make use of this latter means, he is compelled to have relations with a woman to whom he has no just claims. This is universally recognized, nor is there the slightest odium attached to the man. The only essential is that he neither violate another's wife, nor force a young girl against her will. 581 831 837

At the present time there is great laxity in Bella Coola, a condition which makes it difficult to judge the state of affairs in former times. Every effort was made to obtain satisfactory evidence, and the following was verified and re-verified with the older men. [128]

A wife, properly married with full ceremony, was usually 837 839

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

837 [839] 622 836 faithful and cases of rape were either unknown or very rare. The daughters of chiefs, too, were guarded with great care and any effort to seduce one of them would be punished by her father. The parents of a girl used to watch her carefully, and the opportunity for immorality was not great in the days when everyone went to bed at sundown except on the occasion of a ceremonial dance. As one informant described it:

"The daughters of chiefs used to be looked after as if they were in boxes, cherished and guarded by their parents and relatives. No one would dream of molesting them. And a chief's daughter used to be proud and look after herself. Nowadays, girls don't care, and everything has become degraded."

[586] If the daughter of a chief did demean herself, the parents lost interest in her, as one who was spoilt. It was always assumed that a girl of rank was a virgin at marriage, and if it was discovered that she had been living an immoral life, her husband in many cases returned her in disgrace to her parents who, equally shamed, were expected to send back to him the goods he had expended for their daughter. Loss of virtue was 622 848 judged only from indirect information. If the daughter of a chief was found pregnant before marriage, she was almost ostracized by her family. No ceremonial marriage could be arranged for her, and the child could not be cleansed from the stigma of illegitimacy.

836 567 On the other hand, it appears certain that there was a good deal of intercourse in the old days between chiefs and slave women, or even between slaves and the daughters of chiefs. [431] In the latter case the woman was often cast aside by her relatives though they sometimes yielded to the inevitable and tried to wash away the disgrace with gifts. At the same time, public opinion was unfavourable to a man who consorted with many women, or to a woman who allowed herself to be at the disposal of many men. Any regular union of masters with their slave women for the deliberate purpose of having children was unknown. A girl's consent was always necessary, given either personally or through an intermediary. Even a chief hesitated

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

One." An informant, wishing to emphasize the care lavished on this being, pointed to a photograph from an illustrated paper of Princess Mary, Viscountess Lascelles, bending over her infant. He remarked that this was the kind of attention shown by Xemxemälotla to his charge. 776 *

Of slightly greater importance is the hermaphrodite, Sgunts. He resides in the land above, and spends most of his time outside the walls of Nusmät·a, acting as guardian to a number of young girls, the children of various supernatural beings. On many occasions he has descended to this world and has been seen by mortals, who recognize him by his peculiar nasal voice, intermediate between that of a man and a woman. It is supposed that human hermaphrodites have been affected in some mysterious way by their supernatural prototype. 776 * 838 ● 838

Several informants stated that they had heard of hermaphrodites among other tribes, and thought that such existed among their own people in early times, but the term is usually applied, without physiological significance, to two types of individual supposedly affected by Sgunts. Several cases are alleged of a male infant changing to a female on being washed and brought into the house. One of these, a girl about twelve years of age, was living in Bella Coola in 1923. The basis for these accounts is certainly error concerning the sex of a new-born child. The second class consists of those who desire to perform the work of the opposite sex. For example, if a boy shows an aptitude for woman's work, the parents, realizing that he wants to be a girl, dress and treat him accordingly. One informant knew of a Kimsquit boy, two Bella Bella, and several Kitimat to whom this had occurred. Henceforth they dressed as women, but in due course they took wives whom they helped in all feminine tasks. Another informant knew of two cases of the kind in which the men did not marry and were believed to have an aversion to women. One instance is known of a Kitimat woman who, having assumed man's costume and occupations, refused either to marry or to have anything to do with her own sex. Another case is of a Carrier 171 838

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

838 woman who dressed as a man and used to hunt successfully,
[171] though she was married. Such practices are said to have been not uncommon among the Haida. The women were considered bold and independent, but the Bella Coola of today know little *[776] about them, and are not even certain that Sqants is responsible for a female assuming the actions of a male. It will be readily understood that he is not regarded with much awe, nor does he influence their daily lives.

*776 Another supernatural being, uninfluential though resident [822] upon earth, is Echo, Setsaläni, "The Voice Repeater." The Bella Coola regard him as a male being, in human form, and recognize his presence whenever sounds reverberate. He figures in mythology, occasionally appears as a masked figure at [575] kusiut or susaok dances, but has neither helped nor harmed human beings for so many generations that he is accordingly neglected.

*776 A supernatural being from whom many Bella Coola have 787 had unpleasant visitations is Sllumsila, the cause of nightmares.
828 He is a man-like creature with black face and an enormous head which he constantly scratches. His home is in Nusmät·a, but he frequently descends to this world and frightens sleepers. If a person scratches his head while asleep it is because he has just seen Sllumsila doing so, and if he walks in his sleep it is to escape this supernatural visitor. A sleep-walker is usually aroused by having a bucket of water thrown over him. A [751] person frequently troubled by Sllumsila can avoid him by painting a black circle around each eye before going to sleep.

*776 With the exception of Älquntäm, the supernatural beings thus far described play little part in the lives of the Bella Coola. They believe in their existence, but do not expect to meet them, and do not believe that they exercise much influence on the course of their daily life. Supernatural beings of this ineffective type are exceptional. A man goes into remote parts of the 781 mountains, or even into little frequented areas around his
*776 village, with mingled fear lest he encounter an actively malicious being, and hope that he may meet a benevolent one. More-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The kusiut dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this rite is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his tally post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Ałquntärn is uncertain. After the termination of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy abstin-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[825] Sulukst: Mountain on west side of the Kimsquit River.
susloʼtʼtskwa·kwa: One of the river sculpins.
susukmis: To gather cedar-bark.
Sximäna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning Sutäl: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Sulkulta, "Winter Trail": Locality, perhaps village, on the upper Kimsquit River.
[101] Sutshmy: Generic name of the inhabitants of the Dean valley.
Suxwalk: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
Swaäkis: One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Swaky: Mountain at Kimsquit which was in human form in the beginning of time.
swaläxmdimut: Meeting of the senior supernatural beings to discuss ceremonial matters at the winter solstice.
swalxta: Provender provided by the supreme god for the first settlers in the beginning of time.
swaʼxwa: Mud.
sxaiäx: Person or object which is taboo.
Sxaiaxwax: Evil supernatural being.
Sgaiahwa, "Maker of Good Weather": Supernatural name of dog salmon. sxäkmem gdi mäns: Term of opprobrium applied to a child whose father drove away his mother.
sgäksta: Sorcerer's box.
Sxa·hutsmän·a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sgän: Female lover, especially a paramour.
sgäxm: Male lover.
Sgaḃ·tl: One of the first women to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
sgem: The bursting forth of light.
[785] sxetsta: Ceremonial chastity.
[831] sxetstadjut: The state of practising ceremonial chastity.
sxetstanai: Power engendered by ceremonial chastity.
sgek: 1—Sorcerer.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sgekgädjutän·a: Part of a peculiar repository.
sxim: Cedar-bark cord.
Sximäna: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Sximsximult: Immoral supernatural woman.
gxʼlʼ: Afterbirth.
Sgiyutän·a: Chief of the dogs in the beginning of time.
[838] Sgunts: 1—Hermaphrodite, a supernatural being.
2—Man who performs woman's work.
[761] sxumänots kkʼ: Life, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
[821] Sukʼlat, South Wind: A supernatural being.
[805] Sulkl, "Angry Moon": First moon after the winter solstice.
sxlo·xʼ: Poisonous supernatural creature that travels with the War-Party of the Tides.
sxlanak: "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts. The word has two meanings:
[532] 1—Carved human figure set up by a shaman near the vessel of grease which is thrown on a fire.
2—Nickname bestowed on a man.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

blankets" for the child. The advantages to the donors were that they had an opportunity of showing their dignity, and it would always be a mark of pride for the child to be able to boast of the way in which she had been "held." 556 608 858

Ceremonial marriage clearly demonstrates two strong Bella Coola characteristics; namely, the desire publicly to enter into financial undertakings to demonstrate the wealth of the contracting party, and the desire to increase the prestige of children by means of this wealth expended indirectly on their behalf.

EXTRA-MARITAL RELATIONS

Although the Bella Coola do not regard marriage primarily as a means of regulating relations between the sexes, yet the connection between the two is sufficiently close to warrant description in this chapter. A man considers intercourse as one of the normal phenomena of life: by marrying he has exclusive rights to his wife, but few moral restraints deter him from anyone else to whom he can gain access without infringing the prerogatives of some other husband. Moreover, sexual intercourse is not regarded solely as a gratification of desires; it has a significance which can be described, not inaptly, as holy. As already explained, two favourite methods of obtaining success in any undertaking are by preserving lengthy continence or by observing ceremonial chastity. If a young unmarried man or widower should wish to make use of this latter means, he is compelled to have relations with a woman to whom he has no just claims. This is universally recognized, nor is there the slightest odium attached to the man. The only essential is that he neither violate another's wife, nor force a young girl against her will. 581 831 837

At the present time there is great laxity in Bella Coola, a condition which makes it difficult to judge the state of affairs in former times. Every effort was made to obtain satisfactory evidence, and the following was verified and re-verified with the older men. [128]

A wife, properly married with full ceremony, was usually 837 839

837 faithful and cases of rape were either unknown or very rare.
[839] The daughters of chiefs, too, were guarded with great care and 622 any effort to seduce one of them would be punished by her 836 father. The parents of a girl used to watch her carefully, and the opportunity for immorality was not great in the days when everyone went to bed at sundown except on the occasion of a ceremonial dance. As one informant described it:

"The daughters of chiefs used to be looked after as if they were in boxes, cherished and guarded by their parents and relatives. No one would dream of molesting them. And a chief's daughter used to be proud and look after herself. Nowadays, girls don't care, and everything has become degraded."

If the daughter of a chief did demean herself, the parents [586] lost interest in her, as one who was spoilt. It was always assumed that a girl of rank was a virgin at marriage, and if it was discovered that she had been living an immoral life, her husband in many cases returned her in disgrace to her parents who, equally shamed, were expected to send back to him the goods he had expended for their daughter. Loss of virtue was
622 judged only from indirect information. If the daughter of a 848 chief was found pregnant before marriage, she was almost ostracized by her family. No ceremonial marriage could be arranged for her, and the child could not be cleansed from the stigma of illegitimacy.

836 On the other hand, it appears certain that there was a good
567 deal of intercourse in the old days between chiefs and slave women, or even between slaves and the daughters of chiefs.
[431] In the latter case the woman was often cast aside by her relatives though they sometimes yielded to the inevitable and tried to wash away the disgrace with gifts. At the same time, public opinion was unfavourable to a man who consorted with many women, or to a woman who allowed herself to be at the disposal of many men. Any regular union of masters with their slave women for the deliberate purpose of having children was unknown. A girl's consent was always necessary, given either personally or through an intermediary. Even a chief hesitated

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to force his attentions on a slave woman if she objected, 836
although her refusal would be most unusual on account of his [567] prestige. There were no professional prostitutes; a man [548] usually gave a small present to a girl from whom he had received favours, and she was expected to give him a little, dainty basket filled with undyed cedar-bark to use as a sponge. Such relations appear always to have been of common occurrence. Today, as formerly, a man's morality is considered to 836
be his own affair; laxity may lower his prestige, but no law is 522
broken, and his neighbours laugh and chaff him about it. In fact, sexual matters are discussed with the greatest freedom, and a person who has been caught is mocked mercilessly. When visiting a foreign tribe, a man sometimes lives with a [648]
woman and, on parting, composes and sings a song describing her charms. One man did this after living with a Kitlobe woman, and on his return to Bella Coola found that some of his fellows had learnt it in some unexplained manner; they used to sing it to him, much to their amusement, in part to his own, and somewhat to the annoyance of his wife. This perhaps illustrates rather clearly the attitude of the Bella Coola to an infraction of morality—where no marriage rite has been broken; it is amusing rather than disgusting. There 836 are no times when the moral code ceases to function. At pot-
latches, and also at kusiut dances, there appears always to [834] have been a certain amount of laxity, although this was strictly prohibited within the house where the ceremony was taking place. Such behaviour is due to the excitement and stimulus of a large gathering, not to anything connected with the rites themselves.

Perverted sexual desires, like other matters connected with 839
the relations of the sexes, are regarded as concerning the individual alone. Sodomy appears to be unknown. Intercourse 836
by pre-adolescents is held to be disgusting, but carries with it no social ostracism. Incestuous union, however, is mildly anti- 835 social; it exposes the offender to secret contempt, but does not interfere with his attainment of whatever position his wealth 556

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 while the relatives are preparing the body for disposal. For a child, these services are performed by the parents; for a married man whose parents are dead, by his brothers and other kindred; for a married woman, by her husband or the members of her own family. If she has borne no children, it is customary for her relatives to carry out the funeral rites, especially if she has been many times rebought from her husband. If such repayment has not been made, it is considered correct for a husband to bury his wife, although it is a point of honour for her relatives to reimburse him later for his expenditure. On the other hand, when children have been born and financial assistance mutually given and received several times, it is proper for the husband to perform the funeral rites, although he may receive assistance from his wife's kinsmen. There is no rigid ruling on the point, but bickerings seldom occur in connection with disposal of the dead. Members of the ancestral family are ready to assist in every case, both on account of the disgrace that would follow a niggardly funeral, and also as a means of displaying their wealth. [614] [556]

The first essential is to wash the body, a rite performed by men for a man, by women for a woman. It is immaterial who does this though some of the relatives usually volunteer. Neither husband nor wife touches a dead consort, though it is said that long ago a man would hold intercourse with a deceased wife to indicate his excessive grief. The most influential member of the immediate family takes the lead in the various necessary acts, although there is always endless discussion and advice from members of the ancestral family and others interested. A nose-ring is placed in the septum of the corpse; if this is omitted, the body will not be able to dissolve into its elements but will range the earth as a walking phantom, causing injury to anyone who observes it. If the deceased has just eaten some of the first run of spring salmon or olachen, a shaman washes out his mouth with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark which he throws into the river. The essence of the salmon is thus extracted from the body; if [839] [301] [975] [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

human wearer belongs to a sphere differing from that of supernatural animals and is dangerous to them. Consequently, if worn clothing be thrown on a fire it repels unpleasant visitors. Other powerful protections are false hellebore, and smoked salmon roe. A wise hunter always carries these and if he sees a dangerous creature such as a smnuq, he chews the two together and spits them towards the peril. Needless to say, if a kindly animal is seen, the hunter does not drive it away by these methods. Why false hellebore should be so effective is a matter of wonder to the Bella Coola themselves, for as a rule it is the human essence attached to objects which gives them their strength over the supernatural. Thus the most powerful of all charms are pads that have been used by women during their menses. If a woman travels on the ocean she is careful to carry some of them with her ready to repel any danger from the supernatural water beings.[a]

776* 789 [824] [824] [841]

The manner in which the Bella Coola regard mythical animals and other evidences of the supernatural is illustrated by the following practice. Hunters always want to know the direction of the wind, and when the breeze is too slight to be discernible they blow upwards a small amount of eagle down, which is so light that the faintest breath of air will bear it down wind. What the logical white man considers a natural phenomenon, appears to the Bella Coola as miraculous; eagle down, stripped from the dead bird by human hands and stored for some time within a house, has become so humanized that it can conquer supernatural powers to indicate the direction of the wind.

776* 789 821 [224]

The mythical monsters already described are not the only animals regarded as supernatural by the Bella Coola. They believe that in the beginning Alquntăm created men and beasts at the same time and in the same place, giving the former the greater share of power, but not exiling the latter to a different plane of existence. In those early days, the semi-supernatural

776* 825 773

[a] This matter will be described more fully in connection with Magic; see vol. I, chap. xx.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

concerning the danger of near approach to this creature: 539

Kwilais was a man of mixed lineage, Kimsquit and Pas, near 776 Newitte. With several companions he was gathering berries when he 825 stepped into a hole and felt numerous tiny creatures crawling over his 755 legs. Looking down, he saw that they were small snakes, that had just been hatched from a Mother of Snakes. He fled, terrified, pursued by the reptiles, which he managed to keep off to some extent by brushing [789] behind him a branch of spiny swamp gooseberry, a known deterrent. When he had out-distanced the snakes he called his companions, told them of his adventure, and returned home. There he repeated the tale. Though Kwilais did not know it, many of the snakes had succeeded in entering his stomach. Presently he began to swell; his body became [753] larger and larger until he was in danger of bursting. The reptiles within were breeding rapidly. Luckily, one of his fellow villagers knew the proper remedy. A raised bed was made for the sufferer about five feet from the ground where Kwilais stretched himself on a number of thorny branches, while his friends built a fire of devil's club and swamp gooseberry twigs so that he was fumigated in the smoke. Then, to give greater potency, they cast on the flames soiled clothing and pounded [841] cedar-bark pads stained with menstrual blood; even this was of no avail, so finally a woman squeezed out into a vessel some of her menstrual blood which Kwilais drank. This killed the snakes. The patient began to vomit, emitting a mass of wriggling serpents, and at once began to grow thinner, soon regaining his normal condition. Had he not been able to eject the reptiles, he would have died.

Kwilais was not the only one to have this unpleasant experience. Many others have suffered in the same way, but in no case has anyone been able to feel the snakes at the actual place or time of entry.

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the power pos- 825 sessed by animals are clearly shown by their attitude with 775 regard to killing them. Man is immortal, so are animals. 224
Alqantēm decreed that beasts and birds should serve as food for mankind, but it is only their clothing, their worthless "blanket of flesh," as the Bella Coola express it, which they give to hunters. In the autumn leaves appear to die, but every spring they are reborn. Similarly, when an animal is slain, it merely discards its visible self while its spirit* ascends [774]

*Kwatsmaik, see vol. I, p. 98.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

There now remains only the necessity of removing from the house itself the supernatural power with which it is firmly believed to have been impregnated throughout the many weeks of the ceremony. Should this not be done, it would be so strong that only sisesk could thenceforth live in it, and no kusiut rite could be performed therein. One of the senior chiefs, acting on X's behalf, requests as many siki as are present to go to the back-room. At the same time a drum is beaten slowly. The siki call out loudly, in unison, hoip four times. The whistles sound from the back-room with ever-lessening intensity, as if the supernatural being, whose voice they are, were going away. It is said that this practice has been comparatively recently adopted from Rivers Inlet: there used to be nothing of the kind. The siki re-emerge, and one of them stands behind the fire with his stick which he beats on the floor and calls on the audience to shout with him, "hi . . . ." This is done four times. It serves to purify the house from the supernatural power with which it has been saturated. The people then disperse, without food.

Goods from the general store are reserved to pay these men for their services, and also for cleansing the initiates from the powers with which they have been imbued, a rite that takes place the following morning in the presence of several siki alone. The initiates are brought from the back-room and seated in a close circle between the door and the fire.* A foreign siki is chosen by X to perform the actual cleansing rite. He has been asked beforehand and has come provided with a long pole and some soiled clothing. It is immaterial whose this is, provided that it has been in contact with a human body; the most potent articles are catamenial cedar-bark pads.

The siki covers the young men with a large cedar-bark mat. Then he fastens the clothing or pads to his pole and holds the end in the fire until they are smouldering. Then he swings it four times over the heads of the initiates and throws the stick

*Behind the fire according to some informants.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a man, ux-unaisa, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience 424 to river taboos. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it 463 has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this func- 551 tion. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the valid- 693 ation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but [793] non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name ux-unaisa has always been able to perform his duties.

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been en- 784 forced concerning the river: No refuse may be thrown in, 825 otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the 226 same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them [515] from seeing the route. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes 841 is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the [562] fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the bank, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Then no freshly hewn planks can be set afloat, and even a canoe which has just been completed [502] must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at [765] the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the 688
salmon and it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the 693 offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight infringements, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river.
The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium,
[301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first
discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789
shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841
unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing [773] everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [825] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881
in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead,
this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581 regard the married state as the normal condition of man. 589 Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those [732] crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581
and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous [462]
small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most [858] important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 comes and sits on the coffin during every funeral, seeking further victims. Death has so contaminated a widow or widower 783 that she or he will fall an easy prey unless ceremonially puri-
[776] fied. No special acts are carried out between interment and the burning of goods four days later, but the following four days must be spent in a small shelter of branches behind the village, hidden from sight in the forest. Within this the man or woman lies on the ground with legs close together and bent [841] at the knees, in the same position as a girl during the four days after her first menstruation. A male friend accompanies a widower; a female, a widow. This companion keeps a fire burning and administers to the comfort of the patient, for such a bereaved person is considered to be. Every evening the two return home and leave again the following morning. On one of these days, the companion scours the woods east of the village to find four spruce saplings growing within sight of each other in an east to west direction. To this place he leads the survivor on the morning after the fourth day of concealment[11] in the shelter. He bends down the top of the western sapling and ties it into a loop with a rope composed of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. The widower, or widow, crawls through this opening to the east and then makes a circle, sunwise, around the sapling. Passing to the next one, the same procedure is repeated, and so in succession for the third and fourth, each being left tied into a loop. There are at least two variations in this rite: Instead of passing through four saplings, some individuals choose to crawl four times through a single one, with a sunwise circuit intervening in every case. If the survivor be a member of a family in which it is customary to use four saplings, and if the friend cannot find four in proper alignment, he cuts a number of spruce branches and sets them upright, butts in the ground, leaving a small hole between them. Four sets of these are arranged, as substitutes for four saplings, and the crawling through takes [11]There is variation in the exact time for this rite. Some individuals practise it on the fifth day after death and omit the waiting in the shelter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänelp or walilikwätsälätsäläts, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqus or a sisiutl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qokän·i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wikwanutl, who was also called O'miätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Teopinätl when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized; from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qokän·i.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 and heard her utter the name that was to be his, as a shaman,
* 787 Nitsumdimut. He began to shake his hands as if dancing, for he was too feeble to do more, and began to sing the song. His mother at once called in the singers who listened, learning it for future use. The man is firmly convinced that if his mother had not thus called in the singers so speedily he would, after four days, have received another vision, and with it real shamanistic power. As it is, he is a shaman, since he was cured when at the point of death by Ṭlitcäplitän-a and received a name and song from her, but he is unable himself to effect cures. As soon as the singers had departed, his mother at once began to make for him a collar formed of alternate bands of dyed, and [292] undyed, cedar-bark. This is the distinctive decoration worn constantly by a shaman for a certain period after receiving his powers, and at all times when dancing. Within a few days all the inhabitants of the village were called in and the man's [553] family distributed presents, thus validating his shamanistic
[554] name. Such presents are not returnable; "they have become nothing" for the designation. Thus accredited, a shaman is in a position to start curing, if his song has contained a reference to a basin, otherwise, as in the present case, he is merely a shaman in a social sense, not professionally. There is thought to be actually within the new shaman's body, some peculiar [292] power which is too potent to allow him to mix with others. Accordingly he wears the distinctive collar, which serves as a [841] warning to menstruating women and others who are unclean to remain at a distance, and he spends much of his time alone in the forest. This continues until the next kusiut dance season when the coming to him of a yeux (II, p. 6) frees him from restraint, since the one supernatural power drives out the other. If the shaman himself is unwilling to have a yeux, it is sufficient if one comes to a son, or other near relative.

A shaman who has been told by his supernatural visitor to use a basin instructs a carpenter to make one for him. The design depends either on the owner's wish, or on that of his benefactor if the latter has decreed specifically.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

them renders it more likely that they will grant his requests. 756*
Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites: 782

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without voiding from his body the first salmon or olachen of the season (I, p. 436). [764]

(2) Asking assistance for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. 192). [556]

(3) Request for assistance before starting on a journey, by puffing eagle down into the air (I, p. 106). [484]

(4) Request for aid by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Mesatche Nose and Kwatna (I, p. 109).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus caused illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally post, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans. 756* [761] [264] [178] [755]

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob- 756* 783 841

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*.756 jects have power over shamans. A shaman must never sleep 783 beside his wife during her menses, must never eat food prepared by a menstruating woman, by one who has recently ●.841 washed a new-born infant, by a girl during the period of seclusion following puberty, or by a widow or widower during the year that follows the death of his partner. If a shaman's nose bleeds when he is dancing it is because a menstruating woman is present in the house; he at once asks the offender to withdraw, after which the bleeding stops. Moreover, he must [755] never cure a woman during her periods. A wise shaman prac-[785] tises ceremonial chastity frequently. In view of the lack of cleanliness ascribed to menstrual blood, it is perhaps surprising that a woman can become a shaman while still of child-bearing age. This is rare, and only occurs when a woman is the last survivor of a family. The Bella Coola themselves consider it to be peculiar, only explicable on the ground that anything is possible to the supernatural beings, even the disregarding of feminine "uncleanness." Usually, female shamans are past the age of child-bearing; if not, they observe absolute chastity.

*756 Even inadvertent breaking of one of these rules causes death. This is not regarded as a punishment inflicted by 761 Ṭlitcāplilān·a; it is merely the inevitable consequence of the supernatural power within the shaman having come in contact with what is not clean. As a shaman is considered to be immune against all ordinary ailments, his death is always attributed to the breaking of a taboo. Frequently the death of a shaman is accompanied by some convulsion of nature. One female shaman, for example, told the people of her village to keep their children within doors, since a supernatural being was coming for her. Soon it became dark; there were four loud claps of thunder, at the fourth of which she fell dead.

539 The following was related as an instance of the danger to *756 a shaman of coming in contact with an unclean woman.

[783] The son of the first man to come to earth at Nulleax was, like his [841] father, named Dudusongʷ. One April he and his wife went upstream to [787] Xwantlo, a place in the country of the Carriers where milk-weed is plen-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tiful, of which they planned to collect a supply. In the course of their journey Dudusongʷ' saw a man who, when he drew near, turned into a piece of hanging moss. A little later he again saw a figure, but on approaching it became a tree. Dudusongʷ' and his wife walked on and presently the former once more beheld a man; this time the apparition changed to a fir tree. It was evident to Dudusongʷ' that a supernatural being had manifested itself to him, and he told his wife that they must return. On reaching home he related his experience and gave a shaman's dance. 539 756* 787

From this experience he had received the power of curing. He could see disease when it was invisible to all others, and could summon it to himself, where it was harmless, thus restoring the patient to health. He made for himself a rattle, shaped like a bird; this had the ability of dancing of its own accord, and would catch people's hair in its opening and closing beak. The sick were brought to Dudusongʷ' from all over the valley. One day he travelled by canoe down to Sinxl where he found many of the villagers seriously ill. His arrival was quite fortuitous, for he was unaware of the epidemic that was raging. The inhabitants sought his help, so he landed and cured them. He entered the house of a woman who claimed to be ill, and took the sickness upon himself, but no sooner had he left than he fell down stricken. He demanded to be taken home in his canoe, but he only lived two days after his return. The woman had been in pain from her menses; it was this that he had taken upon himself and caused his death. 539 756* [761] [783] [841]

In consequence of the danger attached to the vocation, many people try to avoid becoming shamans, though if Ťlitcäplilän·a should appear to a man when ill, he cannot escape the power. The usual method of prevention is for a man to hold intercourse with his wife from below, so that her flesh, impure through its liability to menses, can form a barrier to the coming of supernatural power. One who wishes to escape always sleeps on the left of his wife, whereas if he is seeking shaman's power he sleeps on the right. Another method of avoidance is to use the hole in the floor which serves as exit and entrance to the house of a girl secluded following adolescence. 756* [787] [833] [513]

Since the power of a shaman is obtained by a personal experience, and lacks both form and substance, it cannot be transmitted and disappears at the owner's death. As has been

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet 784 and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe.

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

262
Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange 562 the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair.

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do [841] [826] so would cause a difficult delivery.

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon [844] until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the [845] fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded.

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning 224 if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is [226] customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when [264] nearing the hunting or fishing-ground.

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a [171] custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola.

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not [825] to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down [753] each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness.

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull [732] or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over-

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

751 Women wear tight anklets 'to prevent the calves of their legs from slipping down.' During their monthly 641 periods women place soft cedar-bark in the vagina. The bark is afterwards 624 burnt in the woods. The smoke of this fire is believed to be poisonous.

It is evident that the culture of the Bilqula is very greatly influenced 177 by that of the Kwakiutl. The secret societies and the potlatch ceremonies 551 are almost a copy of those of the Heiltsuk'. This influence has been so 556 deep that names of even deities and of the mythical ancestors of certain 575 gentes are purely Kwakiutl words, or have at least Kwakiutl endings. Thus 776 the name Aiumkl'likya (see p. 413) is purely Kwakiutl, meaning 'good all 771 over the world.' K'ōmk'omkl'likya is also a Kwakiutl word, meaning 'the rich one of the world.' The chief's name, Mā'lakyilatl (see p. 409) belongs to the same class of Kwakiutl names. On the other hand, the religious ideas of the Bilqula are very curiously developed, and apparently but slightly influenced by their neighbours. The whole Masmasalā'niq tradition is peculiar to them, but has been partly adopted by the Awiky'- ō'noq, with whom the Bilqula have intermarried.

[pp. 425-449 not processed]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

IT was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white man seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the four Mesmesälänux acting on the behest of Älquntäm. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. Most individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Älquntäm has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the feet of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled assistants can usually rotate a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes
846 various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring,
237 and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh
853 olachen. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three
862 years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deterred by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recom-
846 menced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

845 Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as remnants of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

847 In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant
[848] often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do [195] so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term ixwotl, applied to such an one, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that 842 a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is sxaiäx, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 783

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one foetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [787] [756] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

box during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kälotl had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Kus-tsus placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kälotl tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Kus-tsus washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kälotl to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 832

This medicine can be made only by a skilful carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 833

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 886 825

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 842 789

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 789 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex

If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

843 789 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)

(1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 757 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk

Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 789 825 To Cause Energy

Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:

"Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 825 886 To Cause Long Life

Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:

"May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.

The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so ensnared are killed.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
[824] kat'nlh: Tree, probably birch.
Kalaskt': One of the first men to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
Kaliahs: One of the first men to settle at Snulili in the beginning of time.
Kalhm: Bella Bella woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Kalul: Kimsquit man.
[222] Kalqum: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[262] kalqum: The gathering of fern root for food.
Kalqmakmm: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Ka'lax-a: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[585] kalmhlhmsta: Public oration, previous to marriage, of the bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[842] kalqwm: Ritual on the day before a marriage, including the oration of myths by the bride's relatives, the choosing of assistants, and the singing of songs of all kinds.
[576] Kamai-ts: 1—Mysterious supernatural woman.
2—"Please," or "Thank You," a word implying benison.
*Kamalsmq*w*:* 1—One of the first men to settle at Nulkax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nusdalst in the beginning of time.
3—Name of the first sky that fell in the beginning of time.
Kamalslhl: Lazy supernatural beings who accompanied Nookymm.
Kamalqwax: Man mentioned in an origin myth of Alqalaxl.
Kamatslaks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
*Kamatsemq*w*:* House brought to earth by first settlers at Nusdalst in the beginning of time.
[824] kamk': Kelp.
[227] kamola: Cod hook.
kamut: Termination.
[824] kanan-i: 1—Shelf fungus.
2—Kusiut dance in which a shelf fungus is used.
Kanilks: One of the first women to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
kan-imut: Ceremonial error.
Kamaia: Herald of a Tal-is chief in the beginning of time.
kanhas: Trap.
Kannalaam: 1—Daughter of the first settlers at Sitlia in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of Ojmai, one of the first settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[264] kaolikta: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
Kaospoklamm: One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
Kawikudjan-a: Supernatural berry-picker resident in the land of ghosts.
[825] kajai: 1—Hump-back salmon.
2—Convex transverse beam near front and rear of house.
3—Mountain on the Dean River.
Kapaix: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Kastna: Man mentioned in an ancient story of Raven.
[756] kasiut: The seeking for shaman's power by a lad.
[825] kasmia: Golden eagle.
kathm: Top, toy.
[524]

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)900 NEB Bellacoola NEB

corner of the house. He prevents those who are not initiated in the secrets of the kt'sint from approaching the house. The Sutsu'q is a fabulous monster, the peculiarities of which are described in a number of traditions (see pp. 83 ff.). S'ants.a'mun.a'k (Plate VII, Figs. 12 and 13) is a boy who performs kt'sint dances all the time. When the deities resolve to send a new dance down to our world, it is conveyed by S'ants.a'mun.a'k. It is the office of another deity to sing, accompanying the kt'sint dances of the gods (Plate VII, Fig. 3). Anuqst'o'tsem is a deity in regard to whose functions I have not been able to obtain detailed information. It is said that he intervenes on behalf of man when Sunx and Ats.k'untx'm threaten to punish him. There are two goddesses in the house who also intervene in favor of man when the principal deities threaten him with death and sickness. Their names are Sutsma'sa (Plate VII, Fig. 9) and Ats.ila'sxa (Plate VII, Figs. 10 and 11). They wake man after sleep. Without their help, nobody could wake from sleep. Ats.ila'sxa is at the same time the guardian of the moon. Every month she restores the moon to her full size, and she cleans her face after an eclipse. The moon is called A'ts.'ts.g'ila (Plate X, Fig. 10). The eclipse is produced by several deities called Aiq'ut'yunsam, which means "painting the face black" (Plate X, Figs. 4-6). It is believed that at this time the moon performs one of the most sacred ceremonies of the kt'sint, which are thought to be very dangerous to the performer. The black paint with which her face is covered is supposed to be a protection against these dangers. Ats.ila'sxa cleans off the paint after the dance has been completed. According to Jacobsen,[1] the Indians say that during an eclipse the moon (Ewkla-hel'-killa) paints her face black. The same deities are believed to paint and to clean the faces of human kt'sint dancers. Sutsma'sa and Ats.ila'sxa also resuscitate those who are killed by the dangerous performances of the kt'sint.

While the functions of the beings enumerated here are mostly concerned with the kt'sint, others are more immediately concerned with the affairs of the world. Important among these is K'a'a'a'k'ni'm (Plate VII, Fig. 5). Sunx is the creator of man, but his work is supplemented by that of the god K'a'a'a'k'ni'm. When Sunx creates a new-born child, K'a'a'a'k'ni'm gives the child its individual features. Before children are born, the goddess named Nutx'qumalal'x' or Stsmtsma'lutsa Sunxalil'm.ata places them in a cradle and rocks them. After she ceases rocking them, the children are sent down to our world. She also rocks the young of all animals; and when she stops, Sunx sends them down to our world to be born. At the same time he ordains that their skins and their flesh shall serve for clothing and food for man. Nutx'qumalal'x' might therefore be called the deity

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1892, p. 102.

T:Boas E-5 (2884-ca/1892)900 NES BeGarcelle NES

[772] having charge of the birth of all animal beings. While she is rocking the [842] cradle, she sings,—

[639]

"[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]"

Another deity living in the House of Myths is the mother of flowers, called Nuxt'mage (Plate X, Figs. 7 and 8), the daughter of Sxukpa'ts'ets. It seems that this last name means "going to the right." This evidently refers to the fact that the sun is believed to move on his path towards the west, [821] face forward, and consequently during the spring months towards the sky moving towards the right; so that Sxukpa'ts'ets, moving to the right, means at the same time the springtime, when the sun is moving up the sky. This is the time when flowers begin to sprout. Every spring Nuxt'mage gives birth to all the plants in the order in which they begin to appear. A shaman is called to her aid by two old women who assist her (Plate X, Figs. 9 and 11).

Every year, at the time of the winter solstice, the deities determine who shall die during the coming year. Two beings called Kakimal'ts, the tsal'mem are placed on the ends of a long plank, which is supported at its centre, and swings like a seesaw. There all the men and all the animals [761] are called to stand near the ends of the plank. Where one of the swinging beings falls down from the plank, the person standing near it will die sooner than the one standing at the opposite end. The deities have a messenger called Nanxkal'tsiks (that means "long ear"), who carries all the news from our earth up to the House of Myths. Ack'uxtl'a has two children,—the deer, who is called Snxt'kcatlu Ack'uxtl'a, that is, "the foolish son of Ack'uxtl'a" (Plate VII, Fig. 8), and xtsaxwi'a Ack'uxtl'a. I have not been able to learn any thing in regard to the functions of these two beings.

While Sasa and Ack'uxtl'a are principally concerned with the fate of mankind, they do not personally interfere with the doings of man. Their daughter are carried out by four brothers, who are called collectively Mamamal'ala or Cmak'ulaxmen (Plate VIII, Figs. 1–4). These brothers are Mamqal'tsaik ("the one who finishes his work by chopping wood"), Tsal' [772] tlmen ("the one who finishes his work by rubbing wood"), Mamlqal'tsaik ("the one who finishes his work by cutting wood"), and K'ka'lak'. They have a sister called xVqamlks. These four brothers live in an elevated room in the rear of the House of Myths. They are engaged in carving and painting. It is said that they gave man his arm. They taught him to build canoes, to make bows, to build houses, and to carve in wood and to

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

IT was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white man seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the four Mamaxalidzoa acting on the behest of Alpaxoiw. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. Most individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Alpaxoiw has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the feet of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled assistants can usually extract a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

843 be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head 825 into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by [774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be countered by means of magical rites (I, p. 700). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he eats beaver meat his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few
[841] days after birth the child is steeped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-
[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relations to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella [771] Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made

[1] This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 700).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

served ceremonial chastity and was, therefore, in a good position to receive premonitions of this kind. The next day, as they were paddling down the river, they came upon some treacherous ice. Forewarned, they hastily abandoned their canoe, one side of which was soon broken in the way Ṫsälits had described; if they had continued their journey they would certainly have been drowned. 787 *

The dreams thus far recorded have all been capable of simple explanation; in fact, their meaning is obvious, either visually or audibly. In addition, there are a number of types considered to be symbolic by the Bella Coola. There are no professional interpreters, but it is believed that in ancient times shamans learnt the significance of certain images and this knowledge has since been transmitted from generation to generation. [791] [756]

One type indicates a coming birth. If a woman dreams that she travels to some distant spot, under the ocean or into the mountains, and there takes something in her hand, it signifies that she will soon bear a male child; on the other hand, if she picks up some small object when gathering berries, a daughter will be born. A Kimsquit informant stated that before his birth, his mother dreamt that she had gone far under the mouth of the Dean River to the vicinity of Ḷomoqua's house, where she had taken up a child. From this she knew she was pregnant and he was born in due course. If the scene of the dream is in the mountains, it means that the child will be a good hunter; if under water, that he will be a successful fisherman, as it proved in this case. There is a vague belief that death takes place either near the spot where the mother received indication of conception, or that the life and spirit of the deceased visit the place before setting out on their journey back from generation to generation. The old man from whom this information was obtained expects to meet death by drowning, though he is himself uncertain whether his premonition is due to his mother's dream or to the fact that there has been a tendency for this to occur in his family. 787 * 843 787 * [761] [775]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 787 If a woman dreams that she has caught two salmon, two small birds, or is holding two infants, the birth of twins is ●843 foretold. This type of explanation is obvious; in fact, these examples lie on the border-line between direct and symbolic interpretations.

* 787 Another indication of approaching pregnancy is for a woman to dream of a dead relative; this means that the latter 843 will soon be re-born. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned 775 that some fifty years earlier his mother dreamt that her dead mother came to her, saying that she was lonesome and wished to return. Soon afterwards she conceived, and the daughter born was considered to be the reincarnation of her own grand- [553] mother whose names she was promptly given. At the present time, this informant addresses his sister as sister, though he states that as a child he was taught to call her grandmother. As already mentioned, if a new-born infant is a reincarnation, the fact can often be recognized by holes or dimples in the ears, relics of previous borings for rings. Unless such a birth has been foretold in a dream, it is impossible to learn whom the child re-embodies.

* 787 A dream of frequent occurrence in Bella Coola is the return of the sleeper to the scenes and activities of his childhood. [761] This always signifies a long life. Strangely enough, to dream of being nailed in one's coffin and carried to the grave is translated conversely, and likewise indicates a long life. It is re- [731] membered that there were many dreams of fire before the outbreak of the smallpox epidemic, so it has since been assumed that such presage an outbreak of this disease.

* 787 The only dreams of which the interpretations are wholly 224 symbolic are those experienced by hunters. The Bella Coola explain this by saying that hunters always observe ceremonial [785] chastity and their spirits are, therefore, in a receptive condition to supernatural impressions. When a man has set his traps, he is able to tell from his dreams whether or not any animals have been caught:

To dream that a canoe has been upset in the river and that

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kill a squirrel, clean it, wash the entrails carefully and leave them hanging in the sun to dry for four days, then tie them around the child's stomach for four days more. It is important that the infant should not break the string. On the fourth day, remove them and hang them in the doorway of the house. On this same day, another squirrel must be killed, treated as before, and its viscera allowed to dry for four days. The child wears these in the same way for four days, when they too are hung in the doorway. A third squirrel, and finally a fourth, is killed and made use of in precisely the same manner. When the final set of entrails has been hung up, the four are left suspended for four days, till the twenty-eighth after the killing of the first animal, when the father takes them to the forest and deposits them beneath some projecting rock where no water can penetrate and where they will dry and keep indefinitely. 825 789 856

This causes the child to grow up endowed, like the squirrel, with agility so that he can scale even precipitous mountains. This medicine is frequently used in conjunction with one for hunting ability.

To Cause Easy Delivery [843]

Place the foetus of a porcupine against the back of a girl's neck and allow it to drop to the ground. Pick it up, replace it, and let it fall again. This is repeated four times while the person says:

"Please, may she be like you and have no trouble in giving birth."

This medicine can be used at any time before puberty.

To Cause Bravery (four means)

(1) When a grizzly bear has been shot, a lad who wishes to make himself brave approaches it and thrusts his arm down the dying animal's throat. This kills it by choking. Then he rubs his hand over his heart and the back of his neck, the seat [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 789 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex

If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

● 843 789 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)

(1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 757 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk

Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 789 825 To Cause Energy

Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:

"Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 825 886 To Cause Long Life

Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:

"May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.

The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so enshared are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

MEDICINES OF INFANCY AND CHILDHOOD

789 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

774 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing involuntary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

843 825

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to postpone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

[846]

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will die during infancy, though the means by which the slain animals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece

825 789 [846] [761] [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [761]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die. 755 [761]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

easy for Sxaiaxwax to gain control over them, and the sleeper wakes to find that he has been bleeding profusely and death is inevitable. This occurred to a man whose experiences are described in vol. I, chap. IX. 776* [761]

Although Sxaiaxwax is usually a curse to mortals, he can also do good. Occasionally he makes a man a shaman, and in many cases he helps a woman in childbirth. Such beneficent acts are not sufficient to counterbalance his evil deeds, and he remains one of the most dreaded of Bella Coola supernatural beings, a monster whose machinations make camping in a strange place a dangerous undertaking, and who is as likely to strike down rich or poor, young or old. [756] [844] [484]

Less feared than Sxaiaxwax, because he appears less frequently, is Allät·iaistl. The Bella Coola speak of this being with trepidation, but little definite information could be obtained concerning him. He has human form and sometimes comes at dusk to cause death by carrying away a man's spirit." The home of this creature appears to be beneath the earth rather than in Nusmät·a. [761] [774]

A third dreaded being who, like the two preceding, usually lives on this earth and only visits in Nusmät·a, is Sä·lma, "The Death Dealer." He, too, appears in human form and can be distinguished by the nose-ring which he always wears. Sudden death in the forest is always attributed to "The Death Dealer." If a man is engulfed by a slide, or killed by a falling tree, it is because this malevolent being has entered the slide or tree. Some Bella Coola say that he is responsible for animals who kill hunters. He rarely carries out his designs with the aid of sickness, nor is death by drowning often attributed to him, but for all other fatal disasters he must take the blame. While a corpse is resting in a coffin awaiting burial, Sä·lma invariably sits on the cover, though none can see him. Instances are known in which even this monster has acted in a kindly manner. 776* 761

The supernatural beings thus far described are usually 776*

*See vol. I, pp. 94-7.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

843 be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head 825 into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by [774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be countered by means of magical rites (I, p. 720). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he eats beaver meat his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few
[846] days after birth the child is steeped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-
[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relations to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a [171] house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made

[1] This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 720).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and 844 suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed [776] that Sxaiaxwax, though invisible, is present on every occasion; the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, [177] but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary. The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay, [845] hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to [826] cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of [465] $2.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother 853 would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and 854 carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing. [846]
When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of [165] love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive the perils of infancy.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is sxaiäx, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 783

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one foetus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [787] [756] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

262

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

[the Dance of Mother-Nature]

season, subject to the usual consent of the marshals. No description need be given of the coming of the call and of the ritual of lsxtämem. A large amount of wood is required, and on the night of nusiutälsap the many carpentry tasks are allotted. A large masked wooden figure is made to represent Mother-Nature herself, two more of the elderly women who attend her, and one of the inevitable Ano'likwolsaix. Besides, masks must be made of almost all the flowers and the trees, their number only limited by X's willingness to reward the carpenters. It is said that formerly as many as three hundred masks were sometimes ordered. 575* 796* 824 [532]

No detailed description is required for qothm, but the ritual on nakusam differs from that of all other dances. Early in the morning a number of kukusuit gather in X's house where the carpenters decide on two old women to wear masks representing hags of great age and ugliness. A number of kukusiut accompany them to the bottom house of the village where they call out: [532]

"We are in great trouble. Our daughter's child is long overdue. If you know of any good medicines, will you not give them to us for her?"

The kukusiut drone when they see and hear these supernatural visitors, and many of them give medicines to the old women to increase the realistic effect. This is repeated in every house of the village.

That night when all is ready, the uninitiated are called in and take their places in the two corners near the door. They see in the central position behind the fire a large wooden figure wearing the mask of a woman in the pangs of labour with enormously distended stomach. She is Nuwuska, Mother-Nature, though the uninitiated do not know this as yet. She lies on some raised planking; slightly below her are two old women carrying sponges of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, as if they were midwives prepared to wash a new-born infant. Two matting enclosures have been constructed, one in each of the rear corners of the house, large enough to hide the per- [532] [844]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 824 [532] [844] formers who are chosen for their small stature. Ano'likwolsaix stands up ready to explain as usual. One of the actors now comes forth from beneath Mother-Nature's stomach, as if born of her, wearing a mask surmounted by a carved stick representing the leaves of the willow. The nurses handle the performer, as if washing a new-born child, and announce:

"It is a boy, Willow Leaves," just as a midwife might state the sex of an infant.

Willow Leaves dances around the fire, at intervals saying, "I am Willow Leaves."

Ano'likwolsaix adds her comments: "Yes. There is Willow Leaves, see him."

The masked figure goes into the matting enclosure out of sight. The next plant to be born is Gooseberry, for whom the same procedure is carried out, before he, too, disappears. In succession, a few minutes apart, come Nettle, all kinds of Grass, and Western Skunk Cabbage. Each is washed and the sex announced; then the figure dances and Ano'likwolsaix comments as before. A good dancer is always chosen for the next figure, Black Cottonwood, who is "born" in the same way, but instead of vanishing into the enclosure remains dancing to and fro on the upper, upstream, side of the house. After him comes "The Dancing Tree," the American Aspen. An agile man is likewise chosen for this part and he remains dancing back and forth on the lower, downstream, side. Ano'likwolsaix announces, amid breathless interest: "The South Wind is coming."

*575 *796 824 532 This figure enters the house by the front door, wearing the mask of a handsome young man. He goes to Nawuxska like a doctor called in to assist, and when he stands up, her face appears like that of a happy woman who has just given birth. The uninitiated do not realize that a new mask has been put on Mother-Nature while her face was hidden from their sight. The South Wind then retires to the lower side of the house, where he dances to and fro near Aspen, at intervals going up to his patient. In rushes the North Wind, but he is too late to accom-

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the tlaqō'lla dances clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large headring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some tlaqō'lla do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The tlaqō'lla has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house. 575 [774] [156] [292] [301]

The Ō'tsq (= the laugher) and the Dā'lia (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The Ō'tsq 'makes fun of everything' and scratches people with his nails. The Dā'lia carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The Ō'tsq and the Dā'lia must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses. [785]

If a person transgresses the laws of the Kū'sōlā, for instance when the tlaqō'lla gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person decides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a human hair is tied. If this object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ornaments) used in the Kū'sōlā are burnt immediately at the close of each dancing season. Novices must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Athpalā'tsnem, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qō'mtsina and his brothers and his sister (see p. 412), Mamamalā'niq and his fellows, the raven and the Hanqō'mta, and many others. 575 532 796 [776]

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and resorts to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by pro- 844

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'slu'sta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole
[852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive
[556] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Kū'siūt, when it is given its Kū'siūt name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qō'mtaloa name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet
[292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for [262] a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [261] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [431] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until [527] he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisa'ku secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

4 996
825
845

Fish, too, are regarded in the same light. Indeed, there is a particularly close affinity between man and salmon, for twins are born through the instrumentality of the latter. Just how this occurs no Bella Coola knows, but a twin and salmon are regarded almost as brothers. In days when men were more powerful than now, a twin was especially liked by animals. Through his connection with salmon, a ts'ie (the term applied to a twin associated with a salmon) could understand the speech of birds, animals, and fish. In many instances he could also assume salmon form at will.

4 996
987
825

In view of beliefs of this kind it is not surprising that the Bella Coola attribute great powers even to beasts well known to them. In the story recorded in vol. I, p. 55, the War-Party of the Tides was summoned by the speaking of a dog. A belief persists that danger is always present when a dog acts in an unusual way, though this can be avoided by killing it at once. In July, 1921, a visit was made to an elderly Bella Coola early one morning. The man was in a state of absolute terror. The preceding night he had locked his pet dog outside his house to give warning if anyone approached, but when he awoke in the morning, it was curled up asleep as usual at the foot of his bed. There was no possible hole through which it could have entered, so it seemed to the owner that his dog must have transformed itself into some minute animal and made its way beneath the door. The only other explanation was that his master, hearing in his sleep the whimpering of his pet, had got out of bed to let it in, without remembering that he had done so. To the writer this seemed the probable explanation, especially when the old man admitted that he had been in the habit of walking in his sleep in his younger days, but the Bella Coola was not satisfied. He could not decide whether or not to kill the dog, a great favourite, but finally decided not to do so. The incident was mentioned to another informant, who was greatly worried and assumed it to be an omen of death to the dog's master. His only comfort lay in the fact

Lib. Heveith E-5-(1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

CHAPTER VII

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

IT was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white men seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the first Mamanilitsa acting on the labour of Alpaxnim. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. Most individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Alpaxnim has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the face of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled midwives can usually rotate a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Sisiutlemas, though invisible, is present on every occasion, the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary. The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1918, the sum of $5.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house it sprawls commonly on the floor, unhampered by clothing. When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive the perils of infancy.

Lib. Danish K.S. (1922-1924) 1948
NER Dellacoola NES

the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring, and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh eulachon. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deterred by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recommenced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as memento of the hole pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to nurse the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unwarried girl who became pregnant when away alone in the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kinder act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term cowal, applied to such an act, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is xnaiâx, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 783

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one fœtus so that the infant will be born dead and deformed. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [787] [756] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

845 alone, and when she leaves it, it dries up immediately. When a year has elapsed, the parents return home with their children and the father resumes the ordinary routine of life. For three years more the mother must remain in the house, leaving it only at night through a hole in the floor. Above all else, she must keep away from the river; she cannot draw water from it, nor can she cut salmon on its bank. One instance is remembered in which the parents of twins failed to observe these [753] restrictions; their legs became swollen and they soon died. In addition to punishment of the offenders in cases such as [825] this, there is danger that if they fail to obey the customary taboos the salmon will be insulted and avoid the Bella Coola River.

After four years a mother of twins resumes her normal life, [778] but she is henceforth endowed with special powers. If she [787] wishes to see anyone who is absent, she has only to think of the person, and in her dreams she will be able to see him. She must never try to start up a dying fire by blowing upon it, since to do so would cause a gale. When a person sets out on any kind of an expedition from the house in which a mother of twins is living, the latter must chew a little food and spit it out towards the departing guest, otherwise he will fail in his venture.

845 Twins themselves, being akin to salmon, have miraculous 825 ability to see their fish-kinsmen and read their thoughts. Bella Coola mythology contains many stories of the way in which twins could talk with, and change into, salmon. Such knowledge is not limited to tales of the distant past. An elderly Bella Coola described the manner in which her grandmother, a twin related to Sockeye Salmon, was consulted by a man who had been unlucky with his weir. Gazing down into the water, this woman saw that the fish were avoiding his dam because of the charred uprights used in its construction; when these were changed he was successful in his fishing.

845 Twins are believed to possess remarkable ability from earliest childhood, and even to remember incidents occurring

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

before their birth. When the mother of the twin described in the last paragraph was awaiting delivery in a temporary shelter in the woods, its roof fell, cutting her head. The old woman who mentioned this occurrence stated that both her grandmother, the Sockeye Salmon, and her sister, a Spring Salmon, though still unborn, were aware of the accident and remembered the comments of the midwife. 845

On account of their uncanny power, twins are considered weaklings and usually die young in spite of the care lavished upon them and the taboos observed by their parents.[5] A dead twin, instead of being buried, is put in a box which is placed in a tree far away from the village. Every year the river changes its course, eating into its banks in order to reach the tree containing the body, and this continues until it reaches its goal and sweeps away tree and coffin. 966 [923]

Childhood Instruction

When working in the field, an anthropologist almost inevitably concentrates upon ceremonials and other epochs in an individual's life, to the detriment of the daily routine which in Bella Coola, as everywhere else, is fundamentally important although it defies description on account of its intangibility. A child grows up in a large house, occupied by several families, in which there is little privacy. The parents provide food and clothing, but more distant relatives take a greater share of responsibility for this than do white people. When food is being given out, a child soon learns that he will be given some of it, and that he will have his portion in any distribution of presents. Furniture, bedding, and other necessities are reduced to a minimum, but a boy or girl is welcome to sleep with relatives should his own parents wish to go hunting or fishing. The sense of power possessed by a Bella Coola with many relations is largely intangible, but it has practical applications as 114 855 [867] [867]

[5] It is probable that the unhappy life led by a twin and its parents during the first year after birth lessens its chances of survival. Needless to say, this explanation does not find favour with the Bella Coola.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

964 are never disturbed, being considered, in some vague way, "bad." The tools used for digging the grave are left standing upright in the loose earth, an action for which no explanation can be given by the Bella Coola. When these various rites have been performed, the funeral party returns to the village and disperses.

966 845 964 198 At present, interment is the customary method for disposing of the bodies of all except twins, whose bodies are placed in trees. Formerly, other means were sometimes employed, as they still are occasionally. Instead of inhumation, a coffin was frequently placed on a scaffold close behind the deceased's house. Whenever another relative died, planks were laid across, above the first box, and the new one deposited on these, so that in time the scaffold grew to resemble a house-like structure with many compartments. In the last century a certain shaman, Atkwakoo by name, is said to have pointed out that corpses were frequently carried off by wolves, cuscus, and other animals. For this reason he persuaded the people to inter their dead.

964 Somewhat similar to this practice was the placing of corpses in trees. Until the last few years this was sometimes done with poor children; formerly, it was not unknown even for chiefs. An elderly Kimsquit man mentioned that the coffin containing the body of his grandfather, a chief, was placed in the crotch of a tree where no rain could penetrate. This means of disposal was probably never habitual. Even at the present time, the corpse of a dearly loved child is occasionally placed above, instead of under the ground. If the parents desire to do this, they erect in the cemetery a carved figure of one of their crests and deposit the coffin on top of it. This is, of course, a graphic representation of the deceased's origin myth and symbolizes the way in which the dead person has become associated with it.

According to several of the older men, cremation was practised by the Bella Coola for some time after the first settlement of the earth. A fire was built outside the house and the body accustomed to do when alive; but the workmanship is shadowy and unsubstantial, sometimes even transparent. Ghosts do not act like human beings, but usually walk backwards, sometimes even on their heads, and spend much of their time playing a game resembling football with large, globular objects made of some light substance. They communicate with one another both by whistling and in a language which resembles the attempts at speech made by a tongueless person. Some individuals believe that there is a supreme chief in the land of ghosts, Ałłó ʔaiał, sent down like Pluto to preside over the shades. He figures in certain stories describing descents to the lower world; but many Bella Coola know nothing of his existence below, although it furnishes a plausible explanation for his coming by night to molest human beings. Like Sisiutlas he causes blood to rush forth from the mouth and genitals of anyone whom he seizes; death follows, and a new victim has been acquired for his kingdom. The more common belief is that the villages of ghosts have chiefs like those of human beings. It is thought, indefinitely, that after a long period of time the ghosts die, and some of them may then return to this world as infants. A child born with dimples in its ears, which are regarded as indications of previous borings for rings, is welcomed as the reincarnation of some unknown ancestor.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

At death, the ghost does not immediately appear in the land below, but remains for four days within the back-room of a house corresponding in style to an ordinary Bella Coola dwelling. It is believed that one of these large houses is beneath every village* and that the dead pass straight down through the earth into it. Meanwhile the goods, burnt at the grave during the funeral, as well as those deposited beside it, have fallen through the ground and notified the ghosts that a newcomer has arrived. The wraiths assemble from all directions and fight over the articles, some of which are obtained by the one who owned them during life. On the fourth

*There may be one large house, extending beneath the world like Nuxalk a-dawx; it was impossible to obtain definite information on this point.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#534 #756 #787 winds to cease. The three frozen brothers fell back to the floor where Ka'laiáxts revived them. Then he sent out two of them to bring in the boy they had buried. When they returned, the mother overwhelmed them with her gratitude and gave them many presents, even offering to become the wife of Ka'laiáxts, who, however, declined to accept her.

THE FOUR BROTHERS
(Third Version)

[345] Once upon a time four brothers, one of whom was a twin and could accordingly change to a salmon, had friction with their family, and decided to go away from home. As they followed the trail along the bank of the river they saw a man spearing salmon on the opposite bank. He wore what appeared to be a transparent object, like an eyeglass, in front of one eye. The brothers watched him for some time and were amazed at his dexterity; with every thrust of his spear he impaled a salmon.

"I can transform myself into a salmon," said the twin.

The others did not believe him and replied:

"If you can, go and get the head of that wonderful spear."

"All right," answered the twin, and went down the river bank, out of sight. Presently the three brothers saw a large, beautifully marked salmon jumping in the river as it made its way upstream.

"Perhaps it is he after all," they said.

The salmon darted past the fisherman, who made a thrust at it and missed. He pulled in his harpoon and as he refitted the head he said, carefully:

"I don't know what can be the matter. I have never missed before."

Meanwhile the salmon-man had unobtrusively gone downstream, keeping close to the bank where his brothers were watching. Then he went up, jumping as before, and again the fisherman struck and missed. Once more he dipped downstream, and on his third ascent he repassed close to the fisherman, who failed as before, and was, therefore, much vexed. Once again the twin went below but he allowed himself to be struck when he passed upwards the fourth time. Instantly a commotion arose. The water gurgled and boiled as the fish struggled; the fisherman could barely hold his grip, and was unable to land what he had caught. After a few minutes the salmon-boy drew his knife and severed the line, causing the fisherman to fall into the river. He clambered ashore and pulled in his rope as he watched the water for another sight of the strong fish, but it had disappeared. When, instead of the harpoon-head on which he depended for sustenance, he found only a cut line, the loss was so severe that, weeping bitterly, he went home and told his wife and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(3) Pound bark and wood of the black hawthorn in water and drink the brew. 757

(4) The following medicine must be prepared by the patient himself. It is not generally known, but the woman from whom the information was obtained claimed that it had been used with success by her brother.

Obtain a human bone, or a piece of a coffin, and burn it secretly in the forest at some distance from the village. Mix the ashes with dog-fish oil. After preparing the medicine the patient must remain alone in the woods for four days. He can then return home and rub the mixture on his genital organs to reduce the swelling. The sufferer must remain continent for one year or the disease will return with increased malignancy.

It was impossible to learn which types of venereal disease are believed to be curable by these medicines. Nor could definite information be obtained concerning the length of time that the Bella Coola have suffered from these maladies. Most of the old people affirmed that they were unknown before the coming of the white man, although one elderly woman was emphatic in stating that they had experienced them for many generations. 164

For Difficult Delivery (three means) 757

(1) The usual remedy, which has been described already, is to apply hot ashes to the woman's feet as soon as the pangs of delivery are felt. 845

(2) If delivery has been delayed beyond the usual time, it can be accelerated by giving the woman a morsel of the testicle of a beaver mixed with water. This causes the infant to be born at once.

(3) In case of extremely protracted delivery, a husband can help his wife by urinating upon her head.

For Breast Trouble 757

The cure for a pain in a woman's breast is to make a deep incision so that the blood flows freely.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

262

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which held it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [725] [759]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [752]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kilmaximow: The chosen that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
Kitsin: First ceremonial discharge.
Kitlo'o: ceiling village.
Kitsu: Supernatural creature dwelling in the woods.
[852] Kitsukkmut: Shamans who received power from ghosts.
Kmelmulcutsin: Bella Coola hunter.
[108] Kmqhmt, "Coyote": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the anglicized Kimsquit has been derived.
Kmlaut: Nass River.
[825] Kmlhut: Kimsquit was mentioned in an ancient story.
Kmo: 1—Whale.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsi'o woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.
Kmo*yaus: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Kimsquit chief, who died about 1900.
[825] Ko'o*: Hookum.
[824] Ko: White fir (?).
Koa'o: Hearing.
Koadjat: Prerogative of being consult.
Koam: Dried salmon.
Koamdjat: Synonym for skadis: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of masked representations of the deceased. The word is derived from koam.
[825] Kokokkum: Porpoise.
[845] Kokoskum: Supernatural being who believes in an erotic woman.
[824] Ko'lo: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.
Ko'lomm: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kolokum: Unidentified berry (strawberry?).
Kolsim: Supernatural female shaman who guided Ki'mutsin.
Kol tsiyokmy: Earlier name of a Bella Coola Canoeist.
Kolto'kmo, "Earthy Oven": Oliman.
Kolukmy: Land, region, earth.
[539] Kolulo'o: First part of song.
Komel: Trudeau mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.
[825] Kmqmtcumkulsin, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of white salmon.
[765] Kpa'omm: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.
[578] Kpa'omm: Goods offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their measure of food.
[600] Kpomkamin or Kpomkamim: Synonym for kilmkamim, invitation present.*
[42] Kpomomkmoy: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[601] Kpkpi, mentin, kpkpi: Gonorrhea.
Kpkpkmin: Earlier ceremonial at which foreigners are present.
Kpko: The construction of salmon weirs.

*This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an illusory mein r sound.

APPENDIX D

[92*]
[378]

Nawate ang, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kinnapit man long ago.
nawetcim: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige.
Nam: 1—Bawas district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nanabig: Tal in bird heaven.
Nanpemb: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Hagabai in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun.

[772]

Nanwemcim a: Daughter of the first settlers at Hagabai in the beginning of time.
Nanap: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Bereavement", Village on Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle on Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nawi'ghan: Expectancy, without term.
nawmen ni nainum: The consumption of a name upon earth.

[431]
[535]

nawmenkapalin, "Things to Sweep the Door With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage.
nawmyjim: Wooden dish used for washing an infant.

[415]

nawnibimam: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine.

[765]

nebiche: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient.

[756]

Nebnebwi: Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nebow: Bells Bells village and undeveloped area in the vicinity.
Nebil, "Canyon": 1—Duck River.
2—Village on the lower Duck River. nebinyam: Alteration of a dance from round to factor.

[825]

nebiskim: Bone in the back of a animal's neck.

[516]

nebishimam, "A Drying Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband.

[491]

nebishimam: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion.
Nebiwi, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bells Gaels valley.
Nebnigi: Totem-gods of the first settlers at Nagabi in the beginning of time.
nebnebik: Reserve of rocks.

[845]
[825]

nenjamen: Wall.
Nebkibinin: Mythical house in the sky.
Nebnapnik: One of the rooms of the supreme god's house.
necnibim: Powers, invisible to all but the owner, given by Nanapabo or a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nebiche.

[756] nebinjamen: A species of new factor totem, such as is manifested by a dream or on the will of a mighty chief.

[555]

nebinimbin: Ceremony rite in which the performer pretends to swallow his totem.
[illegible]
nebinimim: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to bereaved by a person unlinked in Other dance.

[431]

2—Presents given by guests or a patriarch to their host and his memers.
nebiqam, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who points upon the head upon and to produce mental deformities in an infant.

[856]

Nebnebik, "Place of Many Spreading Sockeye Salmon": Kinnapit village.
Nebimim: Earlier name of a Pottawatomi man.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

843 be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head 825 into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by [774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be countered by means of magical rites (I, p. 720). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he eats beaver meat his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small [842] piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few days after birth the child is steeped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-
[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relations to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a [171] house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Snaiarmax, though invisible, is present on every occasion; the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

[1] This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 720).

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary. The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of $1.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing. When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive the perils of infancy.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring, and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh olachen. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deterred by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recommenced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the holes of its ears; these are regarded as remnants of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term tawat, applied to such an one, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)#948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens: 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856 speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Alquntim told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished [858] possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his [715] son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1/McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far
789 into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is [715] matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[868] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Preventive and Curative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy and Childhood

789 To Counteract Dangers Incurred During Pregnancy (two means)

774 (1) As already described (I, p. 96), there is always danger of 843 a person losing his spirit through a sudden start, causing invol-825 untary contraction of the muscles, but pregnant women are especially liable to peril of this kind. Moreover, the unexpected appearance of a toad, rat, or mouse, though insufficient to harm an expectant mother, may suffice to startle the unborn child, or even to destroy his spirit. A woman carefully remembers all experiences of this kind and treats the injury while her infant is crying immediately after birth. If a toad has caused it, she catches one, decorates it with dyed cedar-bark, and places it on the child's stomach, then guides it so that it jumps up the chest to the neck. This is repeated four times. She then sets it down, unharmed on the ground, saying:

"You are the cause of the trouble, please go."

The same rite is carried out for all small mammals, reptiles, and even with birds which have startled a mother by their peculiar behaviour. In some families it is customary to postpone the application of this medicine until four days after birth. There is considerable difference of opinion concerning the specific injury; some allege that the spirit of the creature enters the body and, if not counteracted, causes the child to be born sick and feeble.

[846]

843 (2) During his wife's pregnancy, a husband must preserve
825 a small portion of the skin of every animal killed. Four days
789 after birth, as the infant lies in its cradle, a small fire is built [846] beneath and the pieces thrown thereon so that the child is [761] steeped in the smoke. If this is neglected, the boy or girl will [774] die during infancy, though the means by which the slain animals accomplish this is not fully understood. Possibly, as in the last instance, their spirits have entered the body. Some hunters preserve an eye from every carcass instead of a piece

6:Boas K-S (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NES Bellecoola NES

[544] [545] [546] [547] [548] [549] [550] [551] [552] [553] [554] [555] [556] [557] [558] [559] [560] [561] [562] [563] [564] [565] [566]

be made more powerful by magical means or the ritual acts of relatives. Although these often entail great labour and expense, parents seldom neglect their duty; in fact, care for their children is one of the strongest Bella Coola characteristics, though the methods used are so foreign to the white man that he has difficulty in realizing their meaning. The hope of both parents is to have children to carry on their names; infanticide is unknown and the death of an infant is mourned almost as much as that of an adult. Sterility and impotency are frequent causes for divorce.

At the present time there is a high birth-rate in Bella Coola, although the heavy infant mortality prevents any appreciable increase in the population. In the old days, it is said, there were always large families, though much confidence cannot be placed in this statement. In families where there are several children, the first-born, whether boy or girl, assumes an important position. His or her influence, as eldest, is naturally considerable, and the parents foster this through the vague feeling that it is proper for the eldest to be the most important in the family. In adult years, and after marriage, the influence of the eldest of a family continues to have considerable weight with younger brothers and sisters.

If a man is poor he cannot hope to have more than one wife, and his family circle will be limited to their children, and perhaps to elderly parents. On the other hand, a wealthy and powerful man usually has a larger family. Not only may he have several wives, but his aged relatives, and those of his wife, look to him for support and assistance. Such are usually welcome to live in his house; they lend what aid they can in collecting food, and it gratifies a man's pride and sense of power to be closely surrounded by a large family. The Bella Coola are, on the whole, considerate to their aged relatives.*

* This is not true of the present. During the winter of 1922-3 a feeble old man, living alone, was often in actual want of food. Neither and dependent, of a more dependent kinsmen, none of his surviving relatives, of whom the nearest were employed, would take him into their homes. Commenting on this man's lot, several informants pointed out that, in the old days, such a man could have found

CHAPTER [illegible]

BIRTH, ADOLESCENCE, MARRIAGE

Birth—Childhood Instruction—Puberty Rites—Marriage

Birth

IT was impossible to obtain definite data on the fertility of Bella Coola women, or on the period elapsing between marriage and the birth of the first child. Sterility is rare, though by no means unknown; on the other hand, there are several families with as many as eight or nine children. The changed conditions which have followed the advent of the white race seem to have had little influence on the high birth-rate, although infant mortality has increased enormously. Within the last few years this has diminished, so that the Bella Coola are now holding their own. Children are always desired, and although methods of abortion and infanticide have been known for many years, neither practice seems to have been sufficiently common to have produced an appreciable effect on the population.

Pregnancy usually occurs during the year following marriage. Though its actual dependence upon coition is fully realized, yet the Bella Coola, religiously minded in this as in all other aspects of life, ascribe the condition to the four Mamaxalilmat acting on the labour of Sqamaxin. It is believed that the Carpenters carve out the child who is to be born in the same way that a human craftsman manufactures some complicated object. These individuals do not theorize to any extent upon the course of biological development, but are content to assume that Sqamaxin has made the coming birth possible.

During pregnancy the expectant mother must observe certain restrictions. If she chews gum, she will have a difficult delivery; if she eats salmon tails, the hair of the infant will appear before the head, and although skilled midwives can usually extract a child, this is a painful process which should be avoided.

1:Mc:Dwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bella-coola NE6

further conceptions by wriggling her body on her haunches immediately after the delivery of a child. 842

To the Bella Coola religious concepts of birth are as important as the physiological aspects. The blood discharged at birth, and the mother from whom it has come, is cuxúx, a word difficult to translate. It is applied to a person or thing which is taboo, and combines the significance of "uncanny," "abhorred," "to be avoided," "feared"; perhaps "unclean," in the biblical sense, is the best synonym. Essentially human, this blood is not only potent against supernatural beings, but is dangerous to man as well. For this reason a mother must never be delivered within a house. The smell of the unclean blood might kill all resident within, or at least prevent them receiving presents of any kind. Supernatural beings and inherent supernatural powers are alike repelled by it. 826 844 789

A recent mother is taboo and must exercise due precautions to prevent her baneful influence from affecting her associates, but this power is most strongly present in one who has borne twins. Even younger people, sophisticated in most matters, shudder when speaking of twins; fortunately, double births are not common. They are attributed to the entry of a salmon into the body, so that a twin is half-salmon, half-human. Occasionally a woman who is pregnant with twins discovers her condition in a dream and avoids the perils of a multiple birth by calling upon a shaman to remove the spirit from one foetus so that the infant will be born dead and delivered. If this is not done, the two infants arrive in due course, to the horror and grief of parents and relatives. Though abhorred, no case is known of the killing of a twin at birth. 845 [825] [819] [752] [847]

Instead of the two children being brought back to the village, word is sent to the father who must join his wife in the temporary shelter in the woods where delivery took place. For one year, they must not return home, and during this period must eat no salmon. Four times during the year they must shift from one shelter to another, each built on the bank of a small creek. The mother can draw water from this stream

1:34:Swanton E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring, and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh eulachon. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deserted by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recommenced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as remnants of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relations was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term sewaul, applied to such an one, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent and that his mother stated that all her ancestors had done likewise.

1:14:Dawson R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES DeGeorge NES

Another instance of advice conveyed in this manner was told by a Kimsquit man who related that a number of years ago a pregnant woman had dreamed that Mpanzim appeared to her and told her not to destroy what she would presently bear. In due course she was delivered, but the infant was a repulsive cripple, blind and deformed. Remembering the admonition, the mother refused to slay her child as many of her friends advised. Soon it was apparent that he was supernaturally endowed; as proof of this he repeated comments which had been made to his mother within a few minutes of his birth. As he grew older he developed shamanistic powers so that he was able to converse with the dead, the only instance known of this ability being granted from birth. He also had wonderful talent as a singer and, though he must have died about 1850, the Bella Coola still remember his skill in this respect. He would unquestionably have been killed but for his mother's warning.

Instead of imparting verbal information, dreams frequently foretell the future by means of images of events about to happen. For example, if a man dreams of owning large numbers of pelts, it signifies that he will have success in hunting, and he starts for his trap-line without delay. So, too, warnings are conveyed. A number of years ago a slave woman of Sawl, who was not a member of the Sacrat society, dreamt that she saw herself bitten in many places and lying covered with blood. Within a few days she met a Cannibal dancer (II, p. 70), who was supposed to have vanished into the land above; he killed her and lacerated her body, as she had seen. A Kimsquit man told of a similar instance that happened to a member of the party with which he had been hunting a number of years previously. One night he was wakened by one of his companions, Tsilkis, calling out that he was afraid because he had dreamt that one side of their canoe was decayed. The hunters were impressed, because they knew he had long ob-

#192

[352]
[546]
[931]
[545]

[241]
[555]

[947]

[101]
[401]

[614]

[401]
[93]
[584]

[821]

[543]

[illegible]: "Come and eat"; Invitation to the Indian to assemble to a performer's house.
[illegible]: Whose house.
[illegible]: Whose.
[illegible]: Whose.
[illegible]: 1—Presents, regarded as clothing, etc., given by the groom's relatives to the bride's relatives when the latter visit his house on the wedding day.
2—Other presents given by the husband's relatives to the wife's relatives prior to her marriage.
[illegible]: "The Opening Off of a Heavy Burden from the Shoulders"; field of the equipment by a wife's relatives of presents received from her husband's relatives.
[illegible]: 1—Receiving rank.
2—The destruction of the house of a chief who is about to give a potlatch.
[illegible]: One of the names of the supreme god.
[illegible]: Invitation, by pressure on the foot, to a chief to go to the meeting place.
[illegible]: The employment of hundred with feasting.
[illegible]: Bear Springs on South Bentinck Arm.
[illegible]: "The Chasing"; Synonym for [illegible], q.v., this is a Kimsquit town only.
[illegible]: Extreme rite to which the performer appears to be heavy to death.
[illegible]: The casting of lucky stones on the fire.
[illegible]: "Up from the River"; Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
[illegible]: Abortion.
[illegible]: "Disappointed"; said of the supernatural beings called by a wife's dancer who never has been the potlatch.

[illegible]: Slave from the lower Fraser sold to Kimsquit during the last century.
[illegible]: Bella Coola term for the Bella Bella.
[illegible]: Child-brother or half-sister.
[illegible]: 1—Wife.
2—Slave, term used by old persons to direct children to which.
3—Husband.
[illegible]: Male relative of same concerned family.
[illegible]: Woman who performs man's work.
[illegible]: Single brother to a family with several sisters.
[illegible]: Small box, especially one, term used to indicate children.
[illegible]: "Washing Clothes"; Presents given by the relatives of the future bride to the relatives of the future bridegroom at the first announcement of the engagement. The implication is that they will have to labour industriously to obtain the wealth necessary for the marriage.
[illegible]: Last meal of the marriage, semi-religiously-[illegible].
[illegible]: Bella Bella term for the sibling.
[illegible]: Bella Coola term for the people of mixed Bella Bella-Kimsquit stock who inhabited the shores of Dean Channel.

the period of infancy. During this period, the mother observes various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring, and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh eulachon. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deterred by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recommenced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as memorials of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term cawatl, applied to such an one, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent

1:McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

536 One very old man is still, 1913, commonly called by this 626 last designation, much to his annoyance.

When the songs had been sung, each accompanied by the 837 dancing of the deserted husband, the dance of the ceremony
796 distributed food and the guests departed. The only advantage
[556] to the giver of the rite was that it enabled him to show his wealth in an apparently disinterested fashion by gifts of food. Usually he was a friend of the aggrieved husband.

When a husband deserted his wife, the other women of the village used to perform an exactly similar ceremony. The same type of songs were composed, and during their singing the deserted wife used to dance, wearing above her head [292] representations of a penis and testicles. By means of hidden strings she was able to cause the former to become erect.

On other occasions the ceremony was varied by an announcer asking the offended party about the appearance of the deserter. There followed a minute and highly coloured description about the unpleasantness of his genital organs, a description which was swiftly incorporated into the songs.

It can be taken as a matter of course that the above description is little more than an outline of the Bella Coola ceremony of shaming. In spite of its deficiencies, it is important, as evidence of the former sentiment with regard to divorce. Obscene though the ceremony must have been, both in acting and in the free use of personalities, it must have been a powerful deterrent to divorce.* Indeed it would be difficult to imagine a stronger one in a community where a man's position is judged by public opinion and where his greatest aversion is to public ridicule. It is unfortunate that we shall probably never know whether the rite was associated with chiefs or commoners.

CEREMONIAL MARRIAGE

511 Since marriage gains much of its importance from the com-552 plicated business transactions between the two families, with [848] * In another site was occasionally carried out the ceremonial marriage.

1:36:Dorsey:Bh. E.-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Faithful and cases of rape were either unknown or very rare. The daughters of chiefs, too, were guarded with great care and any effort to seduce one of them would be punished by her father. The parents of a girl used to watch her carefully, and the opportunity for immorality was not great in the days when everyone went to bed at sundown except on the occasion of a ceremonial dance. As one informant described it:

"The daughters of chiefs used to be looked after as if they were in boxes, cherished and guarded by their parents and relatives. No one would dream of molesting them. And a chief's daughter used to be proud and look after herself. Nowadays, girls don't care, and everything has become degraded."

If the daughter of a chief did demean herself, the parents lost interest in her, as one who was spoilt. It was always assumed that a girl of rank was a virgin at marriage, and if it was discovered that she had been living an immoral life, her husband in many cases returned her in disgrace to her parents who, equally shamed, were expected to send back to him the goods he had expended for their daughter. Loss of virtue was judged only from indirect information. If the daughter of a chief was found pregnant before marriage, she was almost ostracized by her family. No ceremonial marriage could be arranged for her, and the child could not be cleansed from the stigma of illegitimacy.

On the other hand, it appears certain that there was a good deal of intercourse in the old days between chiefs and slave women, or even between slaves and the daughters of chiefs. In the latter case the woman was often cast aside by her relatives though they sometimes yielded to the inevitable and tried to wash away the disgrace with gifts. At the same time, public opinion was unfavourable to a man who consorted with many women, or to a woman who allowed herself to be at the disposal of many men. Any regular union of masters with their slave women for the deliberate purpose of having children was unknown. A girl's consent was always necessary, given either personally or through an intermediary. Even a chief hesitated

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] 533*
you are the prey of wolfhounds, | you commerced mother, | you are spilled, you [illegible] 576
[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] 578
who pretend to be [illegible]. | Aiaiya Aiaiy(?)! | Yumsum I am ashamed, | [illegible] I am [illegible].

[illegible]

3 [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Exactly similar | in the little boy's name | to that of the round-headed

[illegible] | Aiaiya Aiaiy! | Yumsum I am ashamed, | [illegible] I am [illegible].

[illegible]

4 The third part, if it was sung, has been forgotten.

(a) This differs from other Bella Coola songs in that [illegible] was commerced mother, not a brother-wife. She was held up to scorn by the men of Winnipeg and the song composed for her by a certain Bella Coola. [946]
(b) Recorded by Mrs. D. Ida, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pelkey.
(c) It is said that women, even of chiefly blood, used to endeavour to increase their importance in the eyes of their children by boasting, falsely, of ancestral history. [554]
(d) A word of opprobrium, difficult to translate. It is said to imply slow memory, but is more probably a mere epithet, referring to the female organs. [195]
(e) This is addressed to women in general.
(f) An expression of pain or sorrow, used under all circumstances. [192]
(g) The theme is here changed as if it were from herself speaking. This is a common device in all kinds of songs.
(h) [illegible] was supposed to be the father of Sun's child.

Mourning Songs

Mourning songs excel all other Bella Coola compositions in length, complexity, and wealth of detail. Especially those composed for mighty chiefs contain numerous references to the ancestral history of the deceased and mention incidents referred to in origin myths, a source of pride to the survivors and of envy to those who listen. 533* [765] [766]

[illegible]

1 [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Why has my son been [illegible]? Tears, ye who are [illegible] of foreign [illegible]!

APPENDIX D

[illegible]

[illegible]: One of the first men to settle in the Dove River valley in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: 1—"Right Hand": Wives of a Dove repository derived from a superpersonal consciousness.
2—Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.

[illegible]: Intangible social prerogative of including others. [illegible]

[illegible]: Being sung by a Bella Coola woman on Memory from apparent death. [illegible]

[illegible]: Regular meetings given to a male child. [illegible]

[illegible]: "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [illegible]

[illegible]: Rule after moons, unfragmentarylized. The possibility exists to rule that moons after visitors thereby. [illegible]

[illegible]: "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [illegible]

[illegible]: Form of superstition applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [illegible]

[illegible]: Outright honoured of a prerogative or marriage. [illegible]

[illegible]: Dependent on a new location. [illegible]

[illegible]: Father's brother or mother's brother. [illegible]

[illegible]: Tunnels. [illegible]

[illegible]: Dangerous power such as is present at various possible places. [illegible]

[illegible]: One of the moons of the summer gall. [illegible]

[illegible]: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [illegible]

[illegible]: 1—Pure supernatural being, the significance being "Unusual".
2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for power, the large wood whistle.
4—Other whistle.
5—Song.
6—Earlier name of one of the first men to settle on Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [illegible]

[illegible]: Part of a possible repository. [illegible]

[illegible]: Contrived Bella Coola member. [illegible]

[illegible]: Wooden shovel. [illegible]

[illegible]: "Where Grass Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River. [illegible]

[illegible]: Contrived Qualicum chief living in the late century. [illegible]

[illegible]: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made for a desperation purpose. [illegible]
2—Individual making such a journey. [illegible]

[illegible]: 1—Daughter of the repository gall.
2—Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman. [illegible]

[illegible]: Place where healing power is purchased. [illegible]

[illegible]: Synonym for [illegible], the supernatural being associated with small [illegible]. [illegible]

[illegible]: Earlier figure or object used in the first dance which serves as protection or shield, especially for the man's genital or anus. [illegible]

[illegible]: Actual goods used for the "Opening" the first public ceremonies [illegible] of a forthcoming marriage. [illegible]

[illegible]: Unmarried mother. [illegible]

[illegible]: To perform the services of a herald to a woman, especially the proper direction of all details thus. The word [illegible] may be connected with this. [illegible]

[illegible] 614
[illegible] 532
[illegible] 423
[illegible] 556
[illegible] [567]
[illegible] [568]
[illegible] [115]
[illegible] 641
[illegible] 424
[illegible] 551
[illegible] 556
[illegible] 575
[illegible] 424
[illegible] 575
[illegible] 614
[illegible] [626]
[illegible] 556
[illegible] 426
[illegible] 575
[illegible] 773
[illegible] 776

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NES Bellacoola NES

every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he rises promptly. The first six of these deities are grouped in pairs, and are followed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, and rainbow. In the kl'ulat these deities make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xo'nielem and Xmaxmalil'ua wear the design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Xo'nielem by a double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xmaxmalil'ua has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Alemkl'ila and Alemalil'ua wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The fifth Q'ema(mak)'ila and Q'o'nielem have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qala'ewa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next in order, Kalil'ilas (who wants to have blankets first), wears the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, A'lemi'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called L'ilas'q'ilil.ilas (the eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. The figures in several legends as standing previous and personal by the people whom she has visited.

The sisa'k', which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of the class, is presided over by a being that lives in the sea. A man who had gone out hunting met the sisa'k' and was instructed by him in the secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he commenced to enter. Then he danced the sisa'k' and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with tails of sea-lion skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sea. Ever since that time the Di'ituls dance the sisa'k'. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each class its secrets. Each class has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the sisa'k' only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are the sacred possessions of each class. All class, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a class are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various class, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the class to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisa'k'. A person can not take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nank'ila'ula, the Indian, to whom I in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,* either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk. [211] [771]

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

342

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

594 [151] 594 868 855 861

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 369), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

594 869

*Since the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This account is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included. [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

with the others, including the one who had just been leader, as followers. It is said that there was rarely friction among the joint husbands, since each realized that his turn would come as head of the household, and meanwhile the wife endeavoured to share her favours indiscriminately. The children were considered equally the offspring of each husband, thus automatically acquiring membership in several ancestral families. Such were regarded as indeed fortunate, provided with every potential means of assistance in the struggle of life. 595 556 [851]

Recognizing its importance, every effort was made to verify this information. Further questioning elicited the statement that the informant had never seen a case of this, though he asserted that when a young man he had often heard of it and that the custom had then only recently died out. Another old man and an elderly woman confirmed the above statement almost word for word, and each added that it was well known when they were young, though they had never actually seen it in practice. One man believed that the custom had formerly prevailed in several parts of the coast, and said that he had heard of its occurrence among the "Kwatrine" people near Newitte. Considering the reliability of his informants, the writer gives as his personal belief that the institution of polyandry among the daughters of chiefs occurred in Bella Coola not many years ago. Knowledge of the term of address for co-husband, already given, is strong evidence in support of this view. 128 595 556

DISCREDITABLE MARRIAGES

Since it has been assumed that Y is the daughter of a chief, properly married with due formality, it is necessary to digress still further from the account of her relations with X to describe connections of a less creditable nature. The most common of these was with slaves. Though frowned upon by all Bella Coola ethics, such alliances, of a permanent nature, do not appear to have been rare. In some cases it was a man who thus demeaned himself, in some a woman. Since no slave could provide the goods necessary for an elaborate wedding, the 567 588

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The gens Spatsâ'tlt have breakers painted on the house-front, and use 532 in dances the mask of a large kind of whale (k·'ruts), of the crow, and of 342 the black bear.

The gens Tumqoâ'akyas use the mask of Ônxstaitô'ma (=the sleeper) and the eagle.

The gens Tl'ak·nemô'ot of the Nusk·'x'lstxmx use the moon (fig. 2).

The gens Ialo'stimôt of the Tâlio'mx use the raven, robin (aist'a'qoud), eagle, whale, the bird t'ôstiala (genus?), and s'allsâ'ots, the flood-tide. They have sun, moon, and stars painted on the house-front, and the wasp'nts suspended from the beams of the roof (see p. 420).

The highest gens of Nôtl'x'l has the name Smô'xa (=the north wind). He has the mountain Sawâ'kxx surmounted by a mackerel sky, and with clouds on its sides, painted on his house-front (fig. 3). Another object belonging to his crest represents waves.

614 The children belong to the gens of either father or mother, the deci-● 851 sion being left to the choice of the parents.

Secret Societies and the Potlatch.

171 The social organization, festivals, and secret societies of the Bilqula 575 are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the Sisan'kx, and the Kâ'sôt. The Sisan'kx corresponds to the Tlôola'qa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the Kâ'sôt to the Ts'êtsâ'êk·a. The Bilqula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine 556 brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Qê'mtslos, to whose 773 care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful 777

Fig. 4.—Mask representing Qê'mtslos.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Qêmqêmalâ'otla.

[532]
[575]

house in the far east, and arises él él every morning when the sun rises. He has to take care that the sun rises properly. The first six of these deities

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [846] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'sin'eta, for ten days), else [825] the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [852] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member [556] of the Kû'siût, when it is given its Kû'siût name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qû'mteioa name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [262] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His [431] friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day.
He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn [431] gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest.
A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man.
At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisna'kn secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may 174 177 716 [195] words of Kwakiutl derivation will become clear by a glance at the following list, which contains words that can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin:—

c'ukuula = shaman.
Ala' = speaker.
E'mank'in (p. 94) (Kwakiutl, Ha'mank'in) = the greatest chief.
Hun'hun (p. 102) = a fabulous bird.
x'E'qoq'ila = the copper maker.
x'E'qoqilla = sister of Hamamak'ula (the reading, the designation "woman" in Kwakiutl).
Lagamal' = mythological name of chief.
Mil'ak'ilas.
Mouna'i (p. 98).
Nu'hua = the country of the salmon (p. 98) (Kwakiutl, nu') = salmon.
Na'ulila (pp. 44, 60).
O'mank'in (p. 70) = the god O'mank.
O'mamanak (p. 70).
Oma'mank'ila (Kwakiutl, O'ma'ma'mank'ila) = the traditional sun.
Pa'ium.
Qoalanala'ia (p. 40).
Q'ana'qen (p. 70) = the wealthy man.
Q'E'nagilla (p. 44) = rich or opposite side of river.
Q'E'nanaxa (p. 44) = wealthy or south of river.
Sana'yilila (p. 14) = the one who must be worshipped.
u'ulas = a fabulous fish or snake (pp. 18, 44, 98).
Sacrapil'ula (p. 14).
Ta'ipanu (p. 98) = the loon.
Ta'ua'ua (p. 98) = wolf.
Ya'a'k'ianat (p. 70) = the greatest chief.

174 177 424 614 [521] With these names and customs the clan traditions must have found their way to the Bella Coola, but their social organization differed fundamentally from that of the Bella Bella branch of the Kwakiutl. While the latter, owing to intimate contact with the northern tribes, had adopted the four-clan system with prevalent maternal descent, the Bella Coola were still distinctly divided into village communities that were not exogamic. It seems very likely that the jealousy with which the ownership of a clan tradition was guarded by the Coast tribes was very early introduced among the Bella Coola. Two means were available for preventing outsiders from acquiring the traditions. Among the Coast tribes with prevailing maternal institutions, among whom a limited number of clans existed, the ordinary law of inheritance was sufficient to retain the tradition inside of the clan. Not so among the Bella Coola. If their organization at an early time was similar to that of the Coast Salish, it is likely that the child was counted as well a member of the father's as of the mother's family, although the young woman generally moved to the village occupied by her husband. If the child belonged to the families of both parents, it had the right to use the tradition of either family; and consequently in the course of a few generations, the traditions acquired by each family would have spread practically over the whole tribe. There were only two methods possible to avoid this result. The one was to prevent marriages outside the village community; and this method would seem to have been most natural for a tribe organized in village communities, members of which were allowed to intermarry. The other method would have been to regulate the laws of inheritance in such a way that the child had to

174 182 424 614 [591] [851] [621]

of the father or the mother. In June, 1922, a Bella Coola girl had reached the age of about six months without having received a name. There was much adverse criticism about the parsimony of her father's father and her mother's father, who were held equally to blame, but who had really been deterred by fear of the law prohibiting the potlatch. 612 614 553

As a child grows older he is helped in the performance of ceremonial rites by his parents and by their brothers and sisters. In this, too, it is considered a mark of poverty if only the parents take part. If a man's own children do not appear likely to carry on the traditions of his ancestral family, he has no hesitation in favouring the children of either a brother or sister, since, like his own, they are all members of the same ancestral family. Especially in Kimsquit* it is customary for a man to help his sisters' children; not that there is any lack of knowledge of the real father, but rather as a mark of respect and family feeling displayed by a man to his sister. Moreover, in both Bella Coola proper and in Kimsquit, it is most improper for a name which a man has raised to a position of dignity by the expenditure of much goods to be passed to his own son; it should go to a distant relative. When a father validates a name for his child it should be one long dormant. 593 604 852 [558] [614] [553]

One aspect of the manner in which the family merges imperceptibly into the ancestral family can be seen in the inheritance of names. When a man calls his relatives together to make his will he is guided in the choice of recipients by the characteristics of his children. An able son receives much from his father, but lazy children are slighted without hesitation. This is particularly true of names with which are bound up valuable dance prerogatives, whereas, as previously mentioned, ancestral names of which the importance depends 593 614 428 553

*According to an intelligent Bella Coola informant, a Bella Bella pays greater attention to the children of his brothers and sisters than to his own offspring, and the same man expressed the opinion that the Kimsquit practice was due to Bella Bella influence. Kimsquit informants denied this, though emphasizing the important part taken by an uncle in obtaining prerogatives for his sisters' children, in some cases to the detriment of his own, which is rare in Bella Coola. [184] [177] ceremony. This can be described here, since, although not closely associated with the potlatch, it serves to teach children the principles of present-giving and hospitalities. February is the proper month for naming-ceremonies, although preliminary arrangements are made early in the winter. A chief who has a son or daughter about ten or twelve years of age may decide to use some of his food, and a small part of his wealth, for the benefit of the child. With the assistance of his relatives, the father begins making large numbers of toy canoes, miniature bows and arrows, small baskets, and models of all other types of articles commonly given away at potlatches. The manufacture of these requires several months, but towards the end of January they are nearly ready.

A name must then be chosen for the child. Since a naming-ceremony dance is a humorous, non-sacred affair, a naming-ceremony name is not embedded in a myth, but is drawn from some story. Occasionally, parents decide on a new one, but more often the designation selected is one used for the same purpose by a grandparent of the child. There is no rivalry with regard to names of this type, and one of them can be re-used without asking consent of the last incumbent, although permission would never be refused. There must be a song with each name and the grandparents and other elderly relatives teach this to a number of boys who are to act as singers. The words may have been remembered from a previous occasion; if not, a simple theme is composed by one of the old people having some reference to the name about to be conferred. For example, one appellation of this type is Tsimsa, Fawn, and the accompanying words are:

"We hear that Deer has borne a child."

Another name is Kolos, Beaver, and the song: "Be of good cheer, the Beaver is coming."

A third song is, "Go outside under the house like a dog."

Occasionally a small incident in an ancestral myth is used. The teaching of the song to the juvenile singers is a source of constant merriment; the parents and grandparents are the

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NKA

852 principal instructors, aided by the professional musicians.
867 Boys are always willing to act as singers for the practice they [533] receive, and the gifts they will acquire. Other lads are chosen to act as heralds, an effort being made in each case to pick those likely to pursue these professions.

[196] The day finally selected for the ceremony is in February, on a date when nothing of importance is taking place. The juvenile heralds summon the child guests, who have been invited in accordance with the rules governing a potlatch, especial care being taken to omit none to whom the child donor is indebted. His father carefully instructs him in this matter, thus impressing on his son's mind one of the fundamental points of Bella Coola life. In the late afternoon, when all have [535] assembled, the boy singers beat out the donor's song and he dances to it. It may be in the nature of a nuseé, a'alé, or kusiut dance, according to the wishes of his parents. In many cases, one of the grandparents or some other old relative likewise dances to the song, using whatever style he chooses. There is no ceremonial significance to the ceremony and all enjoy themselves immensely, especially the adult guests. After
[553] the dancing, the new name is announced and presents are given to the guests. The father of the young donor carefully instructs him as to the scale of his gifts, emphasizing the necessity of rewarding the singers and heralds, and of repaying with interest those children from whom he has received favours. In this way, the ceremony serves as a practical example of how to conduct a potlatch. The parents of the donor always provide some tasty food for the occasion, and this is distributed after [556] the gifts have been handed round. The necessity for food and presents makes it impossible for any but the children of chiefs to enjoy this training.

After the ceremony, the children parade up and down the sidewalk in front of the houses, singing boisterously. The performance has been for their benefit and they wish to "show off." One night completes the affair, but the following afternoon another child may summon his comrades to a similar

Swanton II-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

ceremony. The child sings first beat out the song of the present donor, then that of his predecessor, to which the latter dances once again. If food is plentiful, nuxúkáwy ceremonies may be carried out every day for several weeks, or a year or two may elapse without one. A child's song is remembered from year to year and he dances whenever it is beaten out. The name acquired in this way is used semi-jocularly by a lad's comrades. After marriage, it is considered unfitting for a youth to be concerned with nuxúkáwy and he normally becomes an a'ell.

Ceremonies of this kind have been discontinued for many years and it was impossible to obtain detailed accounts. The main features are clear: they served to instruct children in the methods of present-giving. According to one informant, there were two types of nuxúkáwy ceremonial; one of the humorous pattern above described in which, however, food alone was given away, and another in which miniature presents were distributed. This man believed that the latter was only possible for the children of wealthy chiefs, and that on such occasions the themes consisted of small incidents in the family myth. In either case, the importance of ceremonial can be judged from the manner in which it was impressed upon mere children.

[533] [177] Meanwhile the rest of the population was sitting near the coffin. They were no special dress or other mark of grief. Samuel King and some of his relatives had brought bundles containing Jessie's clothing, pots, pans, and other personal possessions, which they set down near the coffin. About two o'clock the band gathered and began to play, the favourite selection being "Annie Laurie." This went on for some time after the return of the chiefs from Captain Schooner's house. They had decided that Tilla Jenny, one of Captain Schooner's distant relatives, should carry the fire in front of the body. When all was ready she lit a bundle of rags, placed it in a pot, and set off for the cemetery, followed by all in a straggling and orderless procession. Some strong young men bore the coffin, for Jessie must have weighed over two hundred pounds; some brought tools for digging the grave; others took the bundles of clothing. There was no fixed allotment of tasks; a man or woman carried anything or nothing according to his or her wish.

The cemetery is situated about fifty yards behind the old village of Nuxqa'a. The heavy timber has all been cut away and second growth has sprung up everywhere except around the newer graves. Captain Schooner had decided that his daughter should be buried near several of her relatives, and it was to this spot that Jenny led the procession. She set the pot down near the site of the grave, and the coffin likewise was placed on the ground nearby. Captain Schooner, Jim Pollard, and a few of the other old men chose the exact situation and a number of the young men began to dig. Jenny, and other women, added pieces of Jessie's clothing to the fire so that a constant small blaze was kept up. As the grave was being dug [533] the band performed at intervals, while the women sat wailing near the fire. Other men and women were seated on the ground or walking around idly near the grave, talking but seldom laughing, while the Carriers were a little farther away. [52] Children were playing around. The grave was dug about five feet deep, in shape corresponding to the coffin, but orientation elder Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner, with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a hereditary chief but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified hereditary chiefs. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 P.M. all had left the scene.

[illegible] (1922-1924) 1948
[illegible]

In view of the large number of guests expected it had been decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other. About 6.30 P.M. the singers, Nebuchadnezzar, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage. Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day, Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again. Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed beside a large iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim To-Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 P.M. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and massed at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved for the Carrion and other foreigners. The cook began to ladle the rice into basins provided by Captain Schooner; these were taken by some of the younger men who poured helpings into the dishes of the guests. Spoons had been forgotten, and there was delay until these were provided by slivers split from a block of wood for the purpose. Contrary to ancient usage, no attempt was made to serve food to the guests in order of their rank. Men, women, and children were sitting everywhere, the infants kept moving around and crying continually throughout the performance, but no one seemed to be disturbed thereby.

When everyone had eaten, Nebuchadnezzar, who had been sitting facing the other singers, knelt on the floor to attract attention and then rose to speak. He asked the help of all to make the ceremony a success, and thus assuage the grief of the bereaved relatives.

Joe Williams and his daughter had taken their places on the right-hand side of the hall and had requested Willie Mack, a fluent speaker and influential chief, to assist them in announcing the financial transactions. They spread a blanket on the floor on which the bills were counted, and beside this Willie knelt. Joe gave him a sum of money, which was counted and re-counted; Willie then held it up in the vain hope that it could be seen by everyone in the hall. He announced the amount, also that it was to ransom (the divorced) Mrs. George Nelson from her late husband, and that it would "make clean the place where she sat." A young man delivered the money to George who added it to the general stock for later distribution. Next a copper was produced, held up, and presented to him for the same purpose. Meanwhile Joe, assisted by his mother and other relatives, had been counting the money which they proposed to give to Captain Schooner in settlement of the previously contracted debt. One hundred and fifty dollars were produced and handed to Willie Mack, who held them up and announced that it was in return for the $100 given by Captain Schooner on a previous occasion to Joe Williams, his wife, his son, his daughter, his mother, and his stepfather. The bills

G:Boas E-1 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEG Bellacoola NEG

[94] traditional authorities. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go near the ocean for a year (according to Nuk'ulc'ata, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

[95] The child is now given its first name. On this occasion the whole tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Kl'ulut, when it is given its Kl'ulut name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qi'ulaiwa name.

[96] When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [97] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [98] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose her senses, or her cough would be transformed into a long hook. She [99] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1887, p. 63).

[100] If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [101] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such case the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [102] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and [103] accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and [104] four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [105] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his tlaxa'ix secrets as soon as the pair have their first child. [106] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

[107] In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

1:36 Swanton R-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and 844 suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Sasiawma, though invisible, is present on every occasion [796]
the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, [797] but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary.
The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay [845] hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to [846] cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of [465] $2.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother 853 would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and 854 carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house
it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing.
When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. [846]
Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of [165] love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive
the perils of infancy.

the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring, and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh eulachon. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deserted by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recommenced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as remnants of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term ixwust, applied to such an one, is among the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex
789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

848 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)
789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of xnamnmp in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk
757 Heat pods of Sadaw Ipankdjadaw (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy
789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and put it with the other, saying:
825 "Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life
Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:
825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.
886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so enmeshed are killed.

Fr. Smith E-1 [illegible] NEA Bellevale NEA Carver NEA
Tolmhan NE15

RANUNCULACEAE, BUTTERCUP FAMILY

B
T 137
757

Anemone quinquefolia Pers. (A. multifida Poir.), Wood-Flower

Folk Cooks: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Plant, except roots, boiled and decoction taken internally for any sickness. Leaves of crushed leaves tried for cold in the head or lungs; for this purpose leaves sometimes placed in water and heated.

Gibbons: Handfuls eaten in sweat bath for rheumatism. A decoction of the plant sometimes used for the same purpose.

Thalictrum pseudoflavum Hort., False Meadow Rue

B
T 137
757

Folk Cooks: Roots pounded in a little water, and to resulting mass, covered with a little soft bark of the red or yellow cedar, applied as a poultice to boils and left on for half a day or a day. Said to promote suppuration and opening of the boil, but to cause such intense burning that it could not be applied to children. Considered too strong than the tall buttercup (page 57), but, like it, preferred to the cow parsnip (page 61), which was used in the same way.

Thalictrum occidentale Gray, Meadow Rue

Gibbons: A small piece of the root chewed, and some of the juice swallowed, for headache, eye trouble, and sore legs. Loosened phlegm and possibly accelerated the circulation of the blood.

Ranunculus acris L., Tall Buttercup

Folk Cooks: Roots used as a poultice for boils in the same way as those of the false bugbane (page 57), but considered stronger and better.

CRUCIFERAE, MUSTARD FAMILY

T
[752]

Sisymbrium officinale Eng., A Hedge Mustard

Gibbons: Mashed and applied to bad cuts.

CRASSULACEAE, ORPINE FAMILY

B [853]

Cotyledon spathulifolium Hook., Stonecrop

Folk Cooks: Leaves of the plant before it blossomed eaten to start the flow of milk. Said to take effect in one day. Leaves warmed and applied externally for the same purpose.

SAXIFRAGACEAE, SAXIFRAGE FAMILY

B 137
757

Ribes bracteosum Dougl., Blue Currant

Folk Cooks: See tideland spruce, page 51.

Ribes laxiflorum Pursh. var., Currant

Folk Cooks: Roots boiled in a very small box with hot stones and the weak decoction used each day for washing the eyes when filled with matter.

See also lady fern (page 48).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

C [757]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

as easy as possible. Women seldom experience difficulty and 844 suffer, on the whole, less than do white mothers. It is believed that Sasiarwax, though invisible, is present on every occasion [776]
the rendering of assistance at childbirth is his one kindly act.

The umbilical cord was formerly cut with a mussel shell, [177]
but for many years the use of a metal knife has been customary.
The after-birth usually comes away easily, but if there is delay, [845] hot ashes are placed around the feet and at the back of the woman to accelerate its expulsion. It is immediately buried or placed beneath a large tree in the forest; if burnt, the infant will always be weakly. While one of the assistants disposes of it, another washes the new-born child. The cloths and dishes used for this purpose are burnt; failure to do so is believed to [826] cause the child to become blind through a white film forming over the eyeballs. Then the mother and midwives return to the house with the infant, who is a source of tremendous interest to the community. It is proper for the father to recompense the attendants at once, in accordance with their skill and his generosity. A woman who has had several children often assists the daughter of a friend, then, as she gains more experience, her reputation grows and her help is more commonly sought. At the time of this study, 1922, the sum of [465] $2.50 was considered suitable recompense for a fairly proficient midwife.

A new-born child takes the breast readily and a mother 853 would be considered harsh indeed if she failed to suckle her infant whenever it cried, since scientific hours for feeding are not known. A child is wrapped in a shawl or a blanket and 854 carried by the mother wherever she goes; when in the house
it sprawls contentedly on the floor, unhampered by clothing.
When the umbilical cord falls, it is preserved by the mother. [846]
Soon after birth, the parents make provision for their child's welfare by magical means (I, p. 700). The heavy infantile death-rate of the Bella Coola cannot be attributed to lack of [165] love or care on the part of parents, but the attention lavished is commonly not of the kind that assists a weakly child to survive
the perils of infancy.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 rebuked. They grow up in the open environment of the [861] houses, absorbing more of their lore by watching and imitating than by actual instruction. Their care devolves chiefly [854] on the mother, although at any ceremony the father will be seen arriving with the baby in his arms, while his wife leads another child. Nurses are unknown and the parents take their children with them on all occasions; if it is necessary for a mother to be absent on some arduous toil, her child will be entrusted to a grandmother or other elderly relative.
606 There are no avoidances between the young people and their parents-in-law.

602 The obligation of present-giving does not stop with the 431 marriage ceremony. Whenever X gives a kusiut dance or other ceremony, Y's relatives are expected to contribute. It is felt that the weight of the presents given them during the period of engagement and at the wedding has become too heavy, and they throw this off by lavish giving. No count is kept of the value of gifts bestowed or received, though it is known that the family of the woman loses financially in the end. The father of many daughters is regarded as an unfortunate individual, who is always poor and overworked through the necessity of [554] providing for them. By so doing, however, he increases his own prestige, and the Bella Coola have the happy sentiment that such a man manages to get along some way; perhaps necessity rouses his ambition. Likewise X's relatives contribute to any ritual carried out by Y's father. If, for example, one of his wife's relatives dies, X and his friends may wish to contribute towards the funeral expenses. In fact, any ceremonial serves as an excuse for relatives by marriage to donate [556] goods and thus demonstrate publicly their influence, importance, and generosity.

602 The concept of mutual help between families who have 476 intermarried is one that lasts for generations. In 1922 there was in Bella Coola an old Kimsquit man who had left home some forty years earlier and had since lived in Smith Inlet where he married and had a boy. On the death of his wife, this

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539 tune, remembering what the latter had told him the previous evening.
* 756 He feared to follow his friend's track, and, as night came on, closed the
* 787 tent and went to sleep, with the dog beside him. When it was quite dark he was wakened by the sound of footsteps and the tapping of a stick, and concluded that his partner was returning. The tent-flap was untied, as if by a person entering, but Alyimlaix could see nothing, so he kicked the dog to waken it and the animal began to bark furiously. At length he heard the steps withdraw and grow fainter as they climbed the mountain. Then Alyimlaix realized that his friend was dead, and that it was his life, [775] flashing round to visit his companions, which had come to him. Terrified, he lay awake all night with a blazing fire, and fled the next morning.

Alyimlaix chanced to meet several canoes soon after he had quitted his camp, and when he had told his story, their occupants turned back to hunt for Nuuazwmolsk. About eighteen men searched all that day unsuccessfully, but a few days later another party found the corpse of the missing hunter. Presumably he had fired at the goat, though whether he struck it or not was not known, and the animal had charged. A wound in Nuuazwmolsk's groin showed where one of the horns had pierced him, and the two had rolled together to death over a precipice, the bodies becoming slightly separated in the fall.

Even if Nuuazwmolsk had struck the goat it would not have availed him, since he was doomed to death. Not only had he taken great risks in hunting within one year of his previous experience, but his wife had been careless during his absence. He had long practised continence, and [785] thereby was in a clean condition such as is approved by animals, and [961] other supernatural beings, but this very condition rendered him peculiarly susceptible to any breaking of taboos by his wife. She had so far forgotten herself as to indulge in swinging when he was on the mountain, so that his death was inevitable. Nuuazwmolsk's relatives were very angry and prophesied that she would soon die. They were right, though whether her death was caused by a sorcerer, or by the accumulative power of their thoughts, is a matter no one can determine.

THE Tlāqmā·ks

In the beginning of time, when Alqantīn sent down Kālālas to this earth, he used his own initiative and travelled to the east for abalone-shell and to the west for copper. On returning to his settlement, he determined to try to lure to it a supernatural being, of whose existence he was aware from his previous life in the land above. Accordingly, he fashioned some of the copper into jingling bangles, which he fastened to [177] the ropes of his infant's cradle. Before the introduction of white men's [854] cradles, the Bella Coola were accustomed to tie a child in a cloth and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

suspend the bundle by ropes from a stick which projected horizontally from the wall. It was to these ropes that Kā'lāk'ī tied the bangles, so that they jingled with every movement of the child.

Ālqanātm heard this peculiar noise from his house in the land above and sent a Ilāqmā-ks, a diminutive supernatural being of human form, which lives on air, to investigate. The creature perched on the cradle rope where Kā'lāk'ī saw it. Owing to his former life in the land above he knew what it was, and how to deal with it, so he quickly threw over it a blanket which he had frequently used.[11] This brought him supernatural good fortune. He concealed the Ilāqmā-ks for safety in an old chequer-work root sack, and left it lying on the floor.

Wealth flowed in upon him so that he was able to give a potlatch every year. At one of them he gave his infant daughter, the occupant of the cradle, the name Ālāqmā-ks, which has been handed down from generation to generation, and has recently been given to a Bella Bella child. Kā'lāk'ī's prosperity roused the jealousy of his fellows so that they murdered him, but his children still had the Ilāqmā-ks and they continued to prosper. At last their enemies slew them too, sparing only one small boy.

This orphan led a precarious existence. He was refused admission to what had been his father's house and was forced to live in the space between the floor and the ground below, while his food was taken from the refuse heaps. In time he grew to young manhood, frequently brooding on the fate of his relatives and hoping for revenge. One day he crossed the river, ascended a mountain, and found there a large cave, where he lay down to sleep, wrapped in a bear-skin. A supernatural being came to him.

"I have watched your woes," said the stranger, "and I will help you if you are brave. You must accompany me to my land. The road is dangerous, and if you should lose me it would be disastrous to you, so keep close."

They took a difficult path down through the earth to the land of the dead below.

"I will keep you here for a night and teach you," said the supernatural one as he gave the boy a stick in which was power.

"You must take this," he said, "and go at night to your father's house. Throw the stick at one of those who killed your father. It will rebound to you, after leaving your enemy dead without a mark on his body. Do this every night, killing only one man at a time, until you have slain all the murderers, but be careful not to harm anyone else."

Although he had not at first revealed himself, the being from whom [11] A new one would have been useless.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

[773] ɸwalnaxa: 1—Tally post, one of the supernatural elements possessed by all human beings.

[777] 2—Invisible supernatural element which constantly moves before the face.

ɸwalnaxa; incorr., ɸwalnaxsa, (rarely, ɸwalnxa): Crest.

[825] ɸwax: Raven.

ɸwax: Big old male mountain goat.

ɸwaxila: ɸompɛ:s man living in the last century.

ɸwaqhlalis: Celebrated Kwakiutl chief.

ɸwaqwax-nanam: Name of a shaman who received his power from Raven.

ɸwarnats: One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.

[601] ɸwarnaw: Fourth oldest, or youngest, brother or sister.

ɸwa'yakks: Steller's jay.

ɸwakit: Kimsquit woman.

[825] ɸwana: Woman's pubic hair.

ɸwats: Sea-lion cub.

[431] ɸwem: Those who are present and receive gifts when an announcement of a marriage is first made.

ɸwets: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

ɸwia'xem: A revelation, such as the sight of a supernatural being or object usually concealed.

[825] ɸwiaki: Yearling seal.

ɸwimap: Word used in inviting to a marriage announcement.

ɸwinas: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

ɸwiqnaxaxna: Kwakiutl supernatural being, said to be identical with ɸyunxm.

ɸwistaklit": Nuxqual name of a Kimsquit man.

ɸwiyai: Bella Bella village west of Namu.

ɸwl: Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.

ɸwla(ya): Professional female marriage drumer who came down to Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

ɸwlaxwaa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

ɸwlisil, "Place of Herbage": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.

ɸwnia: Inspiration, in the sense of the source of a hamatsa dancer's power of thought.

[583] ɸwsalt: Village west of Kwatna, settled in the beginning of time.

ɸwshanɸsit: Actual goods used for the repurchase of a wife.

ɸwyaxitna: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit chief.

[854] ɸwtal: Cradle.

ɸwu'nat': Kwiat name of a Bella Coola woman.

ɸwu-a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[581] ɸ"xila: The noble and rightful sentiments engendered in both families by an elaborate marriage, either real or fictitious. The word embodies the concepts of financial interdependence and of consequent mutual strength.

[195] ɸwnkim: The transference of activities to a new sphere; the term is used, rhetorically, when referring to the death of a skilled craftsman.

S

saik: 1—Skeleton.

2—Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Saikwaiv-xem: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.

sai-mis ɸlaiq: The constant blinking of the eyes.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342 in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,* either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk. [211] [778]

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

594 [851] 594 868 855 861

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 369), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

594 869

*Since the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This account is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included. [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

before their birth. When the mother of the twin described in the last paragraph was awaiting delivery in a temporary shelter in the woods, its roof fell, cutting her head. The old woman who mentioned this occurrence stated that both her grandmother, the Sockeye Salmon, and her sister, a Spring Salmon, though still unborn, were aware of the accident and remembered the comments of the midwife. 845

On account of their uncanny power, twins are considered weaklings and usually die young in spite of the care lavished upon them and the taboos observed by their parents.[2] A dead twin, instead of being buried, is put in a box which is placed in a tree far away from the village. Every year the river changes its course, eating into its banks in order to reach the tree containing the body, and this continues until it reaches its goal and sweeps away tree and coffin. 766 [823]

Childhood Instruction

When working in the field, an anthropologist almost inevitably concentrates upon ceremonials and other epochs in an individual's life, to the detriment of the daily routine which in Bella Coola, as everywhere else, is fundamentally important although it defies description on account of its intangibility. A child grows up in a large house, occupied by several families, in which there is little privacy. The parents provide food and clothing, but more distant relatives take a greater share of responsibility for this than do white people. When food is being given out, a child soon learns that he will be given some of it, and that he will have his portion in any distribution of presents. Furniture, bedding, and other necessities are reduced to a minimum, but a boy or girl is welcome to sleep with relatives should his own parents wish to go hunting or fishing. The sense of power possessed by a Bella Coola with many relations is largely intangible, but it has practical applications as 114 855 [867] [867]

[2] It is probable that the arduous life led by a twin and its parents during the first year after birth lessens its chances of survival. Needless to say, this explanation does not find favour with the Bella Coola.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a hear relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of 867 stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed
[732] man, he is told of Ałałałs, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thus boast that she has three sets of teeth, but as the practice has not found favour in Bella Coola, it is little to her advantage.[8] 585 [177]

These complicated marriage rites are necessary to satisfy the pride of the two families in their origin myths, and the need to establish the resultant children in the paths of their ancestors. Among slaves or others who lack ancestral prerogatives, marriage is an affair of slight worth. Such persons simply live together with little ceremony, though they always try to give at least a feast so that there may be witnesses of the transaction. It is immaterial whether or not they marry their own relatives, since no ancestral prerogatives are to be transmitted. [556] [567] [581]

MARRIED LIFE

Y usually lives in the house of X's father, though economic circumstances may compel her husband to live in her home. If the parents are very wealthy, a house may be built for the young people, but usually their home is one of the bedrooms in the house of X's father; this patrilocal residence exposes Y not only to good advice from her mother-in-law, but often to caustic criticism. The married life of X and Y does not differ materially from that of other young couples in any part of the world, and is accordingly difficult to describe. Although love rarely enters into the original choice of a mate, a serviceable substitute is found in the mutual respect for each other's ancestry, and the knowledge of the importance of the rites performed with the aid of each other's elderly relatives. The young people realize that marriage affects the families of both, and accordingly accept it as a matter of course. The Bella Coola are fond of children. Their birth is a matter of sincere rejoicing, partly because it binds the two families more closely together, but parental affection is one of the strongest Bella Coola characteristics. The parents usually spoil their children; infants, especially, are never chastised and rarely 591 [556] 593 855 [861]

[8] The board used on this occasion was purchased for the National Museum of Canada, Ottawa.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-192) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 rebuked. They grow up in the open environment of the [861] houses, absorbing more of their lore by watching and imitat-[854] ing than by actual instruction. Their care devolves chiefly on the mother, although at any ceremony the father will be seen arriving with the baby in his arms, while his wife leads another child. Nurses are unknown and the parents take their children with them on all occasions; if it is necessary for a mother to be absent on some arduous toil, her child will be entrusted to a grandmother or other elderly relative.
606 There are no avoidances between the young people and their parents-in-law.

602 The obligation of present-giving does not stop with the 431 marriage ceremony. Whenever X gives a kusiut dance or other ceremony, Y's relatives are expected to contribute. It is felt that the weight of the presents given them during the period of engagement and at the wedding has become too heavy, and they throw this off by lavish giving. No count is kept of the value of gifts bestowed or received, though it is known that the family of the woman lose financially in the end. The father of many daughters is regarded as an unfortunate individual, who is always poor and overworked through the necessity of [554] providing for them. By so doing, however, he increases his own prestige, and the Bella Coola have the happy sentiment that such a man manages to get along some way; perhaps necessity rouses his ambition. Likewise X's relatives contribute to any ritual carried out by Y's father. If, for example, one of his wife's relatives dies, X and his friends may wish to contribute towards the funeral expenses. In fact, any cere-
[556] monial serves as an excuse for relatives by marriage to donate goods and thus demonstrate publicly their influence, importance, and generosity.

602 The concept of mutual help between families who have 476 intermarried is one that lasts for generations. In 1922 there was in Bella Coola an old Kimsquit man who had left home some forty years earlier and had since lived in Smith Inlet where he married and had a boy. On the death of his wife, this

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 the science of medicine. The Bella Coola are familiar with 789 many acts which cause definite results. To place a new-born girl in contact with the representation of a beautiful woman [856] so that she may grow up to be like her, seems false science,
[752] magic, to the white man; whereas the application of splints and gum to a fractured limb is a medical treatment, crude perhaps, but definitely scientific. The two are identical to the Bella Coola. They do not ask why or how a result follows, they merely know that it does. Such lore has been handed down from time immemorial; it is steeped in the sanctity of antiquity and hallowed by the knowledge that their ancestors have done the same for generations. All such acts may be described as "medicines," for so they appear to those who practise them. To separate them into magical and scientific categories would misrepresent the native point of view; the only division that can be made is between those that cause, and those that prevent or cure. Even in this there is some overlap. A medicine that cures a child from crying likewise causes him to be placid and amiable; so, too, medicines of a preventive nature comprise elements of both types. The principle governing most of these is sympathetic magic, a concept which, if put in words to the Bella Coola, would be regarded as logical and scientific. The second important class of medi-
[755] cines consists of objects, either herbal or derived from the human body, which are believed to have such abundant power that they are effective against ailments of supernatural origin, or against supernatural beings themselves. Some of these have already been mentioned in connection with the attitude of the Bella Coola towards these beings of the earth, sky, and water.

754 Most curative medicines are used by the practitioner on himself; most causative, on someone else. The latter are either 755 social or anti-social, depending upon whether the result is 789 benevolent or malevolent. Shamans frequently use magical means in curing the sick and are highly regarded by the community, but medicines of the same kind may be used to kill

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Causative Medicines

MEDICINES OF INFANCY

789 To Cause Tallness

856 As soon as the umbilical cord is cut, blow upon it and pull it out; the infant will grow up to be tall and big.

The following medicines are applied four days after birth:

The infant is washed, formerly in a circular cedar or cottonwood basin, and the remedy pressed against its body while drying. Some families prefer to wait until the child is able to crawl.

To Cause Strength (three means)

[824] [825] (1) Collect four pieces of bark, each from a different tree where a grizzly bear has scratched. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over his body. This ensures him the strength of a grizzly bear.

(2) Collect four water-smoothed, green stones from the river. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over the body. After four days, return the stones to the river.

[825] (3) Warm the body of an octopus, beaver, or wolverine in the smoke of a fire and gently press the carcass against an infant's body, saying:

"Please, may he be like you."

This provides the child with the strength of the animal used.

To Cause Long Life

[886] [824] Collect four pieces of wood which have been rolled hard and smooth in a landslide. Boil them in the infant's wash-bowl, cool, then re-warm them at a fire and rub them over the body. This makes him strong and healthy, able to endure all dangers and weaknesses even those caused by a sorcerer. The principle is that the child will be as hardy as the wood proved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

itself to be by withstanding the crushing weight of stone and earth. An old Kimsquit man expressed the firm conviction that his great age was the result of this treatment soon after birth. 789 856 886 [824]

To Cause Imperviousness to Cold

Kill a water ouzel, warm it at a fire, then press it against every part of the infant's body. This makes him as heedless of cold water as the bird. A merganser may be used in the same way, or the foot of one be placed in the child's hand and patted as his fingers clutch it. 789 825 856

To Cause a Quarrelsome Disposition

Burn the nest of wasps and rub the ashes on the infant's face. He will become as bellicose and quick to resent injury as the insects. One old man who habitually beats his wife explains that this is involuntary, since he was treated in this way when a child. Fighting is no longer allowed, so the only person on whom he can exercise his martial ardour is his wife. The woman regards this treatment as a matter of course and the reason is accepted as valid by her associates. [155]

To Cause Success in Thieving

Kill a pack-rat, warm it at a fire, and rub the carcass lightly over the infant's body. This will make him as successful a thief as the animal. Other methods are to cut off a foot and pat this as the infant clutches it in his fingers, or to rub its hands with the ashes of a burnt rat.

To Cause Success in Singing

Catch a live robin or smıxmıxaxls (probably one of the thrushes), warm it at a fire, and rub it lightly against the infant's throat, saying: 533 789 825

"May he be a singer like you." 856

Then release the bird, and the child will grow up a songster. The following story is told of the power of the smıxmıxaxls's song: [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 In the beginning of time it used to sing.

789 "I shall use a spoon and eat when the Bella Coola River has burst its bounds on account of the teeming salmon in it."

825 The people used to laugh as it repeated this song year after year,

856 until the bird changed its note:

[539] "I shall use a spoon and eat when all is cold and clear. Then there will be Death instead of salmon in Bella Coola."

The next year the streams were so clear that no fish could be caught and the starving people asked the bird to return to its first song. When it did so, the water became murky so that it was possible to catch salmon once more.

The Bella Bella, not the Bella Coola, use the body of a blue jay to cause an infant to grow up with the ability to master difficult tunes in the same way that the bird has a variety of notes. The method of applying this medicine could not be learnt.

789 Most of the above medicines are well known and can be applied by any parent. If, however, a man has employed one 856 of them successfully on a number of occasions, he is often requested to use his ability for others. In such a case, the father of the benefited child is expected to reimburse his friend. [184] The application or non-application of such medicines is purely the concern of the child's family; they can use as many as they like, or none at all, according to their discretion.

The following medicines are used during the first year of life:

304 To Cause Beauty

789 Bandages of the softest undyed cedar-bark are prepared for infants of both sexes soon after birth. A woman who is a good 856 artist is requested to draw with charcoal two pictures on one 532 of the pieces of bark—of handsome men if the child is a boy, or of lovely women if a girl. An unmarked wrapping is fastened round the infant's head, then the painted one so arranged that one picture is over the forehead, the other over the occiput, and finally other plain bandages to cover the whole. These [826] are left in place for about one year. They flatten the forehead

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856 [825]

To Cause Left-handedness

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Łakwułk (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [868]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

856 789 868 To Cause Ability in Carpentry (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good carpenter to impart to him ability similar to his own. He spits on his tools and rubs these over the child's heart, saying:

"Please be a carpenter."

This is done only for male children.

(2) Cut splinters from the tools of an expert carpenter, burn them, and rub the ashes over the child's hands. This is most efficacious when performed by the carpenter himself who says as he rubs:

"Please be a carpenter."

000 To Cause Ability in Thieving

Indians from the vicinity of Sitka are said to fasten a live mouse in an infant's clothing or tie one in the cradle. This causes the child to amass riches easily, but when practised by a Sitka man and woman who were slaves of the Bella Coola it was so potent that their son grew up to be an inveterate thief.

875 856 789 To Cause Ability to See Beneath the Water

When the infant is in the cradle, kill a gull, cut out its tongue, and rub this around inside the child's mouth. Strip the feathers and lay them so that the infant sleeps upon them. This gives him the same ability as the bird to see beneath the ocean and tell where fish are to be found. This was done not many years ago to a Bella Bella child whose ability was consequently so great that it frightened his friends.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

The Kitlobe achieve this by making a child sleep upon dog hair. No instance is remembered of this having actually been practised by the Bella Coola, although, being well known, there is no reason why it should not be used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856
speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Alquntäm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished [858] possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial [785] chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far
789 into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is [785] matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[868] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Strength

Place pieces of octopus flesh in the infant's bowl and wash him with these. This causes him to grow up with the strength of the animal. 825 856 789

To Cause Understanding of the Speech of Ravens

When a child is able to toddle, but has not learnt to talk, shut him in a box and turn this upside down. Leave him alone for four days and four nights, passing in what food is necessary during darkness.

Knowledge of this medicine was learnt from ilkas, a female slave born near New Westminster who was owned by the maternal grandfather of the wife of the elderly Kimsquit man from whom this information was obtained. The slave's father had treated her in this way when an infant; while so confined she had not only learnt the language of ravens, but Cowichan, her own speech, as well. ilkas used to tell the Kimsquit people of her ability, but few believed her, though she asserted that this was a well-known Cowichan method, and her captors had their own means of imparting the same ability to their children, as well as an ancient tradition of the practice she described. One day she informed her master that the ravens had told her of the near approach of a raiding-party. He summoned the chiefs, but they laughed at the warning and disregarded it. ilkas received the same intimation for four days, and on the fourth the raiders appeared and she was vindicated.

The inversion of the box is due to the belief that ravens, when bringing news, turn over upon themselves like tumbler pigeons. The Bella Coola do not know whether the box must be so tight as to hold the child upside down.

To Cause Ceremonial Intelligence

When a child is one or two years of age, paint on its back the picture of a black bear's gall-bladder. Leave this in position for four days, then wash it off secretly in a mountain stream. A child so treated will grow up with ability to perform 856 789 532

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.
[532] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-
[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes.
[825] A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [622] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious, and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For 771 example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Alquntäm, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere washing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Agility

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Kill a squirrel, clean it, wash the entrails carefully and leave them hanging in the sun to dry for four days, then tie them around the child's stomach for four days more. It is important that the infant should not break the string. On the fourth day, remove them and hang them in the doorway of the house. On this same day, another squirrel must be killed, treated as before, and its viscera allowed to dry for four days. The child wears these in the same way for four days, when they too are hung in the doorway. A third squirrel, and finally a fourth, is killed and made use of in precisely the same manner. When the final set of entrails has been hung up, the four are left suspended for four days, till the twenty-eighth after the killing of the first animal, when the father takes them to the forest and deposits them beneath some projecting rock where no water can penetrate and where they will dry and keep indefinitely. 825 789 856

This causes the child to grow up endowed, like the squirrel, with agility so that he can scale even precipitous mountains. This medicine is frequently used in conjunction with one for hunting ability.

To Cause Easy Delivery [843]

Place the foetus of a porcupine against the back of a girl's neck and allow it to drop to the ground. Pick it up, replace it, and let it fall again. This is repeated four times while the person says:

"Please, may she be like you and have no trouble in giving birth."

This medicine can be used at any time before puberty.

To Cause Bravery (four means)

(1) When a grizzly bear has been shot, a lad who wishes to make himself brave approaches it and thrusts his arm down the dying animal's throat. This kills it by choking. Then he rubs his hand over his heart and the back of his neck, the seat [774]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

825 789 856 [774]

of the spirit, which imparts to himself the courage and strength of the animal he has just slain.

(2) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, the bloody pelt is wrapped around a lad whose parents wish him to be brave. He is lashed in securely and the bundle, attached to a long rope, is thrown into the rapids. After a few minutes, it is drawn ashore, but immediately thrown in again. This is repeated four times. This medicine causes the child to have the courage of a grizzly bear. It is said that the first youth to whom this was applied rescued his mother from slavery among the Tsimshian.

This treatment is usually applied to boys of from three to five years of age.

(3) When a grizzly bear has been killed and skinned, two lads, whose parents wish them to be brave, are called. They are told to crouch on their hands and knees and while in this position the pelt is thrown over their backs. They crawl to and fro for a few minutes while dogs are encouraged to bark and growl at the "animal." The skin is then removed and the two sent to wash in the river. They are called back and the whole rite repeated a second time, followed by a third and a fourth application, with washing in every case. This gives them the bravery of grizzly bears.

This medicine can be used at any time before the holding of sexual intercourse.

(4) When an octopus has been killed, a lad is placed within the freshly removed skin. Those present say:

"Please, may he be like you, afraid of nothing."

The skin is removed and the lad sent to wash in the river. The rite is repeated four times which gives him the bravery of an octopus. Like the last, this medicine is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse.

To Cause Ability in River Work

Fasten a boy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw the bundle into the river. Lift it out when it has gone

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

beneath the surface, and throw it in a second time. Repeat this four times. If the wrapping has been carefully fastened, little water leaks in and the child suffers no discomfort. This causes him to grow up confident and brave with regard to canoeing and every kind of activity on the river. Like the last medicine, this is not potent for one who has held sexual intercourse. It cannot be applied to a girl since beaver are unfavourable to women who must observe many taboos concerning them. 825 789 856

To Cause Modesty and Respect for One's Elders

When a boy is about six or eight years of age, his father beats him lightly, four times, with a rope-end. This is done in the early morning, then he takes his son to wash immediately. Four days later the beating and washing are repeated. From this time on, a parent should whip his son four times every fourth morning until he is old enough to marry. The force of the chastisements increases as the lad grows older, so that when he is about fourteen years of age, he is beaten with the full force of his parent's arm. It is a point of honour for a lad to endure his whippings without whimpering; one who shows the pain he is suffering is laughed at by his fellows and not allowed to wash with them. This medicine makes a child strong, manly, respectful to his elders, and, generally, the type of individual to whom supernatural beings are likely to show favour. 789 856 [152]

This practice has long been discontinued and it was impossible to learn whether or not it had ever been carried out with full vigour. Several of the older men stated that in their childhood they had been beaten periodically by their fathers, but none had had this last over a period of years. It was claimed that such had been the case in earlier times, but it seems almost certain that this type of chastisement could never have been carried out regularly. During the winter, for example, when kusiut dances were taking place, the whole community used to sleep late and it is improbable that a father rose every fourth [178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 morning to whip his son. It is clear, however, that such was 856 regarded as proper by anyone practising this medicine, even though few did so regularly.

MEDICINES APPLIED TO YOUNG DOGS

789 To Cause Ability in Hunting

231 When a bear has been killed and the first incision made for skinning it, take a puppy, force its head inside the opening, and rub it to and fro. Throw the animal into the river and when it has swum ashore, repeat the rite. If this act is repeated four times, the dog will grow up to be a good hunter.

To Cause Ability in Hunting Beaver

Wrap the puppy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw it into the river to the accompaniment of hand-clapping from as many as happen to be present. After submersion for a few moments, remove the bundle and throw it in again. Repeat this twice more. This makes the dog grow up unafraid of water and, accordingly, useful in hunting beaver.

To Cause Disregard of Musket Shots

Lay some black powder at the nose of a sleeping puppy and ignite it. The dog will grow up without fear of musket shots.

To Cause Keen Scent

Slit any kind of salmon so that the liver is exposed and hold the puppy with its nose immediately over this. Make an incision in the tip so that the blood flows freely on to the organ of the salmon. Hold the animal until flies have gathered from all directions to feast upon the fish and fresh blood.

The dog will grow up with the ability to locate game in any direction, just as flies gather wherever there is blood. He will also have their ability to travel without requiring a path. One [424] old man stated that this medicine was the property of an ancestral family, and should be used when a puppy is one month old.

1:McIlwraith E-S (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827

If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481
"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322
carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825
boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [756] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[10]

[10] This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

E

ełxza or ełxzał·i: Medicine; generic term for all remedies of a magical or medicinal nature. [278]
e·m: Coitus, term in common usage.
emts: Nephew or niece. [601]

ł

łłmals: Ancestral name of a Snuile·tł man.
'ełłałän·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
ełłałłaikila: Moon, semi-anthropomorphized.

H

hai·ɔlakila: 1—Bella Bella term, commonly used in Bella Coola, for sisaok official 2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
haidäl: Type of sea-going canoe used by the Haida; the word may be a corruption from English.
Hai·le·kela: Man who descended to the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
Hän·o: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
haohao: Mythical, supernatural bird. [825] Hamcıt: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwlst in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ẓwiyai in the beginning of time.
hɔli: Penis.
hoip: Call used by members of the kasiut society to strengthen their fellow-members.

I

ikw': Pounded cedar-bark, undyed. [824]
ilaix: Zigzag course up or down a mountain slope.
Ilaiẓäl: Twalałłit's dog.
Iliimai·s: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ildustas dia sxim: Bandage of undyed cedar-bark placed around an infant's head to produce cranial deformation. [856] ildutsam, Bandages: Term applied to presents distributed as validation for the bitings of a self-Cannibal. [431] ilk: One of the fritillariae.
imałłndjutqwłsan: Abbreviated rite of Noäkymm dance.
imänta: Nest.
I'mäsilak: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Imimałłnaix, "The Mooter": Male supernatural child who fattens Noäkymm's craft.
ipamp, "Hold Him Down": Cry used in Cannibal dances.
ipa—ł—l, "Accept": Said to spring salmon during the ritual connected with the first taking of these fish. [226] ipałzsutsmm: Alleged singing of a sisaok initiate's song by the supernatural being, Mułakila.
ipo'le·smm: Reduction of the value of an investment-present by immediate return of part of it. [426]
i·płs: Moss. [824]
ismłnusamkdim: Polyandry.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Nuswin·ämx, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.

nuswinäsla: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578]

Nusx: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.

Nusxalxiq: Tal·io bird hunter.

Nusxemda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tąl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqäläxl in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]

Nusxemtaiän·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Alqäläxl in the beginning of time.

Nusxeq: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Barrenness": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.

nusxi'ipsta: Repository, archaic term.

nusxwan·ä·nutnam: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] nusxwohmxelta, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [585]

nusxwo·ąsta: Wooden dish used for washing an infant. [415] nusxwiläntom: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [785]

nulaikim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [756]

Nuisodaxw': Name of a celebrated shaman.

Nulam: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.

Nulsl, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.

nuicuxmm: Alteration of a dance from susook to kusiut. [825] nuikälxita: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.

nuilälälsmtmm, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [586]

nuilälälsmam: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431]

Nulleax, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.

Nuthoqel: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nusqalit in the beginning of time.

nuthunält: Parents of twins. [845]

nutsaqmax: Wolf. [825]

Nulsäthmais: Mythical house in the sky.

Nulsaymäls: One of the names of the supreme god's house.

nutsiakem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tlitcaplilän·a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nulaikim. [756] nulsiaynam: A creation of new kusiut names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulsiäxlm: Kusiotem rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.

nulskexwam: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431]
2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.

nulsqosa, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who paints upon the bandages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856]

Nutsqmäli, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.

Nulwimäx: Kusiut name of a Tsimsili man.

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754 The beneficial purposes include: making a child grow up to 789 be a good dancer, industrious, a swift berry picker, or a strong man; curing lung trouble; making the river erode where wanted; 856 and two ways of stopping rain. The injurious purposes include:
two ways of making a person grow up to be a thief; the causing of craziness and quarrelsomeness and the three ways of causing death.

754 The materials and actions used include: ashes of aspen leaves; 789 a dead toad, used with hair, with a red cedar bark face wiper, and with lost pieces of thimble berry shoots which were acciden-824 tally dropped while being eaten; ashes of a yellow jacket's nest; 825 a living raven with phlegm; beaver paws, in two instances; a skin bracelet from a beaver's foreleg; a dead wood-rat; a dead mouse;
a grizzly bear's skin; a living red squirrel with a bit of apron fringe; setting fire to a wood-rat's house; and poking an ant hill.

789 To make a person a good dancer the ashes of the burned leaves of the aspen or trembling poplar were said to be useful, but 856 Joshua said this may have been a joke. The Bellacoola Indians 824 say the leaves dance. They never say that they tremble. When 535 a baby was born, if the parents talked about it and the father desired that the baby grow up to be a good dancer, the mother or father got the leaves, burned them and put the ashes on the baby's hands, knees and elbows. When telling of this Joshua held his hands with the finger tips up and moved them as the Bellacoola do in dancing. Both rich and poor men danced.

789 A baby girl would grow up to be industrious, it was believed,
825 if the warm limbs of a recently dead beaver were applied to her.
856 The Bellacoola apparently observed the great industry of the beaver.

To make a baby girl grow up to be a fast berry-picking woman, the ring of skin from between two cuts around a beaver's foreleg was put on her wrist and was left on until it wore off.

To make a boy grow up to be a strong man, a skin of the grizzly bear, was thrown over him, generally by his father.

755 For phlegm on the lungs, more permanent than a simple cold, 825 the patient expectorated in something and some one secretly mixed the fresh phlegm with salmon eggs and put the mixture

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out for the ravens to eat. This was done four times, and if a raven ate it, the patient recovered, according to Captain Schooner's belief. As the call of the raven sounds somewhat like a person affected with phlegm in the throat, this may be a case of sympathetic magic, at any rate it is one of witchcraft. 755 825 [754]

To make the river erode at a certain place in order to break a log jam, a beaver's foot was buried in each of several spots in the place. 789 825

A continuous rain would cease, and the sun would come out, it was said, if the people set fire to a wood-rat's house.

When it rained too much the Bellacoola Indians poked down an ant hill and said, "Give us warm sunshine." They believed this would bring results, but now that Joshua is a Christian he says he does not believe it and says it is useless play talk.

Bad boys or girls, but not adults, would take a dead mouse, warm it over a fire, and rub the warmed mouse on the hands of a baby. This made the baby steal when it grew up. The so-called stealing habits of the mouse were supposed to be transferred to the child. 754 856 825

The still warm body of a freshly killed wood-rat was used in the same way to make a baby, boy or girl, "crazy," and grow up to be a constant thief. The notorious habits of the wood-rat, as well as those of the mouse, were evidently well recognized by the Bellacoola.

To make people crazy, the red squirrel had to be properly used by a shaman and then it possessed strong power. One woman who had been made crazy in this way died in 1887. She did not like the shaman and he did not like her. He stole her apron. She was sorry. He took it into the forest and performed witchcraft because he wanted to spoil her life by making her crazy. He caught a red squirrel alive, possibly in a little basket. He had a box called a "bad box," in which he kept his things of evil power. He put some of the fringe of her apron around the red squirrel and let it run far away. The woman then became crazy and sometimes fell down, but part of the time she seemed well. My Indian informant, Joshua, had seen her. This example of sympathetic 754 756 825

3: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1925
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

754
756 magic probably originated from observng the many very erratic 825 and apparently purposeless movements of the red squirrel.

754 When one wished to cause the child of one's enemy to grow
825 up to be a quarrelsome person, a yellowjacket's nest was burned
856 and the ashes were rubbed on the face hands, and arms of the child. When the child grew up, it was believed, he or she would fight with everyone. The yellow jacke's natural defense of it's nest is interpreted as quarrelsome, even by white people.

754 The toad was a powerful medicine for the bad box used in 825 witchcraft.

To make a man or woman die of caziness, one of the hairs of the person's head was put in the bodycavity of a disemboweled toad.

[515] To make a person's face swell and siperate until death came,
[825] the little pieces of softened red cedar bark used to clean the person's face were put in the body cavity of a disemboweled toad. The idea underlying this was probably the reproduction of the warts of the toad on the face of the person.

[824] To make a person die, a piece of the young shoot of a thimble berry, lost by that person while eating, was put in the mouth of a toad. Death was supposed to take place in half an hour.

754 One very old man, Judas by name boasts of having killed seven people by means of his bad box used in witchcraft, especially of having caused the death of Mr. John Clayton, who was the first white man to remain long in this area, having kept the Hudson's Bay store at Bella Coola, and later a store of his own, but who died far away from Bella Coola in 1909.

Mrs. Samuel King who died in 1922 was said to have been poisoned by Willie Mack. Her father, Captain Schooner, was said to have stated that Willie would die in July on the anniversary of her death. Willie Mack died in the summer of 1923. Captain Schooner died a few days later. He was said to understand malevolent witchcraft thoroughly. It was said that people often cut off the collars of Willie Mack's shirts. Willie Mack's father was too great a chief so that people were ashamed, and consequently killed Willie by means of witchcraft with something in a bad box.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a near relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of 867 stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed
[732] man, he is told of Ałäläls, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in former times. Sklsa might almost be called the Bella Coola national game, although it is now (1923) seldom played. 526 [172]

A game with somewhat similar rules is sqwlaiäk, played with small wooden spears tipped with bone. When a number of men or boys decide to play, they choose two captains who in turn select their teams; any number can take part, provided that the sides are equal, but five each is usual. There is a special name for each player according to his position, and he bets against the corresponding member of the other team. A mark is set up, and one of the captains throws his spear, so that it will stick upright in the ground as near the target as possible. The rival leader endeavours to beat this, and if he fails, his second man throws, and each in succession until one comes closer to the goal than the rival captain. Then the latter's number two tries to beat the last thrower, followed by those on his own side until one succeeds or till all have thrown. The game thus ends when all of one side have thrown unsuccessfully. The winning side is, of course, the one to which belongs the player whose throw is nearest the target. Each member of the losing team pays his wager to his adversary and a second round is begun. 526 525

The sport is now rarely indulged in, but in former times games used to continue all day, and valuables were lost in the gambling which was considered to be a necessary part of it. Men used to observe ceremonial chastity to increase their chances of success and the expert was regarded with admiration by younger lads. The crack team of a village often used to visit other towns to compete against their representatives, and the games were contested amid frenzied excitement on the part of the supporters. This occasionally led to serious fighting. [785] [554] [628] [578]

Another sport of a similar type is archery; a mark is set up and each competitor tries to lodge his arrow as close to it as possible. This game has now entirely lost favour, the young men preferring a type of football played without strict attention to rules, but with great energy. 526

Bella Coola children, too, have their games and recreations, many of them of an imitative nature. Little boys enjoy nothing 857

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

857 better than hunting birds and small animals with miniature bows and arrows, or snaring them in nooses of grass or string. Little girls make playhouses in which they cook wonderful meals of berries, with perhaps the addition of a wooden fish. On the whole, however, the children do not enter into play as boisterously as white boys and girls, nor do they seem to derive as much pleasure from it. In former times, when clothing was [152] scanty, small lads used to delight in picking nettles and beating [291] one another with the stinging branches; this must have caused considerable pain, but it was a point of honour not to cry out, and anyone, perhaps caught unaware, who showed discomfort, [526] was laughed at as a coward. Both boys and girls are fond of swinging, and even adult women sometimes find time to enjoy themselves by swaying to and fro at the end of a rope.

Young Bella Coola do not have as many toys as white children, and none of them is complex. Some girls have crude [575] wooden dolls, though elaborate figurines are reserved for use [231] in kusiut dances. Perhaps the most cherished plaything is a small puppy or, in recent years, a kitten, though the unfortunate animal is handled and mauled without consideration. A good carpenter may make for his son a wooden top or a bull-roarer, to the envy of his less fortunate friends. Both types of toys are said to be used in [575] Nusmät·a and at some kusiut dances the masked figures carry them to play with.

526 There is one game, sleli, which the salmon are [825] said to delight to watch, and which is accordingly played by boys as soon as the first spring salmon have been disposed of with fitting rites. Each makes for himself, or is given by his father, a wooden spear with a projecting barb, fastened as shown in the accompanying sketch (see Fig. 2). A loop of branches is made and thrown into a pool of stagnant, or slow-moving water, on each side of which stands a rival group of competitors. At a signal, all throw their spears simultaneously, with the intention of passing them through the ring, so that the barb of each will

FIG. 2. "Toy spear."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 Although guests from different tribes are sometimes invited 574 to other ceremonials, it is at potlatches that they are essential.
Since the validity of such transactions as marriages, divorces, [203] or the assumption of professional prerogatives depends on the presence of witnesses, and since the importance of such a rite depends on the number of witnesses, a man is always eager to carry out any public performance at a potlatch when he is sure of the attention of foreigners, and the consequent wider diffusion of knowledge of what he has done. The man who has invited guests is usually willing to allow others to perform at his potlatch, since it increases the complexity and importance [184] of the affair. It follows that no two potlatches are alike; one will contain features entirely lacking in another. Moreover, the wealth of the donor determines how many rites he himself will cause to be performed. The fundamental concept of the potlatch is the inviting of guests from abroad to witness rites [769] in connection with an ancestral myth, especially the return of a recently deceased relative of the donor to visit the living.

*556 At any important potlatch the following rites are carried 796 out, and in the account of the ritual it will be assumed that these alone are taking place. If the reader bears this summary in mind, he is less likely to be confused by the complication of rites.

(1) The return of a dead ancestor to visit the living.

[575] (2) The initiation of young men or women into the sisaok [553] society. This includes the validation of a sisaok name for each, and a period of seclusion in the back-room. The initiates may either be relatives of the donor of the potlatch, or young persons whose relatives are taking the opportunity to carry out the rite in the presence of foreigners. Some of the initiates may already be members of the society, undergoing a further period of seclusion in order to increase their status by a further distribution of presents.

[554] (3) The payment by the wife of the donor and her family [858] of goods to "rebuy" her from her husband. This is a legal [583] fiction, though necessary to maintain the status of the children.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789
shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841
unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing [773] everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [825] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881
in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead,
this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581 regard the married state as the normal condition of man.
Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the 589 number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those [732] crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581
and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous [462]
small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most important feature is that it governs the status of the child. [858]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

581 Confidently believing that he has descended from ancestors
[858] who came to this earth in the beginning of time, a Bella Coola wishes to have his children firmly established in the path of his forbears. This can be accomplished only with the aid of a suitable mother. It follows that marriage is not primarily a matter of affection, but of the ancestral eligibility of the contracting parties.

CHOICE OF MATE

584 Since the initiative for marriage is taken by the man in 581 almost all cases, it will be convenient and proper to describe the factors which enter into the search for a wife, remembering that the converse govern the decision of the woman and her relatives. The choice of the woman who is to be the mother of the children who will carry on the traditions of the ancestral family is a matter of too great importance to be entrusted to any young person. Accordingly, while their son is yet a child, his parents often discuss who would be a suitable wife for him. They view the matter from a strictly business standpoint.
581 Proud of their own ancient lineage, they would not demean themselves by allowing their son to marry a girl who could not trace her ancestry back to the first people, or with one whose forbears had disgraced themselves by marriage with slaves. Instead, it is a matter of pride for parents to have as daughter-in-law the child of a powerful chief. Nor can they choose a 582 woman too closely related to their son. Marriage with a sister, an aunt, a niece, or any first cousin is strictly prohibited. No reason for these laws could be obtained; the Bella Coola consider that it would be "indecent" or unclean so to marry, but have theorized no further about the matter. An adopted child [597] is regarded in the same light as an own child. The Bella Coola 829 know, and are amused by, the regulation of marriage according [171] to crests among the northern tribes, but practise nothing of the same nature themselves. In fact, marriages usually take place among those who are descended from one ancestor and who have, accordingly, the same crest, though the significance

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 584 [535] [575]

dances in time to it. Using their own discretion, the musicians proceed to beat out the time for kusiut after kusiut, and each performs. In like fashion they then beat out the tune of one susaok after another, and each member of that society gives his dance. Since none of the supernatural beings is present, the affair is non-sacred. The singers consult with the host as to the number of songs to be used. When they stop at last, X's father, aided by his younger relatives, gives valuable presents [583] of food. No mention of the coming marriage is made, but the rite gives the donor an opportunity of displaying his generosity as a chief and indirectly increases the importance of the wedding because the value of the food will later be remembered in connection with it.

If X's father is very wealthy, he may recall the people for several nights, always providing the same type of entertainment, and always giving food. He uses his own judgment as to the number of such entertainments, but at that which he decides shall be the last, he announces:

"Tomorrow we shall go to Y's father's house."

If X's father does not wish to give away such large quantities of food he may omit the dancing in his own house and make this announcement at a potlatch, a kusiut dance,[1] or any other public gathering. But the more elaborate the ceremonial, the greater is the importance of the marriage in the eyes of the Bella Coola, which in turn increases the strength of the children [858] who may result from it.

583 584

On the morning after this declaration, X's father calls to his house those whom he wishes to be witnesses of the alliance that has been planned. These include as many of his relatives and those of his wife as he desires, and often intimate friends. These individuals comprise the group interested, on behalf of X, in the marriage; they provide the goods which are given for him, and receive the presents from the corresponding group of Y's relatives. Anyone having the necessary financial ability

[1]This is probably a recent innovation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

than the presents just given by X's relatives, though occasionally they may exceed them. Y's father, or a herald, or an eloquent friend on his behalf, speaks to the following effect: 583 584

"Be bold. Henceforth you will have to work a very long time for us. We will let you know when we need your services."

The significance of this speech lies in the fact that X, and to a certain extent his relatives, are expected to perform almost menial tasks for Y's father during the period of engagement, which has now been duly ratified. X's father and his followers now leave Y's house. It is immaterial whether or not X and Y themselves have been present. It is important that this formal acknowledgment of the engagement should take place during the day; otherwise any children resulting from the marriage could be shamed by having it said to them: "Your parents were not married in the open light of day." [858]

For a varying length of time X now acts almost as a servant to Y's father. He does not live with her family, but he cuts wood, draws water, and performs other menial tasks. Whenever a member of X's family gives a ceremony, he takes care to give lavish presents to Y's relatives. If it is impossible to hold a sacred rite, X's father is at least expected to invite Y's family to a ceremonial feast, and also to share with them any game that he may kill. Meanwhile, X and Y are not subject to any restrictions as to seeing each other. In theory if they should cohabit it would "spoil" the engagement, but in most cases when this occurs, as it often does, the matter is simply hushed up. [836]

Children whose parents were long engaged are said to be "heavy"; their entry into life having been prepared with careful thought and due ceremony, so that their limbs are clear to travel with success to the position of chief. When such a child is born, the relatives are eager to call their fellow-villagers to confer a name soon after birth, and the infant starts life with this advantage. There is no specific length of time for engagements; if X and Y are the children of influential chiefs, the 584 [858] [553]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

584 as soon as possible. Though strictly legal, and commonly practised even long ago, this is not considered a desirable preliminary, since the children lack the strength which would have been theirs if their parents had been long engaged. In recent 178 years the custom of short engagements has become popular, 584 though the older Bella Coola feel resentment, saying that the woman is simply "bought" with goods or money at the actual wedding. The return of such sums in due course does not compensate for the omission of the lengthy period of engagement. A few years ago a powerful chief even "bought" husbands for his grand-daughters. His influence was so great that by bestowing large sums on the families of the youths they accepted the young women as wives. The girls in question were desirable in every way, according to Bella Coola standards, but by marrying without a long engagement and suitable presents the husbands, and their families, failed to live up to the dignity of their ancestry. These are breakings down of the ancient rites, and as such are lamented by the older people.

583 Sometimes, despite the wishes of their parents, a boy and 584 girl announce their desire to marry by living together. After much storming, the parents usually decide to make the best of a bad business by performing the marriage rites as soon as possible and by lavish expenditure on them to lessen the impediment placed against the future offspring by lack of long engagement of their parents. But such a child can never be [858] called an ālqim, which has the significance of something good that has long been sought for, such as a smoothed-grained tree that carpenters like. It will thus be seen that the marriage ceremony must be carried out, irrespective of whether or not it has been preceded by a lengthy period of engagement in which the first proposal was made by the boy's family, by a shorter one in which the girl's family took the initiative, or by no period of engagement whatever. These rites can now be described.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

588 mate object. Bella Coola financiers are always seeking to 556 arrange such undertakings; the potlatch is the culminating point, but the same principle pervades their whole life.

It is to the advantage of the intending donor of a potlatch to become the fictitious husband of as many children as possible. Accordingly he sometimes take the initial step, as is customary for the relatives of the husband in real marriage, but not in ceremonial. In such a case it is necessary for him to offer some inducement, perhaps in the form of one of the few women's names brought to earth in the beginning of time. He approaches a suitable father-in-law, suggesting that at a fictitious marriage he would be willing to give his wife a noble woman's name. If this is agreeable, the rite is carried out accordingly. The wife is in many cases a son of the person to [551] whom the proposal was made; he duly receives a woman's name, the only circumstance under which this is possible. The actual designation will probably be returned through many repurchasings, but the boy has reached an enviable position. In later years he can always silence a person with whom he is quarrelling by saying:

"I need not answer you. You cannot even approach my body, so thickly am I padded with the goods which my father used when he rebought me."

556 Another business transaction of a similar nature is the 608 giving of a small infant to an old person to "hold." This ap-858 pears to be uncommon, and the only instance about which information was available occurred under the following circumstances:

A man and a woman were married with full ceremony and the best of feelings prevailed between the two families. The wife was several times rebought until she and her relatives had fully maintained their dignity, in fact the relations of the husband felt that they were being out-shone. Then the wife's father died. To mark their sympathy, the husband's family gave the widow one of her daughter's children to "hold." Valuable non-returnable presents were transmitted as "soft

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

blankets" for the child. The advantages to the donors were that they had an opportunity of showing their dignity, and it would always be a mark of pride for the child to be able to boast of the way in which she had been "held." 556 608 858

Ceremonial marriage clearly demonstrates two strong Bella Coola characteristics; namely, the desire publicly to enter into financial undertakings to demonstrate the wealth of the contracting party, and the desire to increase the prestige of children by means of this wealth expended indirectly on their behalf.

EXTRA-MARITAL RELATIONS

Although the Bella Coola do not regard marriage primarily as a means of regulating relations between the sexes, yet the connection between the two is sufficiently close to warrant description in this chapter. A man considers intercourse as one of the normal phenomena of life: by marrying he has exclusive rights to his wife, but few moral restraints deter him from anyone else to whom he can gain access without infringing the prerogatives of some other husband. Moreover, sexual intercourse is not regarded solely as a gratification of desires; it has a significance which can be described, not inaptly, as holy. As already explained, two favourite methods of obtaining success in any undertaking are by preserving lengthy continence or by observing ceremonial chastity. If a young unmarried man or widower should wish to make use of this latter means, he is compelled to have relations with a woman to whom he has no just claims. This is universally recognized, nor is there the slightest odium attached to the man. The only essential is that he neither violate another's wife, nor force a young girl against her will. 551 831 897

At the present time there is great laxity in Bella Coola, a condition which makes it difficult to judge the state of affairs in former times. Every effort was made to obtain satisfactory evidence, and the following was verified and re-verified with the older men. [128]

A wife, properly married with full ceremony, was usually 837 839

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856 [825]

To Cause Left-handedness

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Hakmlk (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [858]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856
speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Alqwtäm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished [858] possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial [785] chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342 in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,[9] either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk. [211] [778]

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

594 [851] 594 868 855 861

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 369), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

594 869

[9]Since the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This account is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included. [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a near relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of 867 stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed
[732] man, he is told of Ałäläls, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

poverty-stricken," say the elders. "If you do, you will become like them yourself." 867 [735]

As a boy grows older, his father insists that he wash, pray, and practise other ritual acts likely to win approval from supernatural beings. He is frequently beaten to inure him to hardship. By the time a youth is eleven or twelve years of age he has become fully acquainted with the principles of the potlatch system and a wise parent teaches him to remember debts. Taking his son to some quiet spot in the woods, he makes a small bundle of cedar twigs, for example, and tells him: 869 861 211 867

"So-and-so at Bella Bella gave you fifteen beaver skins. When you see this bundle you must think of those skins."

Then he takes another bunch, perhaps of spruce twigs, to represent a present from a Rivers Inlet chief. A bundle of nettle fibre may stand for a Kimsquit debt; one ornamented with a tuft of undyed cedar-bark, a gift from a Täl·io chief; a solid piece of alder stem, a local debt; another section of alder stem with a notch in it, another local debt, and so on. The son is expected to listen attentively, and to repeat after his father what each represents. Then the pupil turns his back and the instructor alters the positions of the bundles. His father tells him to look at them and repeat what each signifies. This is repeated time after time until a boy becomes familiar with remembering debts by means of symbols. In later years, if he becomes a chief, he will use this method for bearing his indebtedness in mind. No system of standardized signs has been evolved, each individual merely designates what he wishes by a mark which he alone can recognize.

A child grows up in the community, absorbing information and lore without conscious effort, learning the activities which he will later practise, fearing the supernatural beings that are dreaded by his parents, marvelling at the power of those endowed with supernatural ability, and generally fitting himself for the struggle of life. If his parents are wealthy, he may be fortunate enough to be given a susook name and to partake in 867 [556]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thus boast that she has three sets of teeth, but as the practice has not found favour in Bella Coola, it is little to her advantage.[8] 585 [177]

These complicated marriage rites are necessary to satisfy the pride of the two families in their origin myths, and the need to establish the resultant children in the paths of their ancestors. Among slaves or others who lack ancestral prerogatives, marriage is an affair of slight worth. Such persons simply live together with little ceremony, though they always try to give at least a feast so that there may be witnesses of the transaction. It is immaterial whether or not they marry their own relatives, since no ancestral prerogatives are to be transmitted. [556] [567] [581]

MARRIED LIFE

Y usually lives in the house of X's father, though economic circumstances may compel her husband to live in her home. If the parents are very wealthy, a house may be built for the young people, but usually their home is one of the bedrooms in the house of X's father; this patrilocal residence exposes Y not only to good advice from her mother-in-law, but often to caustic criticism. The married life of X and Y does not differ materially from that of other young couples in any part of the world, and is accordingly difficult to describe. Although love rarely enters into the original choice of a mate, a serviceable substitute is found in the mutual respect for each other's ancestry, and the knowledge of the importance of the rites performed with the aid of each other's elderly relatives. The young people realize that marriage affects the families of both, and accordingly accept it as a matter of course. The Bella Coola are fond of children. Their birth is a matter of sincere rejoicing, partly because it binds the two families more closely together, but parental affection is one of the strongest Bella Coola characteristics. The parents usually spoil their children; infants, especially, are never chastised and rarely 591 [556] 593 855 [861]

[8]The board used on this occasion was purchased for the National Museum of Canada, Ottawa.

855 rebuked. They grow up in the open environment of the [861] houses, absorbing more of their lore by watching and imitat-[854] ing than by actual instruction. Their care devolves chiefly on the mother, although at any ceremony the father will be seen arriving with the baby in his arms, while his wife leads another child. Nurses are unknown and the parents take their children with them on all occasions; if it is necessary for a mother to be absent on some arduous toil, her child will be entrusted to a grandmother or other elderly relative. There are no avoidances between the young people and their 606 parents-in-law.

The obligation of present-giving does not stop with the 602 marriage ceremony. Whenever X gives a kusiut dance or other 431 ceremony, Y's relatives are expected to contribute. It is felt that the weight of the presents given them during the period of engagement and at the wedding has become too heavy, and they throw this off by lavish giving. No count is kept of the value of gifts bestowed or received, though it is known that the family of the woman loses financially in the end. The father of many daughters is regarded as an unfortunate individual, who is always poor and overworked through the necessity of [554] providing for them. By so doing, however, he increases his own prestige, and the Bella Coola have the happy sentiment that such a man manages to get along some way; perhaps necessity rouses his ambition. Likewise X's relatives contribute to any ritual carried out by Y's father. If, for example, one of his wife's relatives dies, X and his friends may wish to contribute towards the funeral expenses. In fact, any cere-
[556] monial serves as an excuse for relatives by marriage to donate goods and thus demonstrate publicly their influence, importance, and generosity.

602 The concept of mutual help between families who have intermarried is one that lasts for generations. In 1922 there 476 was in Bella Coola an old Kimsquit man who had left home some forty years earlier and had since lived in Smith Inlet where he married and had a boy. On the death of his wife, this

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born 843 child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 825

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten 789 during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making [761] a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten.

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left 755 wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone [761] should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed, the patient would die.

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, 827 but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit 865 it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a 761 child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this [784] theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo.
A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

827 If the father dies, she beats her son or daughter, adding:
865 "Cry now. See what you did."
[761] Henceforth the child restrains himself, but usually drastic steps are taken to reform an infant before his weeping causes any such misfortune. The parents of a petulant child request aid from a man of even temperament to cure him. The person undertaking the task prepares a large basket, watches until he notices the youngster crying and displaying bad temper, then seizes the offender, thrusts him into the basket and hangs it in the doorway, free to move with every stir of the child shut within.

"Cry as much as you like now," he says. "If you become hoarse like a heron you will turn into one of those birds."

This threat is based on an ancient story describing how a child to whom this was done changed into a heron and flapped away in bird form. Sometimes the man says that the same will happen to the child, or simply that he will be able to fly like a heron. All day he is left suspended, no one heeding his sobbing and howling, but in the evening he is taken down, petted, and told not to be naughty again. This medicine always cures a petulant child who can thenceforth be held to ridicule by being reminded that he is "A Basket Boy." The same remedy is often employed for a quarrelsome brother and sister who are shut up together.

865 To Cure Disobedience and Rudeness

861 If a child is persistently rude and disobedient to his parents, they request the assistance of a man of even temperament to cure him. The person selected must be one who is never angry, and who attends to his own business in a placid, quiet manner. The mother and father discuss who is best fitted by character to help their erring child and then ask his aid, promising a suitable recompense. If the man accepts the task, he waits till he notices the child crying peevishly. Running to him, he holds the youngster firmly and, in spite of this strug-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

gles, bites him between the eyes or at the back of the neck so that a little blood flows. 865 861

"If you don't keep quiet," he says to the screaming child, "I shall bite you all over your head."

This medicine acts in two ways: (1) The offender is so frightened that he is likely to reform; (2) Contact with a man of good disposition imparts the same to him. A tuft of mountain goat wool is inserted into the wound to make it heal properly.

To Cure Disobedience and Laziness 461

Parents whose child exhibits these bad qualities also ask help of a man of good character. If he accepts the task, he provides himself with a bone needle and waits until he hears the child refuse to perform some simple task. Then, with a rush, he throws the offender on his stomach and supposits the needle until the blood flows freely. He then releases the frightened child who usually slinks away to bed for the rest of the day. When the bleeding has ceased, the quiet person cuts chips from the canoe of an energetic man and rubs them on the wound, saying: 865 861

"Please, may you be like the canoe, always active and doing whatever is expected of you."

An old Kimsquit man recalled vividly the application of this medicine to him when he refused to fetch water for his mother. He was about eleven years of age at the time and asserted that it had greatly improved his behaviour.

MEDICINES FOR ORDINARY DISEASES

For Sprains and Bruises 752

Pound stalks of false hellebore, mix with hemlock gum, and bind on the injured spot as a poultice.

For Swollen Neck

Cut off small pieces of a thoroughly smoked bear's heart, pound in water, and drink the mixture. 757

APPENDIX D

Sinuxetl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximètl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Stuix repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio°mstа: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] sipàlxàlosuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] sipkim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Siqàlxam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnàm: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626]

siqwsek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage. [425]

sisasts: Departure to a new locality.

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother. [601]

sisut: Paddle.

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Sithmsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitlliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778] siut, vocative, siaot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."

2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large sisaok whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutamkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnàlos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·os, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldàmx chief living in the last century.

sixdiktam: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Sixman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsàn·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsixqutnam: Synonym for Mstlakila, the supernatural being connected with sisaok rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, àndnuskx, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwopàxkmak: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

sixwotl: Unmarried mother. [848] siyeutla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sieatla may be connected with this.

1:McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuskelusta, wash-basin. In the land above, Ałquntäm has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Ałquntäm who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Ałquntäm, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed äskelusam, a word connected with nuskelusta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.[50]

[50] This may be a mere rationalization.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 the perils of infancy. During this period, the mother observes
846 various magical taboos to ensure the welfare of her offspring,
237 and endeavours to strengthen herself by rubbing her own body with non-odoriferous oils obtained from dog-fish, geese, or fresh
853 olachen. Soft pounded salmon and water are added to an infant's diet as soon as possible, though nourishment from the breast frequently continues until a child is two, or even three
●862 years of age. It is not uncommon to delay weaning until the mother is again pregnant, when the child is deterred by the application of soot to the breasts. Marital relations are recom-
846 menced as soon as the mother is strong enough; there is no specified period of abstinence, nor does it matter whether or not the woman is lactative.

845 Occasionally, an infant is born with teeth; such an one is thought to be the reincarnation of a dead ancestor, though no one knows which. A similar belief is held respecting a child with dimples in the lobes of its ears; these are regarded as remnants of the holes pierced for ear-rings. A child that cries in the womb is said to have great intellect.

847 In former times infanticide was practised for various reasons. If a woman died in giving birth, it was customary for her mother to kill the child unless one of her relatives was able to suckle the motherless infant who was then given to her. It was not unknown for the mother of a large family to ask the midwife to kill the child in order to avoid an addition to her responsibilities. An unmarried girl who became pregnant
[848] often went alone to the forest, delivered herself without assistance, and killed her infant. This was considered to be the kindest act, since an illegitimate child was said to be, "Like a Dog." In some cases the prospective mother requested a friend to cause abortion by kneading the stomach and uterus, a method said to be effective and seldom fatal. How to do
[195] so is common knowledge, but to practise it is considered disgraceful, and the term ixwotl, applied to such an one, is among 842 the most foul of Bella Coola opprobriums. It is believed that a woman who has had several children can in some way prevent

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of fur. Even at the present time, the death of a new-born child is usually attributed to omission of this precaution. 843 825

A Kimsquit man mentioned that he had once shot a marten during his wife's pregnancy, and had failed to preserve a piece of the skin. The bullet had passed through the head, making a hole in the cheek-bone beneath the eye. He thought no more of the incident until after the birth of a daughter with a blemish on her cheek in the same place as the wound on the marten's. The spot grew bigger, and the flesh began to mortify until the infant died a few weeks later. Her face resembled that of the animal and he is convinced that his loss was caused, in some way, by the marten. 789 [761]

To Cure Indigestion

Kill a raven, cut out a morsel of flesh from beneath its left wing, and then remove the heart. Place both in the infant's mouth and leave them there until wet with saliva. Replace them in the bird's body and tie a strip of dyed cedar-bark around its neck. Carry the carcass to some lonely spot in the mountains and hide it beneath a jutting rock where no water can penetrate. This cures the child. If, however, anyone should find the raven's body before the flesh has decayed; the patient would die. 755 [761]

This remedy, widely employed for small children, was used with success by an informant for his young daughter. It is not sufficiently potent for adults.

To Cure Crying

The Bella Coola consider that crying is not only unpleasant, but actively displeasing to the supernatural beings who permit it at death alone. Consequently, the persistent wailing of a child is likely to cause the death of a relative in order that the tears shed may have justification. Many stories illustrate this theme; in fact, to cry for no real reason is practically taboo. A mother quiets a fretting child by saying: 827 865 761 [784] [861]

"Do you want your father and me to die?"

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

827

If the father dies, she beats her son or daughter, adding:
865 "Cry now. See what you did."
[761] Henceforth the child restrains himself, but usually drastic steps are taken to reform an infant before his weeping causes any such misfortune. The parents of a petulant child request aid from a man of even temperament to cure him. The person undertaking the task prepares a large basket, watches until he notices the youngster crying and displaying bad temper, then seizes the offender, thrusts him into the basket and hangs it in the doorway, free to move with every stir of the child shut within.

"Cry as much as you like now," he says. "If you become hoarse like a heron you will turn into one of those birds."

This threat is based on an ancient story describing how a child to whom this was done changed into a heron and flapped away in bird form. Sometimes the man says that the same will happen to the child, or simply that he will be able to fly like a heron. All day he is left suspended, no one heeding his sobbing and howling, but in the evening he is taken down, petted, and told not to be naughty again. This medicine always cures a petulant child who can thenceforth be held to ridicule by being reminded that he is "A Basket Boy." The same remedy is often employed for a quarrelsome brother and sister who are shut up together.

865 To Cure Disobedience and Rudeness

861 If a child is persistently rude and disobedient to his parents, they request the assistance of a man of even temperament to cure him. The person selected must be one who is never angry, and who attends to his own business in a placid, quiet manner. The mother and father discuss who is best fitted by character to help their erring child and then ask his aid, promising a suitable recompense. If the man accepts the task, he waits till he notices the child crying peevishly. Running to him, he holds the youngster firmly and, in spite of this strug-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

gles, bites him between the eyes or at the back of the neck so that a little blood flows. 865 861

"If you don't keep quiet," he says to the screaming child, "I shall bite you all over your head."

This medicine acts in two ways: (1) The offender is so frightened that he is likely to reform; (2) Contact with a man of good disposition imparts the same to him. A tuft of mountain goat wool is inserted into the wound to make it heal properly.

To Cure Disobedience and Laziness 461

Parents whose child exhibits these bad qualities also ask help of a man of good character. If he accepts the task, he provides himself with a bone needle and waits until he hears the child refuse to perform some simple task. Then, with a rush, he throws the offender on his stomach and supposits the needle until the blood flows freely. He then releases the frightened child who usually slinks away to bed for the rest of the day. When the bleeding has ceased, the quiet person cuts chips from the canoe of an energetic man and rubs them on the wound, saying: 865 861

"Please, may you be like the canoe, always active and doing whatever is expected of you."

An old Kimsquit man recalled vividly the application of this medicine to him when he refused to fetch water for his mother. He was about eleven years of age at the time and asserted that it had greatly improved his behaviour.

MEDICINES FOR ORDINARY DISEASES

For Sprains and Bruises 752

Pound stalks of false hellebore, mix with hemlock gum, and bind on the injured spot as a poultice.

For Swollen Neck

Cut off small pieces of a thoroughly smoked bear's heart, pound in water, and drink the mixture. 757

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark. 796 574 [865]

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full time to the task, working with zest and energy.[1] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, smamsmash, which signifies that the nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as: 226 [562] [825]

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[2]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish are relatively complicated. 226 796 [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[1] For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[2] Cf. Boas, p. 78.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 552 465 skill shown by those who assisted, as well as the generosity of X, regulates the disbursements.

The following presents of money were given at a potlatch held about 1890, and were considered reasonable.

For painting two designs[a] on the front outside wall of the house	$ 40.00
For the erection of four upright posts, supporting the walls and roof of the house	30.00
For each longitudinal beam with painting	20.00
For each cross-beam, without painting	10.00
For the planking of the side walls[b]	100.00
For painting the rear wall of house, which is also the outside wall of the back-room[c]	40.00

[485] An average totem-pole would cost perhaps $150, but the prices varied greatly with size, complexity of design, and skill displayed.

426 *556 The next distribution is of goods to repay debts which X has incurred at previous potlatches, that is, to return "investment presents" then received (I, p. 232). This is known as hisdjut, "repay," and the word is applied to all kinds of repayments, including revenge. One of a chief's difficulties is to remember his indebtedness. He may have been a guest at twenty potlatches, and at each has received presents varying in value, not only from different donors, but from other people associated with them. To keep these accurately in mind is [267] hard but essential, and parents carefully train their children to do so.

As previously mentioned, the Bella Coola have no fixed scale of interest on debts. Careful inquiries made on that point disclosed the idea to be entirely foreign. The greater the interest, the greater does the donor show himself to be. If, for example, X received an investment present of one hundred blankets from a Bella Bella chief ten years previously, [532] [342] [a] These two are painted, that on the left of the central door on entering passways X's father's crest, that on the right his mother's.

[b] Four men would work together on this task.

[c] Two men would work together at this, the choice of designs corresponding to those of the outside front.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

rite, nuxāxkāmy. This can be described here, since, although not closely associated with the potlatch, it serves to teach children the principles of present-giving and indebtedness. February is the proper month for nuxāxkāmy, although preliminary arrangements are made early in the winter. A chief who has a son or daughter about ten or twelve years of age may decide to use some of his food, and a small part of his wealth, for the benefit of the child. With the assistance of his relatives, the father begins making large numbers of toy canoes, miniature bows and arrows, small baskets, and models of all other types of articles commonly given away at potlatches. The manufacture of these requires several months, but towards the end of January they are nearly ready.

A name must then be chosen for the child. Since a nuxāxkāmy dance is a humorous, non-sacred affair, a nuxāxkāmy name is not embodied in a myth, but is drawn from some story. Occasionally, parents decide on a new one, but more often the designation selected is one used for the same purpose by a grandparent of the child. There is no rivalry with regard to names of this type, and one of them can be re-used without asking consent of the last incumbent, although permission would never be refused. There must be a song with each name and the grandparents and other elderly relatives teach this to a number of boys who are to act as singers. The words may have been remembered from a previous occasion; if not, a simple theme is composed by one of the old people having some reference to the name about to be conferred. For example, one appellation of this type is Tepīmar, Fawn, and the accompanying words are:

"We hear that Deer has borne a child."

Another name is Qalew, Beaver, and the song: "Be of good cheer, the Beaver is coming."

A third song is, "Go outside under the house like a dog."

Occasionally a small incident in an ancestral myth is used. The teaching of the song to the juvenile singers is a source of constant merriment; the parents and grandparents are the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

852 principal instructors, aided by the professional musicians.
867 Boys are always willing to act as singers for the practice they [533] receive, and the gifts they will acquire. Other lads are chosen to act as heralds, an effort being made in each case to pick those likely to pursue these professions.

[196] The day finally selected for the ceremony is in February, on a date when nothing of importance is taking place. The juvenile heralds summon the child guests, who have been invited in accordance with the rules governing a potlatch, especial care being taken to omit none to whom the child donor is indebted. His father carefully instructs him in this matter, thus impressing on his son's mind one of the fundamental points of Bella Coola life. In the late afternoon, when all have [535] assembled, the boy singers beat out the donor's song and he dances to it. It may be in the nature of a susaok, a'alk, or kusiut dance, according to the wishes of his parents. In many cases, one of the grandparents or some other old relative likewise dances to the song, using whatever style he chooses. There is no ceremonial significance to the ceremony and all enjoy themselves immensely, especially the adult guests. After
[553] the dancing, the new name is announced and presents are given to the guests. The father of the young donor carefully instructs him as to the scale of his gifts, emphasizing the necessity of rewarding the singers and heralds, and of repaying with interest those children from whom he has received favours. In this way, the ceremony serves as a practical example of how to conduct a potlatch. The parents of the donor always provide some tasty food for the occasion, and this is distributed after [554] the gifts have been handed round. The necessity for food and presents makes it impossible for any but the children of chiefs to enjoy this training.

After the ceremony, the children parade up and down the sidewalk in front of the houses, singing boisterously. The performance has been for their benefit and they wish to "show off." One night completes the affair, but the following afternoon another child may summon his comrades to a similar ceremony. The child singers first beat out the song of the present donor, then that of his predecessor, to which the latter dances once again. If food is plentiful, nusäxkämx ceremonies may be carried out every day for several weeks, or a year or two may elapse without one. A child's song is remembered from year to year and he dances whenever it is beaten out. The name acquired in this way is used semi-jocularly by a lad's comrades. After marriage, it is considered unfitting for a youth to be concerned with nusäxkämx and he normally becomes an a'alk.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ceremonies of this kind have been discontinued for many years and it was impossible to obtain detailed accounts. The main features are clear: they served to instruct children in the methods of present-giving. According to one informant, there were two types of nusäxkämx ceremonial; one of the humorous pattern above described in which, however, food alone was given away, and another in which miniature presents were distributed. This man believed that the latter was only possible for the children of wealthy chiefs, and that on such occasions the themes consisted of small incidents in the family myth. In either case, the importance of ceremonial can be judged from the manner in which it was impressed upon mere children.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

before their birth. When the mother of the twin described in the last paragraph was awaiting delivery in a temporary shelter in the woods, its roof fell, cutting her head. The old woman who mentioned this occurrence stated that both her grandmother, the Sockeye Salmon, and her sister, a Spring Salmon, though still unborn, were aware of the accident and remembered the comments of the midwife. 845

On account of their uncanny power, twins are considered weaklings and usually die young in spite of the care lavished upon them and the taboos observed by their parents.[3] A dead twin, instead of being buried, is put in a box which is placed in a tree far away from the village. Every year the river changes its course, eating into its banks in order to reach the tree containing the body, and this continues until it reaches its goal and sweeps away tree and coffin. 766 [823]

Childhood Instruction

When working in the field, an anthropologist almost inevitably concentrates upon ceremonials and other epochs in an individual's life, to the detriment of the daily routine which in Bella Coola, as everywhere else, is fundamentally important although it defies description on account of its intangibility. A child grows up in a large house, occupied by several families, in which there is little privacy. The parents provide food and clothing, but more distant relatives take a greater share of responsibility for this than do white people. When food is being given out, a child soon learns that he will be given some of it, and that he will have his portion in any distribution of presents. Furniture, bedding, and other necessities are reduced to a minimum, but a boy or girl is welcome to sleep with relatives should his own parents wish to go hunting or fishing. The sense of power possessed by a Bella Coola with many relations is largely intangible, but it has practical applications as 114 855 [867] [867]

[3] It is probable that the arduous life led by a twin and its parents during the first year after birth lessens its chances of survival. Needless to say, this explanation does not find favour with the Bella Coola.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a near relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of 867 stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed [732] man, he is told of Ałałals, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

poverty-stricken," say the elders. "If you do, you will become like them yourself." 867

As a boy grows older, his father insists that he wash, pray, and practise other ritual acts likely to win approval from supernatural beings. He is frequently beaten to inure him to hardship. By the time a youth is eleven or twelve years of age he has become fully acquainted with the principles of the potlatch system and a wise parent teaches him to remember debts. Taking his son to some quiet spot in the woods, he makes a small bundle of cedar twigs, for example, and tells him: [735] [869] [861] 211 867

"So-and-so at Bella Bella gave you fifteen beaver skins. When you see this bundle you must think of those skins."

Then he takes another bunch, perhaps of spruce twigs, to represent a present from a Rivers Inlet chief. A bundle of nettle fibre may stand for a Kimsquit debt; one ornamented with a tuft of undyed cedar-bark, a gift from a Tal·io chief; a solid piece of alder stem, a local debt; another section of alder stem with a notch in it, another local debt, and so on. The son is expected to listen attentively, and to repeat after his father what each represents. Then the pupil turns his back and the instructor alters the positions of the bundles. His father tells him to look at them and repeat what each signifies. This is repeated time after time until a boy becomes familiar with remembering debts by means of symbols. In later years, if he becomes a chief, he will use this method for bearing his indebtedness in mind. No system of standardized signs has been evolved, each individual merely designates what he wishes by a mark which he alone can recognize.

A child grows up in the community, absorbing information and lore without conscious effort, learning the activities which he will later practise, fearing the supernatural beings that are dreaded by his parents, marvelling at the power of those endowed with supernatural ability, and generally fitting himself for the struggle of life. If his parents are wealthy, he may be fortunate enough to be given a susaok name and to partake in 867 [556]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

867 imitation potlatches, but he cannot himself carry out a cere-
556 mony until he has reached manhood.

Puberty Rites

881 The change from childhood to adult age is, of course, more obvious with girls than with boys, and the former alone must observe strict taboos. Menstrual blood, like that which follows delivery, is unclean, especially that emitted at the first dis-
[784] charge. A woman who has just given birth is a sxaiäx; an adolescent girl, a sxyaxwi, that is, "A Person Not Fully Tabooed"; the attitude with which the former is regarded is held, in a lesser extent, for the latter.

At the first indication, the girl asks a woman to inform her mother of her condition, and goes home immediately if she happens to be away at the time. Her parents at once make a small enclosure or bedroom of planks or matting in either of the front corners of the house, providing it with a trap-door and ladder by which she can leave without passing through the front door. There the girl must lie for four days, with legs close together and bent at the knees, never stretched out straight. She is not allowed to drink anything, and must eat sparingly; if she should consume much food, she would be greedy when an adult. When necessary for her to leave the enclosure, a woman must always accompany her. Her mother, or some other female relative, provides her with the usual soft cedar-bark pads. On the fifth day, she leaves her shelter early in the morning with one feminine friend and goes to a secluded pool back in the forest, where she washes for the first time. Then she runs rapidly through the woods, which has the effect of making her a strong woman. Should a girl fail to do this,
[753] she would be afflicted with an illness caused by the salmon, become blind, and die young.

784 For one year an adolescent girl is subject to many restric-881 tions. Her near approach to the river would offend the salmon and cause them to avoid Bella Coola, so she is not allowed to [825] draw water, or even to appear on the bank. She may not use

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house 784 through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The 881
Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest [761] reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period[4] she cannot eat [262]
fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true [783] that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no [222] more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she [513] must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger [867] of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing 881 and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound [292] with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is [301] worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat [439]

[4] [ie - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER IV

GAMES

517 THE subject of games, lying on the border-line of social 121 customs, was one which was not fully investigated. The [177] Bella Coola, like all other peoples, have a number of sports and pastimes and although the old diversions are being forgotten by the younger people, many of the old men and women are familiar with those played in their youth. As isolated customs these may be of small value, but games of all kinds often preserve ancient practices and, as providing useful clues to the spread of peoples or of culture, are worthy of investigation. Unfortunately, lack of time made it impossible to give the subject the attention it deserved, and the few games here described must not be considered an exhaustive treatment of the subject.

526 Though less fond of competitive sports than the Indians
[171] of the Plains, the Bella Coola enjoy canoe-racing and wrestling.
[628] The former appears to have been an ancient diversion; picked crews from different villages competed amid the encouraging shouts of their fellows, and even now the younger men are anxious to display their skill in this respect. Wrestling, which [177] used to be common during all non-sacred gatherings, has almost entirely disappeared since the prohibition of the potlatch.

538 The favourite sedentary pastime, enjoyed equally by young
[517] and old, is the telling of stories. Those of a sacred nature, especially ancestral myths, are reserved of course for ceremonial occasions, but the older men and women remember [825] many tales describing the exploits of birds and animals which are recounted again and again to the enjoyment of the listeners, although they may have heard the same recital fifty times. Children enjoy the companionship of some old story-teller and it is a common sight to see an old man or woman, surrounded by an eager group, explaining once more how Raven outwitted his rivals or was himself led into difficulties. Many of these [867] stories are somewhat indecent; others appear brutally frank,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

but the Bella Coola do not consider this aspect and the children grow up in an atmosphere entirely lacking in restraint of speech. Some stories teach a moral lesson, but they are recounted merely for entertainment. At the present time, no one knows who invented the stories; they have been handed down from dim antiquity and alterations or embellishments are considered improper, while the composition of new tales appears to be unknown.

Another pastime is smoking. Among some Indian tribes the practice has a definite religious significance, but this appears to be lacking among the Bella Coola. Most of the men enjoy either a pipe or cigarettes, and some of the women also indulge, but few carry the habit to excess. All the older people affirmed that their ancestors had smoked for generations. Tobacco was not grown, but kinnikinick, *milix*ʷ', was used, and also a plant known as lsaix'. Another smoking mixture was bark of lsxwatelp, toasted before a fire until dried and brown, and then crumbled between the hands. These materials have given place entirely to imported tobacco, and the white man's pipe has replaced the native one. The latter consisted of a gooseberry cane from which the pith had been extracted; sometimes a small bowl of elderberry wood was added, but often the mixture to be smoked was simply placed within the end of the hollow stem.

Adults, especially the men, are addicted to gambling. They are fond of placing stakes on a race or other trial of strength, and enjoy all kinds of games of chance. Some of the younger men have mastered a few of the simpler games of cards on which they spend a certain amount of time and money. The favourite gambling game, however, is one found in all parts of the coast, which is played with a pack of fifty-four smoothed crabapple sticks. The rules are complicated and no effort was made to learn more than the general principles. The pieces are divided among the eight or ten contestants and concealed; then one player guesses in whose hand a certain marked stick is hidden. If he is successful, the others pay him a forfeit; if in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,[9] either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk. [211] [778]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

594 [851] 594 868 855 861

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 369), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

594 869

[9] Since the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This account is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included. [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

855 well, and these are soon learnt by the child who is fortunate
[867] enough to have many kinsmen. Primarily, responsibility rests with the parents for the care and support of their offspring, but they have the advice, assistance, and material aid of their relatives. Nor are these limited to the near kindred of either father or mother; all members of the ancestral family take their part. Housemates, also, even if unrelated, take an interest in any child who shares their habitation, irrespective of his rank.

Much of the care bestowed on children is of a magical nature and must be reserved until a later chapter. Little boys 868 follow their fathers on hunting expeditions and so acquire knowledge by practical experience, as do girls from their mothers with regard to household tasks and feminine occupations.
867 Even small children are quick to notice the attention paid to the orders of chiefs, and carry out their commands without demur. A disobedient child is beaten or thrown into cold 861 water; the parents usually act in such cases, though a near relative does not hesitate to do so, especially if he is a chief.
857 Like all other children, Bella Coola boys and girls are fond of stories and listen eagerly to the tales told in the long evenings
867 by some old man or woman. Many of these are somewhat
538 obscene, but they serve to teach much ancient lore, and at the same time to emphasize many taboos and restrictions which are thus assimilated without definite schooling. They illus-
[626] trate the laws of morality, as does the public disapproval shown to anyone who infringes some point of etiquette or behaviour.
[825] If a child makes fun of a cat-fish or a bull-head, he is not told to stop doing so; instead, one of his elders tells him how, in the distant past, there was a famine, and advises him not to scoff at the fish which alone saved his ancestors from starvation at that time. If a rude little boy laughs at a maimed or deformed
[732] man, he is told of Ałałałs, a Bella Bella urchin who repeatedly mocked a one-eyed man and presently, himself, lost the sight of an eye.

867 "Don't laugh at cripples, blind people, or those who are [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

154 who has been "cured" of an illness, recovers; the man whose
771 death has been "caused" by magic, dies. An average white 789 man would consider such statements to be erroneous, but they not only figure in stories and beliefs, but some of them have been actually observed by the writer. The explanation lies in the susceptibility of the Bella Coola to suggestion. The conviction that he is to die so weakens a man that death often results; belief that he is to recover, aids a sick person to throw off the malady. This sentiment, intelligible in case of disease, is equally applicable in other matters. The child who has been [868] endowed with carpentry skill grows up with the conviction to assist his labours. Moreover, his relatives and friends are also aware of it, and he receives every opportunity to practise, so that the outcome desired is often the consequence of the act.
789 Though the Bella Coola do not appreciate that psychological 828 and sociological factors may be the real cause of the result, they realize the importance of the power of thought. For [771] example, if a group of people is unanimous in wishing some end, or expects some event to happen, it is believed that their thoughts are strong enough to bring about its occurrence. The following examples illustrate this point:

It is said that when the white man first came to British Columbia, a tribe of Indians was living in a secluded valley, far to the south. As more and more settlers arrived, the occupants were driven from their homes and forced into the barren [787] mountains. One night, Ałquntām came in a vision to one of the natives, saying:

"I see what you desire; you want the white men to withdraw. You, yourself, are helpless. But if all your fellows wish the same, the white men will depart."

The man told all his friends and they agreed to concentrate the next night on their wish to expel the white man. A few failed to do so, and nothing happened. The second night there was the same lack of unanimity. The desire to drive away the intruders grew stronger in course of time, until one night this was the centre of the thoughts of all; next morning the white

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

856 789 868 To Cause Ability in Carpentry (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good carpenter to impart to him ability similar to his own. He spits on his tools and rubs these over the child's heart, saying:

"Please be a carpenter."

This is done only for male children.

(2) Cut splinters from the tools of an expert carpenter, burn them, and rub the ashes over the child's hands. This is most efficacious when performed by the carpenter himself who says as he rubs:

"Please be a carpenter."

000 To Cause Ability in Thieving

Indians from the vicinity of Sitka are said to fasten a live mouse in an infant's clothing or tie one in the cradle. This causes the child to amass riches easily, but when practised by a Sitka man and woman who were slaves of the Bella Coola it was so potent that their son grew up to be an inveterate thief.

825 856 789 To Cause Ability to See Beneath the Water

When the infant is in the cradle, kill a gull, cut out its tongue, and rub this around inside the child's mouth. Strip the feathers and lay them so that the infant sleeps upon them. This gives him the same ability as the bird to see beneath the ocean and tell where fish are to be found. This was done not many years ago to a Bella Bella child whose ability was consequently so great that it frightened his friends.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

The Kitlobe achieve this by making a child sleep upon dog hair. No instance is remembered of this having actually been practised by the Bella Coola, although, being well known, there is no reason why it should not be used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far
789 into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is [785] matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[868] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

APPENDIX B

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of pastime which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance; they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while paving the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. During the long delays which occur in all the dances it is a common sight to see an old crone teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learnt when young. Some men remember a number from childhood, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was stated that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here recorded were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to learn all the Bella Coola figures; a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Haddon,[1] in itself following the method used by Rivers and Haddon. It will be assumed that the reader is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position 1," and "Navaho." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A SALMON-TRAP

Double the loop; two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing dorsally across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

[1] K. Haddon, Cat's Cradles from Many Lands (London, 1912).

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

428 influence of a chief is usually sufficient to settle claims as to 553 which of his brothers shall receive which name. Even if none of them is a chief, some one of them is certain to have greater [578] influence than the others. If a dead man has no sons, his daughters can assume his names, which they may transmit to their children. Failing both sons and daughters, a man's brothers and sisters are his heirs, as usual, the one of influence being the one who really arranges matters.* None the less, it [614] must be emphasized that if the members of the immediate family are slow to validate a dead man's names, they may be taken by any member of the ancestral family.

463 In former days it was customary to create a "remembrancer" to preserve the ancestral myth. The older and more •869 influential members of the ancestral family would choose an [614] intelligent young relative to whom to relate the myth in great detail. One informant described how her mother, the last official "remembrancer," had been instructed by her grandfather.
The old man had been accustomed to take his granddaughter, a girl about twelve years of age, to bed with him, and whisper to her the myth, with his hand pressed over her mouth to prevent escape of his words. At the conclusion of the recitation [789] he always spat in her ears to make the words stick. The members of the ancestral family, recognizing that the "remembrancer" was the person best acquainted with the myth, were wont to consult him or her about it, and, of course, about the [553] names embodied in it. A "remembrancer" had no authority to decree who should receive names, but appeals were often made to him, and a tactful individual was frequently able to settle disputes.

578 Considering the extreme fluidity of the whole system it is 428 surprising that quarrels are not more common. These are 614 limited by the system of wills, through which a man bequeaths his most valuable personal property, especially his intangible 553 property in dadai name-prerogatives (II, p. 1). Ancestral

* Mr. Ha grants that the same principle governs the disposal of houses and gardens on the reserve.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924)2948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,* either placed for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk.

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ceremonial family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 364), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

* When the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This summary is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is worthwhile, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

594 be made more powerful by magical means or the ritual acts of ●869 relatives. Although these often entail great labour and expense, parents seldom neglect their duty; in fact, care for their children is one of the strongest Bella Coola characteristics, though the methods used are so foreign to the white man that he has difficulty in realizing their meaning. The hope of both [847] parents is to have children to carry on their names; infanticide is unknown and the death of an infant is mourned almost as [586] much as that of an adult. Sterility and impotency are frequent causes for divorce.

163 At the present time there is a high birth-rate in Bella Coola, although the heavy infant mortality prevents any ap- [165] preciable increase in the population. In the old days, it is said, there were always large families, though much confidence cannot be placed in this statement. In families where there are 593 several children, the first-born, whether boy or girl, assumes an important position. His or her influence, as eldest, is naturally considerable, and the parents foster this through the vague feeling that it is proper for the eldest to be the most important in the family. In adult years, and after marriage, the influence of the eldest of a family continues to have considerable weight with younger brothers and sisters.

592 If a man is poor he cannot hope to have more than one wife, 556 and his family circle will be limited to their children, and per- [595] haps to elderly parents. On the other hand, a wealthy and [602] powerful man usually has a larger family. Not only may he have several wives, but his aged relatives, and those of his wife, look to him for support and assistance. Such are usually welcome to live in his house; they lend what aid they can in collecting food, and it gratifies a man's pride and sense of power to be closely surrounded by a large family. The Bella [888] Coola are, on the whole, considerate to their aged relatives.*

[198] *This is not true of the present. During the winter of 1923-4 a feeble old man, being alone, was often in actual want of food. Children and dependent, of a more dependent himself, some of his surviving relatives, of whom the nearest were neighbors, would take him into their houses. Commenting on this man's lot, several informants pointed out how, in the old days, such a case could have found

1;McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

poverty-stricken," say the elders. "If you do, you will become like them yourself." 867

As a boy grows older, his father insists that he wash, pray, and practise other ritual acts likely to win approval from supernatural beings. He is frequently beaten to inure him to hardship. By the time a youth is eleven or twelve years of age he has become fully acquainted with the principles of the potlatch system and a wise parent teaches him to remember debts. Taking his son to some quiet spot in the woods, he makes a small bundle of cedar twigs, for example, and tells him: [935] 869 [861] 211 867

"So-and-so at Bella Bella gave you fifteen beaver skins. When you see this bundle you must think of those skins."

Then he takes another bunch, perhaps of spruce twigs, to represent a present from a Rivers Inlet chief. A bundle of nettle fibre may stand for a Kimsquit debt; one ornamented with a tuft of undyed cedar-bark, a gift from a Tsi'is chief; a solid piece of alder stem, a local debt; another section of alder stem with a notch in it, another local debt, and so on. The son is expected to listen attentively, and to repeat after his father what each represents. Then the pupil turns his back and the instructor alters the positions of the bundles. His father tells him to look at them and repeat what each signifies. This is repeated time after time until a boy becomes familiar with remembering debts by means of symbols. In later years, if he becomes a chief, he will use this method for bearing his indebtedness in mind. No system of standardized signs has been evolved, each individual merely designates what he wishes by a mark which he alone can recognize.

A child grows up in the community, absorbing information and lore without conscious effort, learning the activities which he will later practise, fearing the supernatural beings that are dreaded by his parents, marvelling at the power of those endowed with supernatural ability, and generally fitting himself for the struggle of life. If his parents are wealthy, he may be fortunate enough to be given a noble name and to partake in 869 [556]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

occupants of the canoe, heard a roaring noise and saw a fish-weir, similar to those used by the Bella Coola, stretching across Burke Channel, which is about a mile and a half wide at this point. They went close to the beach and a brave man cut a passage through the obstacle. A similar trap was once seen stretching across South Bentinck Arm. 787 * 539

An unusual apparition may be regarded as an omen of death. For example, not many years ago a young half-breed saw a motor-boat moored to the bank of North Bentinck Arm with an eagle seated in the stern. He ran his own motor-boat towards it, but as he approached the eagle became a man. Then as he drew still nearer, never taking his eyes off the other boat, it, with its occupant, sank beneath the water, without leaving so much as a ripple. On relating the incident to his father, the latter recognized it as an omen of death. Six months later the half-breed's sister died, thus confirming her father's prognostication. 787 * 763 [811]

Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate

Experiences such as have been cited in the last section are regarded as of possible, and not infrequent occurrence at the present time. On the other hand, supernatural aid granted to those in misfortune, though it is the theme of many stories, is not considered as likely to happen now. The Bella Coola believe the narratives to be chronicles of actual events, and base their conceptions of many supernatural beings on their characteristics as therein described. There is no ceremonial significance attached to any of these stories; they may be, and are told by anyone, frequently for entertainment. Unquestionably, there is a feeling that the moral brought out in such tales is of value in educating the young people, though this point is never emphasized. 787 * 538 [869]

Supernatural aid granted to an unfortunate person is termed ulhkwulqu. Power so obtained cannot be transmitted by the recipient, although memory of the experience is 787 * [575] [535]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tense throughout this chapter, and to assume the presence of a number of young men and women ignorant of the significance of the rites. Formerly, the kukusiut often had difficulty in impressing the uninitiated with their prowess, and feuds with the a'alk were common.

Although membership in the kusiut society depends on an ancestral prerogative, it is essentially a democratic institution. A certain amount of wealth is necessary to validate a kusiut prerogative, but nothing comparable to that required for a potlatch; in fact, poor men are often persons of great importance within the ranks of the society. Nor are the prerogatives considered to be as valuable as ancestral rights, so that slaves are often admitted as kukusiut by their masters. An important kusiut is not esteemed by the community in the same way as the donor of many potlatches; in short, membership in the society brings limited ceremonial and semi-religious advantage, not social prestige of a public nature.

Powers and Functions of the Society

Any secret society can be viewed from the standpoints of a member, and of a non-member. The scope of the kusiut organization can be most clearly outlined by describing first what an uninitiated person knows about it. From his infancy, parents impress upon a child the supernatural powers of the kukusiut and the dangers attached to their rites. Such instruction is perhaps strongest where one, or both, is not a member. They then voice their own fears, and do not merely deceive for the good of the society. Steeped as every child is in a firm belief of the near presence of the supernatural, he readily believes what he is told. He learns, for example, that if, without special invitation, he dares enter the house where a kusiut dance is taking place—at any time during the four days or more that it lasts—his spirit will be drawn from him. This is sufficient to deter him from prying too closely into the rites. Strangely enough, there seem always to have been differences in teaching with respect to this deception. It is believed that if a non-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nuuxtuqqnam: Woman endowed supernaturally by Anu'lituulsaix and serving as patron (?) to a kuxiut dancer.

[787] nuuxliut: Omen of death.

Nuuxtumulmum, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Ttitsqlitsa-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuuxumlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Qemoqme's house.
2—Kuxiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuuqim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuuxmmqs: Kuxiut name assumed by a Stuxe woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuuqumum: Kuxiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qhlxum is obscure.

Nu'uxwuhumuix, "The Widener": One of Raven's names as chief.

[585] nuhuxtihl-um: Synonym for huxtum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuphuxlsikin, "Heedlessly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqu-ccts: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqtulsu-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymtt, "Place of Much Qtymtt": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqwqtmis: Nuqwul name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqilkqulsu-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[805] nuqmuxw-it ne xwq'nlu: One year.

[828] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqsil, "Empty House": House in which a kuxiut dance is taking place.

nuqsiut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[821] Nuqtuly': 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[827] nuqulitsu: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqwuuu: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kuxiutum and other important kuxiut rites.

[777] nuq'nuxlihin: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwhumlaix: Kuxiut name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwlum: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqulsis: The upper heaven.

nuqwu: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwuulqlsu-i: A Stuxe cemetery.

Nuxtlqwuxtmuts, "Where Nqumtim Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[824] nuxtuqwu-ccq: Cottonwood bark.

Nuxtqwuit'nu, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smuxu in the beginning of time.

nuxtlumq: Canoe-maker.

Nuxlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqlsis.

[535] nuxtuktmq: Children's dance which serves as training for kuxiut rites and to provide entertainment.

[869]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 the neighbouring Carriers, but Chilkotin as well sometimes 484 descended to the valley. On the coast, though the dense under-[648] brush prevented travel along the shore, the long fiords, shel-
[501] tered from the open Pacific, were ideal for the use of canoes.[10] Comparatively lengthy journeys were neither difficult nor 648 uncommon. The Tāl·io people were usually on amicable terms with the inhabitants of Rivers Inlet, and the Kimsquit with the Kitlobe. The Bella Coola were accustomed to attend [574] potlatches at Alert Bay and Fort Rupert,[11] Knight's Inlet, and Bute Inlet, receiving their hosts, in turn, at Bella Coola.
On the other hand, there was little friendly intercourse with the northern tribes, of which the Kitkatla especially were dreaded by the residents of the central coast. Until recent years the Bella Coola had no direct knowledge of other Salish-speaking peoples, although some of the Chilkotin told them of a tribe living far to the south, in the interior, whom they encountered in some of their wanderings and used to term Nuxālkmx, recognizing the similarity between their language and that of the [197] Bella Coola. A few years ago several Bella Coola attended a [871] boarding-school and were amazed to find that many of their words were understood by fellow-students from Chilliwack.

648 To sum up: The Bella Coola were in close contact with 177 the neighbouring coastal tribes, with the members of which they felt themselves to have cultural affinities. They recognize that they have received many ceremonial rites from their neighbours, and must have adopted other elements of culture which they now consider indigenous. It is probable that certain Bella Coola customs must likewise have been transmitted to other tribes, but such lie without the scope of this monograph. The outlying villages were in close contact with foreign neighbours, and tended to assimilate elements of their culture, [101] but, on the whole, the Bella Coola present a tribal unity with distinctive local customs, falling within the general pattern of coastal culture.

[10] For types of canoes, see Appendix A.
[11] The principal Kwakiutl villages.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

867 imitation potlatches, but he cannot himself carry out a cere-
556 mony until he has reached manhood.

Puberty Rites

●881 The change from childhood to adult age is, of course, more obvious with girls than with boys, and the former alone must observe strict taboos. Menstrual blood, like that which follows delivery, is unclean, especially that emitted at the first dis-
[784] charge. A woman who has just given birth is a sxaiāx; an adolescent girl, a sxyexwi, that is, "A Person Not Fully Tabooed"; the attitude with which the former is regarded is held, in a lesser extent, for the latter.

At the first indication, the girl asks a woman to inform her mother of her condition, and goes home immediately if she happens to be away at the time. Her parents at once make a small enclosure or bedroom of planks or matting in either of the front corners of the house, providing it with a trap-door and ladder by which she can leave without passing through the front door. There the girl must lie for four days, with legs close together and bent at the knees, never stretched out straight. She is not allowed to drink anything, and must eat sparingly; if she should consume much food, she would be greedy when an adult. When necessary for her to leave the enclosure, a woman must always accompany her. Her mother, or some other female relative, provides her with the usual soft cedar-bark pads. On the fifth day, she leaves her shelter early in the morning with one feminine friend and goes to a secluded pool back in the forest, where she washes for the first time. Then she runs rapidly through the woods, which has the effect of making her a strong woman. Should a girl fail to do this,
[753] she would be afflicted with an illness caused by the salmon, become blind, and die young.

784 For one year an adolescent girl is subject to many restric-881 tions. Her near approach to the river would offend the salmon and cause them to avoid Bella Coola, so she is not allowed to [825] draw water, or even to appear on the bank. She may not use

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house 784 through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The 881
Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest [761] reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period, she cannot eat [262]
fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true [783] that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no [222]
more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she [513]
must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger [867] of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing 881
and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound [292] with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is [301] worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat [439]

1/4 [ie - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium,
[301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
826 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-
883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first
discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most kuman of all substances, and, therefore, a potent protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers. In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola regard the married state as the normal condition of man. Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Ksimsa, "Left Foot": Stone repository named from part of a supernatural creature.

Kyimlaic: Kimsquit hunter living in the last century.

[825] skymuk: Dentalium-shell.

skymel, sg., "Not Finished": Said concerning a hamatsa who dies between initiation and his first complete dance.

[592 881] s'ronem: Skull cap of grass and dentalium-shells worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.

skwala: Guest, especially from afar, to a hamatsa dance.

Skwalmaxum: 1—Supernatural herald.

2—Assemblage of the people for ceremonies of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and gaming competitions in connection with the Mystery dance.

3—Kimsquit term for the first night of a hamatsa dance.

skwalsin, "A Surpassing": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than they have received in return.

[576 601] smax: Place of concealment of a Mystery dancer's power.

s'maxlaqk: Old people, especially persons; this is a polite term for indirect address.

smetmet: Rightful location, especially the validated position of a chief in a house.

[415] smetqin: Dishes carved with ancestral crest.

smilqi: 1—Moon.

2—Daughter of the first settlers at Xalia.

[825] smi: Spring salmon.

smiha: Spring salmon house.

Smiskilic: Professional name of a hamatsa marshal.

Smoklic: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

smlimskas: 1—The allotment of work to hamatsa in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.

2—Phase, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a hamatsa dance.

Snaxwlaxwmkin, "The Resident Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Xaxli.

[575] snemelu or sinmelu: That which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a hamatsa ritual.

snenqlwi: Second night of a potlatch.

[226] snewmkin: Artificial, pier-like structure built into a river for use in hand-net fishing.

Sniltcoin, "Where People Go": A subterranean pool created by Raven at Kimsquit.

Snokwlamin: Cave near Dean Channel.

Snokwulmut, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Tlaqulilas-a's names and hence a designation given to hamatsa.

Sno'Xlwalmin: Supernatural woman who guards superiorities.

Snuxlaxum: 1—"The Open-Mouthed" (in the sense of open to ridicule); forth nickname. One of Tlaqulilas-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

[752 829] 2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

soqum: Swift running water.

sulhamaxum: 1—Ranks of ordinary individuals; this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the secret society.

2—Disturbing supernatural man who awaks.

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'zlu'sta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole
[852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive
[556] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Kû'siût, when it is given its Kû'siût name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qê'mtsica name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet
[292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [262] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [431] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until [527] he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisna'ka secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium,
[301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early 434 times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their ● 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-
883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves.
This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Ala: uaway village.
Ala cuk, "He of the Tied-up Penis": Name given to a lad whose sex was disguised in infancy.
[426] alakumulal: Refusal to lend to an outsider a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dancers.
[574] alaqulcuum: Meal served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.
Alaciyaxtem: Name of a female shaman.
Alaci, "The Opening of the Sky":
1—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ituce in the beginning of time.
3—Name of a Snaile chief.
Alakulcluic: Kactat name of a Bella Coola town.
Alakumulcluic: One of the first men to settle at Alakul in the beginning of time.
[575] alimucum: Sound having the ability to enter the back-room and treat initiates concealed there. The function probably antedates the employment of kai ulalile.
Alipaiac: Hobbes, supernatural beings who restrain supernatural Cannibals.
[592] allicum: Forceful beating of sticks.
Almucum: Wife of Tsaulalic, the supernatural hunter.
Almuckilum: Supernatural calendrical experts.
Almuqulcilic: Husband of Ala'Alamulmic; he is known only in Kimsquit.
[575] almulcluk: Kactat dance of mystery.
[574] almulcumum: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony.
almulcumumqu: Call used by heralds when summoning to a mourning ceremony.
[425] almumulic: The "Dragging Across" of a name, crest, or other intangible prerogative from wife to husband either at marriage or later at a repurchasing of the wife.
[578] almum: To drag a heavy burden.
[862] almulm ac: Cranberries mixed with chicken grease.
almucim: Visit to his repository by a kactat initiate.
[821] Almuculmut, "Facing Both Ways": Second moon after the winter solstice.
alulqumuq, "The Accustom Time": Hushed assemblage of the kakactat after departure of a Cannibal.
[577] alumkulum: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.
Alqulcluic: 1—Supernatural being who revives mortals.
2—Name received by a shaman from this being.

alu: Food.
[425] alumum, "Food Supplier": The term applied to the giving of the use of land at marriage.
Alqulcul, "Smokehole": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[756] alqmic: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in alternate strands.
[582] alqumik: Guarded, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence.
[825] Alqumiyac: Supernatural name of witches, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
Alqumqilcul, "A Gloom Downwards": Name given to an Alqulcul man in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Pre-
* 556 sently the guests assemble, those who are ~~usual~~ wearing on [575] their heads one or more weasel skins as a mark of membership [237] in the society. Each takes the seat to which he is entitled, [292] the chiefs behind the fire, or on either side of it, the commoners, [554] slaves, and foreigners in the two corners nearest the door. The heralds move to and fro between door and fire, their constant exchange of remarks adding to the general interest of the affair. It is the function of a herald to lend dignity to chiefs by [203] the tone of his observations, but should one fail to live up to his station, the herald is privileged to comment thereon. In some respects his position approximates that of a buffoon, but as a herald always receives valuable presents, the office is sometimes accepted by ambitious young men, willing to undertake the slightly derogatory duties in return for the substantial gain.

264 A number of young lads, friends or relatives of X, distribute
* 556 the food. It is placed in boxes; an important chief is not called upon to share with any one, whereas six or seven men of no [883] standing may partake from one box. These receptacles, with whatever food remains in them, are taken home by the guests; otherwise the host would be insulted. Many boxes are lost in [578] this way, a source of considerable irritation. After the first course, a second follows, consisting of a different kind of food in another box, and in some cases there is a third, and even a fourth course. A chief must never appear stingy. The more he gives, the more does his prestige increase. Also, a man who gives freely receives abundantly, so that generosity brings its reward.

583
* 556 Next, the father or other male relative of X's wife, or a [537] fluent friend who speaks for him, stands up and makes a speech, extolling the fame of his own family by sketching in general
[425] outlines one of the myths of his ancestors, and announcing that X's wife is taking to her husband some portion of it. This may [424] be the prerogative of using a spoon carved, for example, with the shape of a beaver; or a carved box, or a totem-pole with [532] certain figures on it, or the right to use a painting of a grizzly bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium, [301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early 434 times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [989] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [536] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
886 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-•883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first
841 discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 989

Lillie Deveaux E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Reference NEA

ceremony. The child sings first best out the song of the present donor, then that of his predecessor, to which the latter dances once again. If food is plentiful, wanikiddy ceremonies may be carried out every day for several weeks, or a year or two may elapse without one. A child's song is remembered from year to year and he dances whenever it is heard out. The name acquired in this way is used semi-jocularly by a lad's comrades. After marriage, it is considered unfeeling for a youth to be concerned with wanikiddy and he normally becomes an o'ult.

Ceremonies of this kind have been discontinued for many years and it was impossible to obtain detailed accounts. The main features are clear: they served to instruct children in the methods of present-giving. According to one informant, there were two types of wanikiddy ceremonial; one of the humorous pattern above described in which, however, food alone was given away, and another in which miniature presents were distributed. This man believed that the latter was only possible for the children of wealthy chiefs, and that on such occasions the dances consisted of small incidents in the family myth. In other cases, the importance of ceremonial can be judged from the manner in which it was impressed upon mere children.

Boas Overwith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuxlaxta, wash-basin. In the land above, Alqantám has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Alqantám who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some say that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to fatiguing of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Alqantám, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed xúlaxum, a word connected with nuxlaxta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.*

*This may be a recent misconception.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Causative Medicines

Medicines of Infancy

789 To Cause Tallness

856 As soon as the umbilical cord is cut, blow upon it and pull it out; the infant will grow up to be tall and big.

The following medicines are applied four days after birth:

The infant is washed, formerly in a circular cedar or cottonwood basin, and the remedy pressed against its body while drying. Some families prefer to wait until the child is able to crawl.

To Cause Strength (three means)

[824] [825] (1) Collect four pieces of bark, each from a different tree where a grizzly bear has scratched. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over his body. This ensures him the strength of a grizzly bear.

(2) Collect four water-smoothed, green stones from the river. Place them in the infant's wash-bowl, then warm them at a fire and rub over the body. After four days, return the stones to the river.

[825] (3) Warm the body of an octopus, beaver, or wolverine in the smoke of a fire and gently press the carcass against an infant's body, saying:

"Please, may he be like you."

This provides the child with the strength of the animal used.

To Cause Long Life

[816] [824] Collect four pieces of wood which have been rolled hard and smooth in a landslide. Boil them in the infant's wash-bowl, cool, then re-warm them at a fire and rub them over the body. This makes him strong and healthy, able to endure all dangers and weaknesses even those caused by a sorcerer. The principle is that the child will be as hardy as the wood proved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

itself to be by withstanding the crushing weight of stone and earth. An old Kimsquit man expressed the firm conviction that his great age was the result of this treatment soon after birth. 789 856 886 [824]

To Cause Imperviousness to Cold

Kill a water ousel, warm it at a fire, then press it against every part of the infant's body. This makes him as hardiness of cold water as the bird. A merganser may be used in the same way, or the foot of one be placed in the child's hand and pressed as his fingers clutch it. 789 825 856

To Cause a Quarrelsome Disposition

Burn the nest of wasps and rub the ashes on the infant's face. He will become as belligerent and quick to resent injury as the insects. One old man who habitually beats his wife explains that this is involuntary, since he was treated in this way when a child. Fighting is no longer allowed, so the only person on whom he can exercise his martial ardour is his wife. The woman regards this treatment as a matter of course and the reason is accepted as valid by her associates. [155]

To Cause Success in Thieving

Kill a pack-rat, warm it at a fire, and rub the carcass lightly over the infant's body. This will make him as successful a thief as the animal. Other methods are to cut off a foot and put this as the infant clutches it in his fingers, or to rub its hands with the ashes of a burnt rat.

To Cause Success in Singing

Catch a live robin or swamwamh (probably one of the thrushes), warm it at a fire, and rub it lightly against the infant's throat, saying: 533 789 825

"May he be a singer like you." 856

Then release the bird, and the child will grow up a songster. The following story is told of the power of the swamwamh's song: [539]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 125

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856
speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1911. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856
the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886
Alpaxnim told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and [858] place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his [715] son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

bers during his absence. As soon as she had found the figures, she called in all the people, showed them her discovery, and suggested throwing them into the fire. Some objected, pointing out that if Kâlat had been using them, their destruction would cause his death. It was decided to test him, so no one told the lover that he had been found out, and he suspected nothing on his return. When he went into another house, Xwe-tsus placed the figures near the fire; immediately, Kâlat tried to lie down at the edge of the one near him, and was restrained only by some of the bystanders. This proved his guilt conclusively. Xwe-tsus washed the figures to destroy their power, which caused Kâlat to lose his desire to enter a fire, and at the same time destroyed the love of the two girls for him. 132

This medicine can be made only by a skilled carpenter; its real potency lies in the ingredients though the figures cause it to work more speedily.

To Strengthen Virility

This medicine is used by old men. 133

Catch a porcupine alive and cut out a quill from near its tail so that the blood flows freely. Prick the penis with the quill until the human blood mingles with the animal's. Potency follows at once. 126 125

To Cause Conception

A medicine was formerly known to cause a first conception, but it has been forgotten. A mother, however, who has just lost an infant, can ensure the birth of another by bringing a stone from the cemetery four days after her bereavement. If she leaves this beneath her bed for four nights, and then throws it away carelessly, anywhere, she will soon be pregnant. 142 119

To Prevent Conception

A medicine with this effect was formerly known but has been forgotten.

2 McIlwraith E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex
789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

848 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)
789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk
957 Heat pods of Sudum Spatkalhlaw (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy
789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and put it with the other, saying:
825 "Pleasa, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life
Pick up a stone, spit on it four times, saying:
825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.
886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of enduring greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an oicchen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so enmeshed are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said that one man accidentally sucked when spitting on a toad, and swallowed the creature. It lived within his stomach for fifty years, causing no discomfort though its master could feel it moving, and its singing could be heard at intervals. This brought him no supernatural power, although he was enabled by it to live to a great age. When at last he died, the toad came hopping out of his throat and was carried respectfully to the river by his friends who covered the creature with eagle down and dyed and undyed cedar-bark. 789 825 886

Some of the rites already described with regard to animals and fish are similar in nature to this medicine.

To Cause Obesity 789

A medicine was formerly used by chiefs to make them fat and important-looking, but details of it have been forgotten. 826 622

To Cause Ability in Singing

Catch an apasen i (varied thrush?) alive and pat it four times against the throat of the woman to whom it is desired to impart the art, saying: 533 789

"May she be a singer like you." 825

Release the bird and the woman will become a good singer.

This bird is considered by the Bella Coola to be the finest songster among British Columbia birds, and they say that many animals and fish, including even the halibut, gather to hear its singing.

To Cause Ability in Hunting 224

There is a poisonous plant which, when eaten, almost kills the eater. If he recovers, he is henceforth endowed with great ability as a hunter. The species could not be ascertained. 789 824

To Cause Change in Weather

If a cold wind is desired: Heat the penis of a mountain goat or beaver at a fire. 789 821

If rain is desired: Wash the penis of a large buck and throw it into the ocean or a river, saying: 825

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As they grow older the plainness of feature is more pronounced, 142 145 accompanied by increasing heaviness of body (see Plate 16). Many of the adults are corpulent and move with slow, awkward 481 gait. As a rule the men have great strength and are capable 147 of prolonged and arduous exertion, particularly in paddling; in fact, constant use of canoes may have developed this powerful, ungainly build. Few are good walkers or packers; such, if they are found, usually belong to the lighter interior type. Among the grown people the face, though unbeautiful, often has 142 a kindly expression, even becoming attractive in laughter or 145 when a friendly grin spreads from ear to ear. With advancing age the prominent nose seems to grow larger, frequently becoming almost aquiline (see Plate 17). Many of the older people assert that this was even more common in former times. In time the face becomes lined with wrinkles and the body appears to shrink (see Plate 18). The teeth are in many cases worn down to the gums; this seems to cause no discomfort [194] though an old person cannot utter the glottal stops and velar sounds with which the language abounds without emitting a fine spray of saliva. They are absolutely unable to pronounce several of the Bella Coola words, while the constant spitting is a disagreeable feature of their conversation, particularly to [124] an investigator striving, often vainly, to record sounds accurately. The deep wrinkles of old women give them a benign "grandmotherly" expression, which makes them more attractive in extreme age than in youth (see Plate 19). Senile decay is 886 so frequent that the return to infancy in mind as well as in 145 physical powers is regarded as normal.

Among the coastal tribes hair on the face is not uncommon, 142 but in this characteristic the Bella Coola are pre'eminent. 144 Nearly all the men have sparse moustaches, at least; many have a heavy growth, and several are full-bearded. That this 302 was due to white mixture was assumed at first, but no evidence could be found to support this view. There are a number of half-breeds in the community but they are no more hirsute than the full-blooded Indians. Razors are now almost univer-

#192

L

[825] Lekletlic: Kimsquit man mentioned in ancient story.
Le'ko: Squirrel.
Lequemaic: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qemqemc in the beginning of time.
2—Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[463] Lewelpem-t': Name of a professional warrior; the word is said to have originated in Kitkatla but has remained for many generations in Kimsquit.
Le'qulc: Atnarko River, northern fork of the Bella Coola.
Lelbuck: Bamd name of a Kimsquit man.
Lelcwtcla, "The Brother Of [of Gooni]": Professional name of one of the first settlers at Dadali in the beginning of time. This may be the same word as Lelcwtcla.
Lelcwtcla: Another name for Tsadalic, the supernatural hunter. This may be the same word as Lelcwtcla.
[825] Lelcwtcla: 1—"The Beautiful": Supernatural name of Orca.
[886] 2—Kwiot name of a Kimsquit woman.
[426] Lelqulc: Return in old age to the thoughts and actions of infancy, senile decay.
[583] Lelqu: To repay indebtedness of any kind, especially presents received at potlatches.
Lelqumelqu, "A Paying": An arrangement by which a man's son-in-law gives him as "wife" an infant female relative by way of repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters.
Lemmac: Wrestling or shoving.
Lemm: Abbreviated Cannibal rite.
Lempuc: 1—Famous Bella Bella chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Lelcoto: Moth.
Lem: Tool for making vertical incisions in the back of cedar trees.

A

Lelmetcla: Former man living in the beginning of time.
Lelmelc: Kwiot name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] Lelqu: 1—Copper.
2—Unidentified town on the outer coast, mentioned in a story of the beginning of time.
3—Chief of this town.
Lelmeiem: Daughter of chief of the town of Copper.
Lelmelel: Copper name acquired by the first settlers at Ilaqu in the beginning of time.
Lelkiler: Man's name, created by the first settlers at Ielfin, in the beginning of time.
Lelkielqu: Name taken for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Lelulc: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Lelcwy: Lemd name assumed by one of the first settlers at Ilqulcd in the beginning of time.
Lelmem, "The Copper One": One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Schoolcraft E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA DeGascogne NE,

124 where I was working. Before I left, this medley contained so much Bella Coola that it was unintelligible to white people who knew Chinook alone.

Activities in the canneries would have interfered seriously with my work during the summer of 1922 if two men had not been confined to the village, Captain Schooner owing to an injured wrist, and Jim Pollard by the illness of his wife. These two men were willing to work half a day spinn without jealousy. Each was intensely proud of the traditions of his people and, realizing that their culture was passing away, was glad to assist in making it permanent in writing. An intimacy sprang up between Captain Schooner (see Plate 3) and myself culminating in my adoption, a circumstance which established my improved my position in the community. In this way I was enabled to collect a large amount of material before July when it was necessary for me to leave for the east.

In September, 1923, when I returned to Bella Coola, I found that Captain Schooner had died a few months before, respected alike by white men and Indians. With the aid of others with whom I had made contact it was possible to elicit much new information, as well as to clear up many obscure points. The previous summer I had been so overwhelmed with material that I had no time to collate it in the field and the gaps only became apparent after a year's study. The men were so busy hunting and laying in stocks of fire-wood, however, that I found it difficult to arrange regular hours of work, but this was a trifle compared with the initial difficulties of my first trip. In October, when the Bella Coola began to prepare for the winter dances, they had to appoint a successor to Captain Schooner, who had played a leading part in their production. Having been adopted by him, it was suggested that I take his place, a proposition which I readily accepted. This admitted me to the ranks of the old men, and I imagine that my interest encouraged them to hold more ceremonials than they had done for several years. In former times, a number of the older men used to devote much time and thought to the composing, remembering, and rendering of songs; in 1923 it was found that Jim Pollard (see Plate 4) alone had a sufficiently accurate memory to act as announcer. As more and more men wished to perform, he found himself unable to keep the texts in order, and asked me to join the choir as prompter. I held this position for the rest of the winter, taking a full part in every ceremony. Although the old customs had broken down enormously, this actual participation enabled me to understand the winter dances in a manner impossible from mere description. Later on, phonographic records were made of many of the songs used, thus preserving specimens of the fast disappearing music.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

My intimate association with the Bella Coola enabled me to collect the material here presented which, having been verified and reverified, I have every reason to believe is correct. Nevertheless, it has one serious defect owing to the lack of acuteness of my ear. I found it almost impossible to differentiate certain sounds; in fact, I sometimes recorded the same word with different spellings. Consequently, I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the native terms used in this monograph. Moreover, I was entirely unable to analyze proper names, which would have been of great value in understanding the attributes of supernatural beings.

When writing up field notes, the realization of my own inefficiency in the recording of sounds tempted me to rely upon the spelling of Boas whenever possible. After considerable hesitation, I rejected this course for the following reason. Ethnological work falls into two categories, descriptive and comparative. This monograph is of the former type, based on actual work in the field and the inclusion of any material from another source would destroy its originality. I believe that a descriptive work should consist exclusively of the author's own research, and I have adhered to this principle in spite of the advantages which would have followed the use of Boas' linguistic terms. For the same reason no attempt has been made to compare the customs and beliefs of the Bella Coola with those of other tribes, although this would undoubtedly have shed

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

APPENDIX B

STRING FIGURES

THE only form of pastime which it was practical to investigate in any detail was the construction of string figures. These seem to have no ceremonial or religious significance; they are made for recreation only, and it was found easy to learn a number while paving the way for other kinds of research. In fact, interest in them was one of the ways in which the writer became friends with a number of Bella Coola. As is to be expected, some individuals are more proficient in constructing complicated string figures than others, the old women being particularly adept. During the long delays which occur in all the dances it is a common sight to see an old crone teaching a group of young girls the figures which she herself learned when young. Some men remember a number from childhood, but the making of designs with string is regarded as more fitting for girls and women. Songs accompany many of the figures, and the singing of these is considered an essential part of the construction. It was stated that many more figures were known long ago; in fact, several of those here recorded were only obtained after repeated efforts on the part of an old woman to reconstruct those which she had been shown when a child. No attempt was made to learn all the Bella Coola figures; a larger number could doubtless have been collected, but those here described are the ones most commonly made.

The nomenclature used is that described by Miss Haddon,[1] in itself following the method used by Rivers and Haddon. It is to be assumed that the reader is familiar with this, including the meaning of the terms, "Opening A," "Position I," and "Hawaiian." A string about four feet long will be found most convenient for making the Bella Coola figures.

1. A SALMON-TRAP

Double the loop; two strands now take the place of the usual one, but these will be referred to as a single string or loop. The figure can be made equally well with a string one-half the usual length.

Place string as a simple loop over left thumb and index finger and the right hand.

With right index finger hook down the string passing dorsally across left thumb and index finger and draw out to right, allowing right hand loop to slip over this hooked-down string.

[1] K. Haddon, Cat's Cradle from Many Lands (London, 1911).

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

594 be made more powerful by magical means or the ritual acts of 869 relatives. Although these often entail great labour and expense, parents seldom neglect their duty; in fact, care for their children is one of the strongest Bella Coola characteristics, though the methods used are so foreign to the white man that he has difficulty in realizing their meaning. The hope of both [847] parents is to have children to carry on their names; infanticide is unknown and the death of an infant is mourned almost as [586] much as that of an adult. Sterility and impotency are frequent causes for divorce.

163 At the present time there is a high birth-rate in Bella [165] Coola, although the heavy infant mortality prevents any appreciable increase in the population. In the old days, it is said, there were always large families, though much confidence cannot be placed in this statement. In families where there are 593 several children, the first-born, whether boy or girl, assumes an important position. His or her influence, as eldest, is naturally considerable, and the parents foster this through the vague feeling that it is proper for the eldest to be the most important in the family. In adult years, and after marriage, the influence of the eldest of a family continues to have considerable weight with younger brothers and sisters.

592 If a man is poor he cannot hope to have more than one wife, 556 and his family circle will be limited to their children, and perhaps to elderly parents. On the other hand, a wealthy and [595] powerful man usually has a larger family. Not only may he [602] have several wives, but his aged relatives, and those of his wife, look to him for support and assistance. Such are usually welcome to live in his house; they lend what aid they can in collecting food, and it gratifies a man's pride and sense of power to be closely surrounded by a large family. The Bella
[848] Coola are, on the whole, considerate to their aged relatives.[14]

[178] [14]This is not true of the present. During the winter of 1923-4 a feeble old man, living alone, was often in actual want of food. Disliked and despised, of a morose disposition himself, none of his surviving relatives, of whom the nearest were nephews, would take him into their homes. Commenting on this man's fate, several informants pointed out how, in the old days, such a case could have found

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

The married sons of a chief usually live in his house, and if he is very powerful the husbands of his daughters may also reside with him. Such a man is at the zenith of power, surrounded by a close group, formed of elderly relatives, of children and grandchildren. Connections by marriage are also added to the family group. At the present time, for example, one Bella Coola man is looking after his brother's widow, and it is felt that she is a member of his family. 592 556 622 602

Another way in which a rich man can increase the size of his family is by adoption. Parents who have lost an infant may adopt the child of some member of the ancestral family of either father or mother. The matter is usually arranged soon after birth, and the transfer takes place immediately after weaning. The real parents are willing since they know that the adopting parents will be able to validate valuable prerogatives and names for the child, which they themselves are unable to do. This desire for their child's welfare overrules parental love. In such cases the real father or mother can likewise bestow names and other prerogatives on the child, who really becomes a member of two families. This is often done by an old couple whose own children have married and moved away, and who thus find themselves lonely. It is considered disgraceful for parents to allow their children to be adopted by anyone not a member of their ancestral family, since that would be an admission of inability to bring up a child in the path of his ancestors. 556 597 614 [888]

"Your father was not strong," could be said to such a child as a reproach.

In the case of an orphan some wealthy relative is almost always ready to adopt him. Consequently, as he grows up, he receives his full share of the ancestral origin myth, and the names embodied therein, so that the loss of his own parents is of little consequence in the course of life. Occasionally a child is not adopted by relatives, and then his fate is indeed hard. 736 597 shelter in the house of any chief, and shared in the food which was being distributed at the almost continuous ceremonial feasts. Now, each family lives alone and no one feels any responsibility for this old man. [178]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

TERM	DIRECT ADDRESS	INDIRECT ADDRESS
Father (continued)....	mán Term used, rarely, by an adult of either sex; ttitso is more common. Mán is often used by an adult when speaking to any old man as a courtesy title.	mán Used by an adult.
Mother's husband....	ttitso Terms used by small children.	ttitso
	mán Used by adult; more commonly ttitso.	mándimat Used by adult.
Mother.....	mámas Used by baby.	mámat Used by baby.
	gómas Used by small child.	gómat Used by small child.
	ttitn Used by adults of either sex with same limitations as mán.	ttitn
Father's wife.....	mámas or gómas Used by small children.	mámat or gómat
	ttitn Used by adults, more commonly gómas.	ttitndimat Used by adults.
	The application to step-parents of the terms usually limited to the real parents is merely a mark of endearment, without social significance.
Parent of either sex...	ttipmalaipely These terms are used for a parent of either sex when old and feeble. Their use is a mark of courtesy and implies respect for those with wide knowledge of family history.	ttmaxlaipk
Father's brother.....	ttini, or by name, or ttipmalaipely	ttini
Mother's brother.....	" " "	"
Father's sister.....	xukum " "	xukum
Mother's sister.....	" " "	"
	If the family contains more distant relatives of the generation preceding that of the speaker, for example, a father's father's brother's son, or a mother's mother's brother's daughter, the terms ttini and xukum may be applied in courtesy to these individuals.
Father's father.....	hakpai, or more commonly, ttitso	hakpi
Mother's father.....	" " " "	"
Father's mother.....	hipaas " " gómas	hipa
Mother's mother.....	" " " "	"
	Especially when living together, children usually address their grandparents by the terms properly applied to parents.

601
195
[888]
[595]
[888]
601

2:McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924) 1968
NEG Bellacoola NEG

192*
[229]
[242]
[324]

nuu: Kwakiutl name for powers distributed on "Eagle down."
pata: Scoop-net for catching salmon in creek.
pepaxtaqin: Head-dress of eagles' tails worn by hamat'sa dancers.
pnamal: Spring water.
Pungula: Settlement in the Carrier country.
sac-I: Cow parsnip.
Tsadlos: Name obtained in the beginning of time from the Sisutsa people in whose language it is said to mean whale.
Tsisemtsakodzis: Shaman who obtained his power from Thunder.
Tsisemkila: Daughter of a Kitlala chief living in the beginning of time.
tsulmulu: Wounding.
Tsuljac-i, "The Creek": Name taken by one of the first settlers at Hallaw in the beginning of time but long since changed to a hamat'sa designation.
tsuxwuxwu: 1—Shamaningkind.
2—One of the first men to settle at Hagaitsl in the beginning of time. [825] tsuxwuxwul-ala: Puppet-person in the form of a hamaningkind.
tsuqla-ala ek ziat: The concluding ritual of the hamat'sa season.
tsuqla-i: Gambling game played with cottonwoods sticks. [525] Tsudzlaxi, "The One Whose Work Has Failed": Professional name of a hamat'sa novitiat.
tsulumul: The desertion of her husband by a wife. [576]

T

Tidadu: Ancestral name of a Sisau man.
Ti-i"xwaxwa: Kitamgatt man mentioned in an allegedly historical account. [574] tsu: "Hello!" "Hail!" or "Greetings!"
tu-i: Exclamation having the significance of, "May you have a safe passage," said when a corpse is drawn through the roof.
Tidzlo: One of the first men to settle at Hakgwaat in the beginning of time.
Tlaudji: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
tsuxwu: 1—Prerogative, tangible or intangible, which some hahamat'sa possess in addition to a dance.
2—Similar prerogative formerly displayed in a used rites.
tsuc: 1—Call, that is, that which impels a hamat'sa to dance.
2—Eagle whistle.
Ti'mulidzlac: Man sent down west of Kwatsa in the beginning of time.
tsudu: Term, implying both wealth and good fortune, applied to a man able to give a memorial potlatch soon after the death of a relative.
tsyal-imaat: Presents given by a prospective bridegroom to his future father-in-law. [431] tsu: Good, adjective. [584]
tsuk: Mountain goat. [825] Ti'mdzlalo: Grown island.
tsuk: "All Right," cry used in a hamat'sa dance.
Tsilal-a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ti'yulbudzlac: One of the first men to settle at Hagaitsl in the beginning of time.
tsilulaxwu: Bringing down of a call by means of the rite of xwaqlat.
tsilulaxial: Presents given by the bride's relatives to the groom's when they come for house on the wedding day. [431]
[585]

The beneficial purposes include: making a child grow up to be a good dancer, industrious, a swift berry picker, or a strong man; curing long trouble; making the river crude where wanted; and two ways of stopping rain. The injurious purposes include: two ways of making a person grow up to be a thief, the causing of crookedness and quarrelsomeness and the three ways of causing death.

The materials and actions used include: sides of aspen leaves; a dead toad, used with hair, with a red color back face wiper, and with hair pieces of thimble berry shoots which were accidentally dropped while being eaten; sides of a yellow jacket's nest; a living raven with pilings; beaver paws, in two instances; a skin bracelet from a beaver's leading; a dead wood rat; a dead mouse; a grizzly bear's skin; a living owl squirrel with a bit of aspen fringe; setting fire to a wood-rat's house; and poking an ant hill.

To make a person a good dancer the sides of the burned leaves of the aspen or trembling poplar were said to be useful, but Jackson said this may have been a joke. The Bellacoola Indians say the leaves dance. They never say that they tremble. When a baby was born, if the parents talked about it and the father desired that the baby grow up to be a good dancer, the mother or father got the leaves, burned them and put the ashes on the baby's hands, knees and elbows. When talking of this Jackson held his hands with the finger tips up and moved them as the Bellacoola do in dancing. Both rich and poor were dancers.

A baby girl would grow up to be industrious, it was believed, if the warm flesh of a recently dead beaver were applied to her. The Bellacoola apparently observed the great industry of the beaver.

To make a baby girl grow up to be a fast berry-picking woman, the ring of skin from between two ribs around a beaver's leading was put on her wrist and was left on until it wore off.

To make a boy grow up to be a strong man, a skin of the grizzly bear, was thrown over him, generally by his father.

For pilings on the large, more permanent fans a simple rule, the patient experimented in something and some one recently mixed the fresh pilings with salmon eggs and put the mixture

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]